A remarkable dinner was lately given in Norwich, England, by a well-known temperance sheriff, George White, to celebrate the wedding of his daughter. Elegant invitations were issued to 1,100 of the aged poor of the city, and fully two-thirds of this number responded. The dinner was an elaborate one and served in good style by the principal citizens of the town. The oldest guest was ninety-six years of age, and there were several over ninety. True to his temperance principles, the only drinks furnished by the sheriff were milk, lemonade and coffee. Such thoughtful bounty is refreshing in these days of greed and gain.

More than 2,000 churches in England, including the Rev. Chas. H. Spurgeon's Tabernacle, use unfermented wine at the communion.

I gave alcohol in my practice for twenty years, and have now practiced without it for thirty years or more. I have not found a single patient injured by its disuse, or a constitution requiring it; indeed, to find either, although I am in my seventy-seventh year, I would walk fifty miles to see such an unnatural phenomenon.—John Higginbottom, F. R. S., F. R. C. S.

"What you tell me, missus, soun's monst'ous luminous, but when the politician splainifies it to me it appears spontaneous in the other direction," said an honest-hearted colored brother to Mrs. Sallie Chapin, who was trying to convince him that if prohibition didn't really prohibit the saloon men would not fight it so furiously.

Hark, the sound of many voices
Jubilant in gladest song,
And full many a heart rejoices
As the chorus floats along:
"Hail the Favorite Prescription."
How the happy voices blend,
"Wonderful beyond description—
Woman's best and truest friend."

Well may it be called woman's best friend, since it does for her what no other remedy has been able to do. It cures all those delicate derangements and weaknesses peculiar to females. Cures them, understand. Other preparations may afford temporary relief, but Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription effects a permanent cure. It is guaranteed to do this, or the money paid for it will be promptly refunded. It is the great remedy of the age.

The worst Nasal Catarrh, no matter of how long standing, is permanently cured by Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

The following statistics were collected by Mr. E. Payson Porter for use at the World's Sunday-school Convention, just held in London: Number of Sunday-schools in the United States, 101,824; scholars, 8,315,431; teachers, 1,100,101; total, 9,415,535. In Canada: Schools, 6,836; scholars, 467,292; teachers, 55,050; total, 522,342. New York City has 600 schools, 172,000 scholars, and 15,000 teachers.

"All at it all the time." All at what? Why, pushing the circulation of this paper into every family in the bounds of your work.

Prince Bismarck has persuaded the Pope to remain in Rome. We don't think the Pope ever seriously entertained the thought of removing to Spain. Rome is his proper place, and, notwithstanding his complaints, he knows it.

The World's Sunday-school Convention, lately held in London, was a grand meeting in every respect. Sunday-school workers from all parts of the world came together, and for three days conferred together upon the great work now carried on by the churches for the children. Every phase of the work was carefully scrutinized, and amendments and improvements suggested. On the Sunday question, which is now agitating the civilized world, the convention took this action, as reported in the London Daily News, of July 6:

The Rev. Dr. Hall (New York) submitted a memorial on the question of Sunday observance drawn up by the Executive Committee, and a copy of which they recommended should be sent to each of the crowned heads of Europe. The memorial states that the delegates to the convention have ample evidence that Sabbath-school work has made multitudes intelligent, self-respecting, diligent in duty and faithful to obligations, because the Scriptures teach them to fear God and to honor constituted authority. The delegates have also brought to them the evidence that this beneficent work is made difficult in many lands by the practical disregard of the divinely appointed day of rest, the rich in their pleasures and gain, and the poor in their necessities making the gathering together of the young for the purpose of religious instruction on that day difficult, if not impossible. Moved by these considerations they, with one accord, earnestly petitioned the various potentates addressed by them to, by their personal influence and by the constitutional power in their hands, secure for the day of weekly rest the place given it in that Decalogue which all Christian lands recognize.

In regard to temperance, the convention took this action:

On the motion of the chairman, a resolution was passed expressing the opinion "that every Sabbath-school should be in effect a temperance training-school, fitting the rising generation for active and aggressive efforts in this and every other department of Christian work," and trusting "that the time may speedily come when every officer, teacher and scholar in our Sunday-schools shall, by example and precept, practice and promote temperance; and then none shall follow the bad precedent of him who asked, 'Am I my brother's keeper?'" The meeting also adopted the following resolution—namely, "That we are in sympathy with those who are striving to protect the home from the encroachment of every form of vice, and who would make it the abode of temperance and piety and personal purity."

We hope to see the proceedings of this great meeting published in full. The place and time of holding the next convention was left to a General Committee to be appointed.

Pulpit Language.

Our theory is, that the Holy Spirit calls preachers to the office of the ministry, and does his part in qualifying everyone whom he calls for the work of that office. The great business of the preacher is to preach, to proclaim the gospel of the grace of God. The pulpit is the place where he stands to make this public proclamation. The office and work of the Holy Spirit in regard to the preacher whom he has called is, first, to instruct him what the gospel is; to give him clear views of the meaning of the facts of redemption and the doctrines of revelation. When speaking of the coming of the Spirit, our Lord said to his disciples: "He will guide you into all truth;" "He shall receive of mine and shall shew it unto you." As the Holy Spirit is infinite, and his knowledge unbounded, the source of truth is unfailing. It is a perpetual fountain, sending forth always the limpid streams of gospel fact and information. The quality of what the Spirit teaches can neither be disputed nor disparaged, for "he is the Spirit of Truth."

But the truth which the Spirit imparts to the preacher can be communicated to others only by language. Truth can be proclaimed only in words. The preacher can not carry it to the minds of men, nor impress it upon their consciences, in any other way than by a language that is understood both by himself and his hearer. Of course, the object of preaching is to get the truth into the minds and upon the consciences of people. Hence another work of the Spirit, as regards the preacher, is to teach him how to proclaim the gospel to the best advantage. Then this question arises: Does the Holy Spirit care anything about the language in which his truth is proclaimed? We believe this to be a pertinent inquiry just at this time. The Spirit not only gives clear views of truth, as we learn from the Savior's words to his disciples, but we learn from Paul's letter to the Corinthians that he will assist the preacher in the choice of words in which to clothe that truth, when he is permitted to do so. Writing to the church at Corinth of the grand things of the gospel, Paul uses these words: "Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth." If he taught Paul in this matter of language, it shows that he does care something about the words a preacher shall use when he stands up to proclaim the gospel! And if he taught Paul in this important matter, will he not teach every preacher who is teachable? The plain inference from Paul's words is, that the Spirit will supervise the choice of language, when his supervisory work is sought by the preacher.

Now, after reading the Scriptures and learning from them the character of the Holy Spirit, we can come to no other conclusion than that he is not only the Spirit of Truth, but the Spirit of refinement. We can not conceive of the Spirit of God being unrefined. Indeed, there is no rule by which we can arrive at a clear conception of the refinement of the mind of the Spirit. It is too high for our dull and sluggish souls to reach. Then this question comes: Will the Spirit, whose essence is the intensest refinement, teach preachers to use words that are lacking in refinement to proclaim the truths of a pure gospel? We unhesitatingly say, No! We don't believe the Spirit of God ever made choice of an unrefined word or a slang phrase and taught it to a preacher to proclaim the gospel in! We believe that every word or phrase of that sort in the pulpit grieves the Spirit, and, for that reason, weakens the preacher's power. We believe if the habit of using such language is persisted in, the Holy Spirit will leave that preacher to the miserable results of his folly! Brother, beware!

The Columbus District Conference.

This body held its annual session in West Point, Miss. There was a larger attendance than we have seen in any of the Conferences which we have attended, except one. We arrived Friday morning in time for the opening services, and found the business well under way and Bishop Galloway in the chair. The sessions of the previous day had been held under the guidance of the presiding elder, Dr. Sullivan, who had started the Conference to work in an earnest manner.

As the brethren, one after another, made report of the condition and work of their various charges, we listened with unabated interest. The different lines of church work were carefully inquired into, and the searching questions of the Bishop and brethren in regard to methods and results of work brought to light many interesting statements and facts. We are satisfied that this searching process, though in some cases unpleasant, will, in most cases, react for good in the development of larger influences along the lines of progress. The Lord said he would "search Jerusalem with candles," and when the Bishop subjects a pastor and his work to the same illuminating process for the purpose of disclosing the real state of the case, we may expect to see good results. And, besides, this questioning often brings up facts that otherwise would have been overlooked, and thus shows to all present things of importance which would have remained unseen.

The reports from some circuits and stations were exceedingly good, showing a condition of things which reflected great credit upon pastor and people. Others were not so good. After listening carefully to all the reports, and comparing and balancing matters as well as we could, we come to the conclusion that in the Columbus district the spiritual condition of our church is fair, with an upward tendency. In a few places there are some things which ought not to be, as, for instance, dealing in the Louisiana Lottery. Perhaps, if the preachers would give their people more information in regard to the utter iniquity of this business, their members would refrain from patronizing this mammoth gambling association. The Sunday-school work is moving forward hopefully. The finances seemed to be very much behind, but there is promise of good crops; and if that promise is fulfilled, the brethren will be generally paid, and bring up their Conference collections to the annual convocation. The condition of churches in some circuits is to be deplored, but a general movement is being made to improve the old houses and to build new ones where they are needed. Bishop Galloway took occasion several times to call the attention of the pastors to the fact that the condition of the house of worship is a pretty fair expression of a people's piety; and we are sure that his exhortations on this line will result in a rehabilitation of many churches.

Friday night the educational meeting was held in the interest of the new college. The Bishop made an elaborate address of great power, and raised a collection of $1,350 for endowment. This makes about $22,000 which he has raised for this purpose. The North Mississippi Methodists are enthusiastic over the good prospects of their college, and a spirit of generous rivalry is being generated between the towns as to which one will secure the location. Already subscriptions are being taken in several places to ascertain how much can be raised as a bonus to secure it. No one seems to have any doubt as to the ultimate success of the enterprise. The delegates to the Annual Conference are, H. W. Foote, J. W. Pitman, B. P. Patterson and J. T. Murrah.

We left West point, Saturday evening, and ran down to Kosciusko with Bro. Bachman to spend the Sabbath with Bro. H. R. Tucker and his people. We had a pleasant and profitable day, preaching twice and making an address to the Sunday-school. Bro. Boswell, the superintendent, has one of the largest and best-organized schools we have seen in a long time, and is doing a fine work in the training of our young people there for usefulness in the church. Our home while there was with the family of Dr. Scarborough, whose simple, generous Christian hospitality was greatly appreciated and enjoyed.

There are two things about Kosciusko which distinguish it above every other town in Mississippi. It is the geographical center of the State. It is the birth-place of Bishop Galloway. If it secures the location of the new college, there will be three things to render it notable.

A Trip to the Texas Chautauqua.

MR. EDITOR: Several months since, I accepted an invitation to lecture before the Texas Chautauqua, at San Marcos. Leaving home on Thursday morning, July 11, I spent Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Seashore Camp Meeting. Leaving the camp ground Monday morning, at four o'clock, I arrived at San Marcos, Tuesday afternoon, at five o'clock. I remained two days, leaving Friday morning, and reaching home Saturday evening. My stay was quite a pleasant one.

As I gave a somewhat full description of the encampment and of San Marcos Lake and river on the occasion of my previous visit, two years ago, it is needless that I should do so now. The natural advantages of the place as the site of a summer encampment are certainly unsurpassed. This mountain-girdled lakelet—with its waters of crystalline transparency, and its exuberance of vines, mosses, ferns, grasses and other forms of aquatic vegetation—forms in itself an attraction unique and unapproachable. The salubrity of the mountain atmosphere and the enchanting beauty of the surrounding scenery form additional attractions.

As my stay was short, and as I was myself on the rostrum twice, I had very little opportunity to reap profit from the literary exercises. I heard two lectures from Rev. E. S. Smith, D. D., of Huntsville, Texas. The subject of the first was "Ignatius Loyola." It was both interesting and instructive. The second was "Robert Elsmere." This was very fine. Condensed and put into proper shape, it would make a timely and excellent article for our Review. I also heard a very instructive lecture, on "Spartan History," from Rev. Mr. Galbreath, an Episcopal clergyman. On "Chautauqua Night" there was the annual camp-fire, with its usual accompaniments of music, recitations and impromptu speeches. The Vincent of this Chautauqua is, as heretofore, Rev. H. M. Dubose. Although he now resides at Los Angeles, Cal., two thousand miles away, he still supervises the whole concern, and spends four weeks on the grounds. It will be interesting to Bro. Dubose's many friends in Mississippi to know that he will appear before the public soon in a new role—that of authorship. He will issue in a few weeks, from our Publishing House, an epic poem, which has been in process of construction for years. I predict that it will give him undying fame, and that it will be but the beginning of a literary career of remarkable brilliancy. Dubose is a poet by nature, but he is not one of those poets who rely upon natural gifts alone. He has cultivated his gifts. He has read almost everything that the world has ever produced in the shape of poetry and imaginative literature; and what he reads sticks to his memory "like feathers to a tar barrel." Long live our Mississippi poet!

W. C. BLACK.

JACKSON, Mississippi.

Educational Revival.

This scribe, as a veteran educator, rejoices exceedingly in the educational revival now going on in Mississippi and Louisiana. Bro. Millsaps, with his $50,000, and Bro. James, with his $25,000, and others with offerings acceptable unto God, are doing themselves an honor and blessing the church and the race. The Lord loveth the cheerful giver, whether he be a merchant prince, or whether she be a lone widow in penury and grief. Oft the gift seems small in human eyes, but great in the estimation of the great Head of the church, et vice versa. The tiny violet and the gaudy sunflower—who can tell their relative value? God is the maker of each. The larger gifts and the smaller offerings are in place, and alike acceptable to him who causeth one star to differ from another. It is accepted according to what a man hath, and not according to what he hath not.

The outlook for Centenary and for the new college is most cheering. Keep the ball moving. Let not little differences mar the success of the enterprises. The coming centuries will review the work ye are now doing. Future generations shall call you blessed.

It should be with your people now as it was with the children of Israel in the wilderness, when asked to contribute means for the erection of the tabernacle. They offered willingly. Never before had they had the opportunity; never again would they have the chance. They were the ones to do a work, to bless Israel for centuries, and to honor God for all time to come. Nobly did they respond to the call. The Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi now have a grand crisis thrust upon them. They are encompassed about with a cloud of witnesses—the living church looks on; the departed worthies on high are looking on; future ages will review what is being done; the ever-living God is looking on. O ye Methodists of Mississippi and Louisiana! rise up, and nobly respond to the demands of the occasion! The season, slighted once, never returns.

One of the speakers in the World's Sunday-school Convention in London said this: "They had in the city of Toronto, Canada, 200,000 inhabitants, and not a street-car wheel turns on a Sabbath day, not an omnibus starts and not a drinking house is open." Why not that state of things in our country?

Notes.

A pastor in Mississippi writes as follows: "I have just learned how to get subscribers to the ADVOCATE. After the sermon, walk down among the people, talk the paper up and call on everyone by name and urge them to take the paper." As the result of one such effort the brother sent eleven new names. "Go thou, and do likewise."

Several charges in the Columbus district, North Mississippi Conference, were represented at the late District Conference as being well-to-do in a monetary point of view, and yet they have no houses for their preachers and their churches are in a dilapidated condition. There must be something the matter with the religion of those charges. A genuine religion keeps up the material interests of the charge.

A writer in the Pacific Methodist says:

The controversial age of the church is passing away. Occasionally, however, an old-timer sounds the bugle for a charge. More doctrine, and less of the "Come-to-Jesus-just-as-you-are" style, would be better for the church. The rose-water, namby-pamby sermonettes of certain pulpiteers are weakening the faith of Christendom. The strong, rugged preaching of the fathers is in demand everywhere.

Be sure to read Dr. Brunner's exhortation under the caption of "Educational Revival." The opportunity—yea, the privilege—to do a work for the future which will command the respect and admiration of the coming ages is now thrust upon the Methodists of Mississippi and Louisiana, and God and the church expect every man and woman to come up to the full measure of ability in giving and praying. Let the money be poured out upon the two colleges, and let prayers go up continually for complete success.

The New York Advocate has this about one of our pet institutions:

There are rumors that the Louisiana Lottery scheme is to be suppressed. It is high time. The business has been a disgrace to the State and a curse to the country for many years. Instead of dying out it has grown to enormous proportions. A few years ago the company published only 100,000 copies of the lists of monthly drawings, now 1,000,000 copies are published. If any imagine that the victims of this institution are confined to Louisiana they are mistaken. There is scarcely a village in the land from which money does not pour into it. How long will the country endure it?

Canon Wilberforce says: "I am of opinion that a large conference of persons interested in national purification should be called by responsible leaders of religious thought to consider what gambling is, and that philanthropists should not fight windmills. No crusade against a vice can be successful till your axioms and postulates are clear." Upon which the London Methodist Times remarks: "That is a practical suggestion. It is no use beating the air. Definite and united action should be taken, for gambling is on the increase. It is a gigantic curse." It has invaded all forms of life in our country and is clearly on the increase.

We have had occasion frequently to condemn in these columns the fashionable novel of the day. "It is evil, only evil, and that continually." The evil seems to be growing to larger proportion. Ponder this sentence from Maurice Thompson in the Independent, of July 18:

Looking over American criticism for a few years past, it is startling to note that of the novels approved by it as masterpieces, every one has been immoral in its bearing, and all those most insistently praised have been novels whose central attraction was illicit love. One Spanish novel, one Portuguese novel and two Russian novels have led the procession, each with its burden of guilty passion depicted so minutely that no detail of unholy pining and desire was wanting, and each found applause and welcome from even religious (Christian?) journals, whose columns would have been defiled forever if those same novels had been printed therein.

This story is told of Dr. Phillips Brooks:

Last winter he observed waiting upon his ministry with considerable regularity three Harvard young men, whom he took to be working men. He at once became interested in them and determined upon ascertaining their names, residence and occupation, and forming their acquaintance. Learning their whereabouts, he one day made a call upon them. Climbing several flights of stairs he reached their lodging-place. He knocked at the door and was admitted. The students wore in their shirt sleeves, and were somewhat embarrassed at being found in such a plight by one whom they so much respected on account of his talents and position in the community and in the church. The doctor greeted them cordially, shaking hands with them, and at once made himself at home with them. With a smile he remarked, "Well, boys, it's a little warm here. I think, if you will let me, I will take off my coat." He did so, and passed a pleasant time with them in a free, familiar way. Did he lose anything by his condescension? Will those youths ever forget that hour? Will not the impression made be life-controlling? The pastor who can adapt himself to each arising circumstance in pastoral life in a Christ-spirit and manner will find a way to the youthful mind and heart, win souls to Christ and widen his influence.

Personal and Otherwise.

Our Sundsy-school literature for August is on hand. We thank the agent for his promptness. We like this literature, and recommend it not only to Methodists, bnt to other religious bodies.

The brethren will oblige us by directing business letters to the publisher. The editor has nothing to do with the business department of the ADVOCATE.

We are indebted to George F. Wharton, 5 Carondelet street, for a copy of Le Franco-Louisianais, illnstrated, published nnder the anspices of the Centennial Committee, July 14, 1889.

We have received the catalogue of Central College, Sulphur Springs, Texas, for 1889-90.

In the late World's Sunday-school Convention, in London, it was stated that the number of children in the Sunday-schools of Great Britain was 6,695,399, a number exceeding the number attending day-schools by about one million.

We are indebted to George F. Wharton, ol Carondelet street, for the July number of the North American Review. It has a fine table of contents.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. J. W. Hennoll writes from Holly Springs, Miss.: "At ten o'clock P. M., on July 18, the Rev. George S. Inge surrendered his charge at Holly Springs, Miss., to take charge of one of the Methodist Episcopal Churches in Portland, Maine. At olght o'clock, the next morning, I telegraphed the facts to Bishop Galloway, and at ten o'clock A. M., on July 19, the vacancy was filled by J. A. Randolph, of South Greenville and Lake Lee."

—Rev. J. S. Parker, writing from Newton station, Miss., July 24, 1889, says: "We have just closed one of the best revival meetings in the town ol Newton that it has been my privilege to witness in some time. Sinners were converted and backsliders reclaimed, and the church greatly blessed. I havo received into the church to date thirty members on my work. Rev. Robert Selby, with his young and charming bride, was with us a few days at the beginning, and Bro. I. L. Peebles did faithful work the last few days of the meeting. The people here are very kind and good to the pastor and his family. The assessments are all up in full to date. The decks are cleared. Now we are ready for a grand, sweeping revival. We have six prayer meetings, with a praying capacity of sixty. In twelve months more we expect to have one of the strongest works in East Mississippt."

—Miss Annie Linfield, writes from Crystal Springs, Miss.: "Having received quite a number of inquiries from friends where they could procure a good photograph of Miss Clara Chrisman, I desire to inform her many friends and sisters in the missionary work that I have a supply on hand at thirty-five cents apiece. This picture is fine; was taken just a week before her departure; and she has on the badge furnished the delegates to our annual meeting by the Natchez ladies. Address Miss Annie Linfield, Crystal Springs, Miss."

—Rev. H. P. Lewis writes from Benton, Miss., July 24: "Rev. Jo. J. Jones began preaching here last Sunday, the twenty-first instant. He has been with us three days, preaching three times a day to immense crowds of people, who take special pains to hear all he says. He is a power in the pulpit. Hundreds of hearts are being touched. Scores and scorcs of Christian people aro being quickened into action. Old and young, rich and poor, black and white alike, take deep interest in the services. We have seating capacity for 2,500, and we expect to see every seat occuplod before the meeting closes. The Christian people are just beginning to wake up and go to work. Pray for us. God bless you!"

—Rev. A. F. Watkins writes from Brookhaven, Miss., July 25, 1889: "Please announce to your readers that, on the evening of the twonty-third instant, the Methodists of Winona subscribed over $2,000 to the endowment fund of the Mississippi Methodist College, which amount completes the first $25,000 of the $50,000 to be raised by the Methodists of the State. The canvass is progressing very encouragingly, a vigorous and aggressive plan of action has been adopted, and we expect by the time of the meeting of our Conferences, next December, to make a report that will show that Mississippi Methodists appreciate their opportunities and their duties, and that Mississippi Methodism has entered upon an era of usefulness and prosperity never known in its past history."

—Rev. John A. Miller writes from Areadia, La., July 24: "My mother died, on July 22, in great peace; was buried here on the twenty-third, at three o'clock P. M. We ought to rejoice that her sufferings are over. Pray for us."

—Rev. F. M. Keen writes from Amite City, La.: "We are moving along nicely. Finances are pretty well up. It would have done you good to have been at one of my class meetings a few days ago. Sixty-odd present, and we had a good old-fashioned Methodist time, and a brother writes me the interest has not abated. Our people are taking kindly to these class meetings. A brother, whose work adjoins mine, informs me that he has the same state of affairs in his charge. May the Lord hasten the time when the people called Methodists will again realize the power of class meetings!"

—Rev. J. A. B. Jones writes from Port Gibson, Miss.: "I have just received notice from office of the general passenger agent of the Mississippi Valley Route, that trains will stop at Sam Jones Camp Ground, near Gloster, Miss., and special rates will be given from August 5. This is for the accommodation of families wishing to move to camp ground a few days before the meeting begins, to build or repair cottages, and otherwise improve their lots, enjoy the health-giving waters and the inspiring scenery."

—Rev. James E. Riddle writes as follows: "I write you of the death of Bro. Joseph Gorton, which occurred yesterday, July 23, at about 4:05 P. M. The funeral service took place at the church this morning at eleven o'clock, and he will be laid to rest in the cemetery at Natchez, Miss., to-morrow, where his loved ones sleep. As you knew his holy life, it is not necessary for me to tell you he was fully prepared to go. He really wished to go, and several mornings towards the last would ask if he might hope to pass away that day. He talked to us a great deal about heaven; spoke of it as he did of other things, and was so anxious to hear the Master say, 'Come.' We all shall miss him so much; but since we know he is at home and at rest, we would not wish him back. Let the many brethren of our Conference who knew him hear of his glorious and triumphant death. His sufferings were very great; but he possessed wonderful faith and patience, which increased unto the last."

—Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard writes: "We have had fine seasons throughout this region. Crops are splendid, and, best of all, we are having a glorious meeting at Arizona. I am holding out better than I expected I could. God bless you!"

From the Professor of English in Vanderbilt University:

NASHVILLE, TENN., June 22, 1889.

For four or five years I have every year spent, at least, one day in the class-room of Messrs. Wall and Mooney's School. I have questioned their classes, and heard them recite in English, Mathematics, German, Greek and Latin; and I do not hesitate to call their work excellent. Better trained pupils it would be hard to find. The moral culture is equally good.

Household.

THE DEAR LITTLE WIFE AT HOME.

The little wife at home, John,
With ever so much to do;
Stitches to set, and babies to pet,
And so many thoughts of you:
The beautiful household fairy
Filling your heart with light:
Whatever you meet to-day, John,
Go cheerily home to-night.

For though you are worn and weary,
You needn't be cross or curt:
There are words like darts to gentle hearts,
There are looks that wound and hurt.
With the key in the latch at home, John,
Drop the troubles out of sight;
To the little wife who is waiting,
Go cheerily home to-night.

"Kissing Mother."

A father, talking to his careless daughter, said:

"I want to speak to you of your mother. It may be that you have noticed a careworn look upon her face lately. Of course, it has not been brought there by any act of yours, still it is your duty to chase it away. I want you to get up to-morrow morning and get breakfast; and when your mother comes and begins to express her surprise, go right up to her and kiss her on the mouth. You can't imagine how it will brighten her dear face.

"Besides, you owe her a kiss or two. Away back, when you were a little girl, she kissed you when no one else was tempted by your fever-tainted breath and swollen face. You were not as attractive then as you are now. And through those years of childish sunshine and shadows, she was always ready to cure, by the magic of a mother's kiss, the little, dirty, chubby hands, whenever they were injured in those first skirmishes with the rough old world.

"And then the midnight kisses with which she routed so many bad dreams, as she leaned above your restless pillow, have all been on interest these long, long years.

"Of course, she is not so pretty and kissable as you are: but if you had done your share of work during the last ten years, the contrast would not be so marked.

"Her face has more wrinkles than yours, and yet, if you were sick, that face would appear far more beautiful than an angel's as it hovered over you, watching every opportunity to minister to your comfort, and every one of those wrinkles would seem to be bright wavelets of sunshine chasing each other over the dear face.

"She will leave you one of these days. These burdens, if not lifted from her shoulders, will break her down. Those rough, hard hands, that have done so many necessary things for you, will be crossed upon her lifeless breast.

"Those neglected lips that gave you your first baby kiss will be forever closed, and those sad, tired eyes will have opened in eternity, and then you will appreciate your mother; but it will be too late."—Eli Perkins.

QUARRELS.—Big rivers and big quarrels arise from a flowing together of many little streams, each of which taken separately might be diverted into another channel, but altogether make a resistless flood. "Take care of the pennies, and the pounds will take care of themselves." Take care of the little grievances, and the big ones will not come. Parents have many opportunities of teaching their children, both by precept and example, how to differ from others peaceably, how to adjust clashing inclinations, how to wear the laurel of the victor without vain-glory, and to pass under the yoke without degradation.

Differences will arise between children as they will among grown folks. It is well that they do. Children need to learn how to quarrel without losing their tempers, without breaking friendship, without being embittered by defeat or over-elated by victory, without taking unfair advantage, without feeling that might makes right, without ignoring the "inalienable rights" of their antagonists. They need to learn to stand for themselves, to think for themselves within limits, and correct their thinkings by reference to right standards of thought and action. Aggressive children need toning down, timid and retiring children need toning up. The parent has an opportunity in the quarrels his children may have to lay down principles of action and policy that will be of immense service when their social and civil quarrels shall be of moment. —Exchange.

Every day is full of a most impressive experience.—F. W. Robertson.

Our Young People.

THE BOOTS OF A HOUSEHOLD.
(After Mrs. Hemans.)

BY LAURA E. RICHARDS.

They came in beauty, side by side,
They filled our home with noise;
And now they're trotting far and wide,
On feet of girls and boys.

The self-same shoe-maker did bend
O'er every heel and toe
He shaped their upper leathers fair;
Where are those leathers now?

One pair is kicking 'gainst the beuch,
The patient beuch at school,
And one is wading through the mud,
And splashing in the pool.

"The sea, the blue, lone sea," hath one,
(He left it on the beach—
A merry wave came dancing up,
And bore it out of reach).

One sleeps where depths of slimy bog
Are glossed with grasses o'er.
One hasty plunge—it loosed its hold,
And sank, to rise no more.

One pair—aha! I see them now,
And know them past all doubt,
For through each leather gaping wide
A rosy toe peeps out.

And partied thus, old, dusty, torn,
They travel far and wide,
Who in the shop, in shining rows,
Sat lately side by side.

And thus they frolic, frolic there,
And thus they caper here,
But great and small, and torn and all,
To mother's heart are dear.
N. B.—Also to father's purse.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl ten years old, and, as I have never written to your excellent paper but once, and seeing it found its way to the waste-basket, I thought I would write once more, trusting that this one will not find its way there. I never see a letter from here, so I will write one. Our pastor is Bro. P. Howard, and I like him very much. We have a Sabbath-school every Sabbath, and I attend every Sunday when health and weather will permit. Our superintendent is Dr. C. W. Rheams, and my teacher is Miss Lillie Rheams, and I like them very much. I attend school at Norvilla Collegiate Institute, and I study geography, history, grammar, spelling, fifth reader, mathematics and writing, and take music lessons; but our school is out now, as we have vacation. Mr. Editor, while attending Conference at Amite City, in May last, papa, mamma and I had the pleasure of dining with you at dear Aunt Elliss' on Sunday. There I formed your acquaintance, and was very much pleased with you; therefore, I trust you will publish this letter for me, as I want to surprise my Aunt Anna Pipkin. Well, Mr. Editor, for fear of taking up too much room in your valuable paper, I will close by asking the little cousins a question: Where in the Bible is the word "money" found?

From your little friend,

BETTIE PIPKIN.

GREENSBURG, Louisiana.

(The editor is glad to hear that Miss Bettie was pleased with him, and hopes to see her again.—ED.)

MR. EDITOR: This is my first letter to the paper. It is vacation, and I thought I would write a short letter. I have more age than size, but I will be in time for our college for boys in Mississippi. We have a good Sunday-school, and I go every Sunday. My papa is the pastor, and has been taking your paper for years. It is a welcome visitor at our home. I want to ask my little friends where and how often "Immanuel" is found in the Bible; to whom it refers, and what it means? I must close, hoping that my letter will not reach the waste-basket.

Yours sincerely,

K. A. LAGRONE.

Asking Help of Friends.

Many noble services have been done for art by artists in giving tuition to those who have talents, but no money. Especially are musical people so large-hearted that they are prodigal of favors to the deserving and gifted poor, and the benevolent wealthy are constantly placing funds at the disposal of those who long for education.

Such high-minded generosity has become so common that the youth who possesses even one talent has grown into a possibly unconscious, but certainly brazen, expectation of finding his path made smooth in consequence.

A girl of respectable social standing, who had undertaken service as a waiter at a popular summer resort, was discovered to have a sweet and melodious voice. Complimentary remarks reached her, from time to time, from the boarders who chanced to hear her singing, and she speedily became animated by the idea that she was an embryo Patti or Nillson.

No music-loving millionaire asked for the privilege of paying for the training of her voice, and in the fall she went to town. Finding some of the wealthiest people who had patronized the hotel, she coolly asked them to make up a purse which would enable her to study music.

After a celebrated teacher had tried her voice, however, even the philanthropic decided that they must refuse so uncertain an investment, and the girl probably feels herself badly used by fate, to this day.

Now, there is no reason why the divinely gifted should feel a cheap pride in refusing aid in a desirable career. There was genuine common sense in the remark once made by a nobly benevolent woman to a poor artist:

"Let us who have no brains to mention see that you who have are given the opportunity to use them!"

But it is only honest in the recipients of such bounty to be perfectly sure that they have the divine fire. An old farmer once said to an aspiring young man, who apparently thought chiefly of bettering his social position by entering the ministry:

"The apostles were commanded to go forth and preach the gospel to all men, but all men are not called to preach the gospel."

When a young man is convinced that he has that within him which will recompense the world in full measure for the benefits he receives, he may well accept them, but not until he has proved, for his own satisfaction, that he can not accomplish his life-work unaided.—Youth's Companion.

It is related of Gen. Clinton B. Fisk that his childhood was spent in a new part of the west, where he had but small opportunities for school or for getting books. But the love for books was born in him, and as soon as he could read he began to hunger for them. He was not master of his time, which belonged to the farmer for whom he worked; but he managed to have a library of his own, well selected and well shelved—a mutilated copy of Shakespeare, Pilgrim's Progress, Paradise Lost, and Robinson Crusoe. What a list! If he had searched all the bookstores he could hardly have done better. Think of a boy self-educated on Bunyan and Milton, with Shakespeare and Crusoe for variety! His bookcase was made by himself out of a shoe box, and this choice boy's library was housed in the woodshed. He learned his books almost by heart, and then he wanted a Latin grammar; and to get the money for it, he sold a trained coon to a showman, and walked twelve miles and back to buy the book.

Warm weather often causes extreme tired feeling and debility, and in the weakened condition of the system, diseases arising from impure blood are liable to appear. To gain strength, to overcome disease, and to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, take Hood's Sarsaparilla.

One secret act of self-denial, one sacrifice of inclination to duty, is worth all the mere good thoughts, warm feelings, passionate prayers in which idle people indulge themselves.—J. H. Newman.

AND most powerful alterative is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Young and old are alike benefited by its use. For the eruptive diseases peculiar to children nothing else is so effective as this medicine, while its agreeable flavor makes it easy to administer.

"My little boy had large scrofulous ulcers on his neck and throat from which he suffered terribly. Two physicians attended him, but he grew continually worse under their care, and everybody expected he would die. I had heard of the remarkable cures effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and decided to have my boy try it. Shortly after he began to take this medicine, the ulcers commenced healing, and, after using several bottles, he was entirely cured. He is now as healthy and strong as any boy of his age."—William F. Dougherty, Hampton, Va.

"In May last, my youngest child, fourteen months old, began to have sores gather on its head and body. We applied various simple remedies without avail. The sores increased in number and discharged copiously. A physician was called, but the sores continued to multiply until in a few months they nearly covered the child's head and body. At last we began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In a few days a marked change for the better was manifest. The sores assumed a more healthy condition, the discharges were gradually diminished, and finally ceased altogether. The child is livelier, its skin is fresher, and its appetite better than we have observed for months."—Frank M. Griffin, Long Point, Texas.

"The formula of Ayer's Sarsaparilla presents, for chronic diseases of almost every kind, the best remedy known to the medical world."—D. M. Wilson, M. D., Wiggs, Arkansas.

MASON & HAMLIN

The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture of these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.

Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequaled excellence of their ORGANS the fact that all of the $22 TO $900. great World's Fair awards since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with the product of makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. One hundred styles from $22 to $900 or more. Illustrated catalogues free.

Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos, that they are superior to all others. They recognize the PIANOS high excellence achieved GRAND & UPRIGHT by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1882, and now known as the "MASON & HAMLIN PIANO STRINGER," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune, and other important advantages.

A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians, and tuners, sent, together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant. Pianos and organs sold for cash or easy payments; also rented.

BOULLEMET—ELIZABETH WATKINS was born in Union county, Penn., April 3, 1822, and died in the city of New Orleans, May 16, 1889. She was married to Stephen Boullemet, May 17, 1838, and survived him a number of years. Her husband was a faithful member of the Carondelet Street Methodist Church, and their lives flowed on harmoniously and happily together.

The subject of this sketch was religious from her girlhoood. Doubtless, it would have been difficult for her to say when she first felt the love of God in her heart. Lydia-like, her soul opened to receive the grace and love of the Savior. She joined the Poydras Street Methodist Church under the blessed ministry of that saint, Rev. Elijah Steele. This was in 1811. From that day she has never swerved in her love and loyalty to God. Quiet, retiring, even shrinking in her disposition, she found that Jesus had a place at his feet for all such natures and at his feet she obtained the one thing needful that was never taken from her. As a Christian friend, she was properly valued by a number that knew her well, and they lament her to-day. As a Christian mother, quiet, gentle, loving, full of tender counsel and sympathy, her price was above rubies, and her household, from the oldest to the youngest, rise up to call her blessed. She was one of those Christian characters in whose presence you feel rested. What a benediction to the home is such a woman! For the last few years, through sorrow and sickness, the circle of her daily walk and church duties gradually contracted and lessened. First, the church pew was vacant; then various rooms in her own home saw her no more; then her own bedchamber became too large, and, then, finally, the active life came to a pause and rest upon the sick-bed, from which Christ took her unto the skies.

For the last twelve months her sufferings were extreme; but she was always gentle, patient and resigned. She had but one fear, and that was in connection with the parting struggle between soul and body. She shrank at the thought of physical dissolution. But when that moment came, behold! instead of pain and fear, great peace and great victory. She was conscious to the last. Surrounded with a family group remarkable for their devotion; cheered by a visit from an old-time pastor, Dr. Walker; upheld by the presence of two lifelong Christian friends, with whom she had walked to the house of God in company for nearly a half-century, she quietly and peacefully entered the valley of the shadow of death. It proved only to be a shadow. The Book says, "Unto the upright there ariseth light in the darkness." So it was with her. At the very termination of life's journey Christ seemed to let his unveiled loveliness flash upon her soul, and she, with her last powers of mind and body, uttered the words, "Glory! glory!" It was a blessed use of the last strength. It was a good word with which to leave the world, and it was a good word with which to enter heaven. In a little while "she was not—for God took her." B. CARRADINE.

MILLSAPS—Died, at her home, near Hermanville, Miss., July 3, 1889, Mrs. J. D. MILLSAPS, wife of J. D. Millsaps, aged twenty-three years. Again the hearts of all who knew this sweet angel spirit are bowed down in sadness. How hard it is to realize that one whom every one knew, only to love, is no longer with us on earth. 'Tis too true that "death loves a shining mark." Oh, how happy must the angels in heaven have felt when they saw one so kind, so loving and so true coming to dwell with them; and yet, oh, how hard it was to have to part with her here on earth, where we'll never hear her kind, sweet voice again! Her angel soul is now watching from heaven on us, and longing to meet those dear loved ones left behind. To the crushed and broken-hearted husband and the sad hereft brother we tender our heartfelt sympathies, and may God arm them with Christian resignation to bear this burden of sorrow, and may they be able to live and die as their wife and sister has! She is not dead—oh, no! One so good and gentle as she never dies; she's only asleep in Jesus. God loved her too much to keep her here, where there's only trouble and sorrow. Farewell, dear, gentle friend, only for a few short years, and we will meet you in the "sweet by-and-by," where no death can break our hearts in sad, sad separation.

A FRIEND.

GUNBY—Another prince in Israel has fallen asleep in Jesus. Bro. GEORGE GUNBY was born in Columbia county, Ga., January 7, 1801, and died at his residence, near Downsville, Union parish, La., February 12, 1889, aged eighty-eight years, one month, and five days. He joined the Methodist Church at an early age, and was converted under a sermon preached by Bishop Andrews from the text, "But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty and continueth therein, he, being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work; this man shall be blessed in his deed." And he ever lived up to the teachings of that text, and showed, by his upright walk and godly conversation, that there is a divine reality in religion. He was not one of those who profess to know God with their lips while their heart is far from him. One of his favorite mottoes was religion; but a vain pretense of honesty he banished hence. His was a checkered life; he had many losses, disappointments and trials, but he bore them all with Christian fortitude and patience, and was ever ready to return thanksgiving and praise unto God for his wonderful goodness and mercies towards him. He never grew tired of life, nor murmured at suffering and the infirmities of age. He feared not death, and serenely expected a happy existence in a better and fairer land than earth. His mental faculties never decayed or became dim. He was not melancholy or despondent, but kept his spirits bright and cheerful. He was a staunch Methodist and was always ready to defend the doctrines of the Methodist Church, for he believed them to be rooted and founded upon the Bible. He thought it was the duty of every member of the church to aid in the support of the ministry; and while he was an active steward, and was on a committee to assess the members, he was in favor of assessing every one something; and said if they could not pay it, if they would do a day's work or knit a pair of socks for him, he would pay for them. He thought it was as much their duty to pay as to pray, and insisted that the church ought to deal with all members who persistently refused to aid in her support. He was a strict observer of the Sabbath, and when moving from Georgia to Louisiana with his family, by private conveyance, they always remained where they arrived Saturday evening until Monday morning, and had family prayers under their tent every night. He was an enthusiastic defender of the temperance cause, and believed that it was absolutely necessary to refrain from touching, tasting or handling the unholy thing, which biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder. So much was he opposed to even tasting whisky that when his faithful physician, who had tried all other means to impart strength unto his weak and worn-out frame, suggested that whisky might benefit him, he was unwilling to take it. He often said that he knew many persons in his early life who, possessing brilliant minds, and giving promise of a useful and happy life, commenced being moderate drinkers, and continued until they drowned themselves, so to speak, in a pool of alcohol, and finally filled a drunkard's grave. He was a Christian philosopher, and, while his family mourn his loss and miss his kind protection and fatherly care and affection and able counsel, yet they mourn not as those who have no hope, but confidently look forward to a happy reunion in a fairer world than this. He was a credit to human nature. The example of his sincere piety and upright and virtuous life is worth more to the church and the world than all its gold and silver.

GREY—The church has lost one of its earnest workers and heaven has gained an unfading star. This noble woman, the wife of James Grey, was born in Lawrence county, Miss., January 11, 1857, and lived here in the service of her God until July 8, 1889, when God saw fit to take her from the trouble and trials of this life and place her amidst the angel band in glory. Sister Grey had suffered a long time of heart disease, until the morning of July 8, when she heard the Son of God coming, in all his glory, to bear her pure spirit away to its Maker, and in the arms of Jesus she fell asleep, and awoke at Jehovah's feet. Her last words to her devoted husband and six affectionate children were, "I am not afraid to die." It seemed as if death to her had no sting; the grave, no victory. May God comfort the husband and children, and, at the last day, bring them all to an eternal life in heaven! And may sweet be the rest of our departed sister; and we would say, Farewell, Sister Grey; no more will your bright face be seen here below; but we would only say farewell until the dawn of that eternal morn, when we expect to meet you in glory.

W. J. FERGUSON.

COKER—Dr. J. E. COKER was born in Sussex county, Va., February 4, 1823, and died June 18, 1889, near Livingstone, Madison county, Miss. He was stricken suddenly with paralysis and lingered in an unconscious state for two days. Dr. Coker was true in every relationship of life. In his home life he was a firm disciplinarian, yet he was kind and loving. His word was law—the law of love—and his children delighted to honor him. He was the embodiment of candor. He had strong convictions, and every one knew them. He despised shams. His opinions were often given with a great emphasis, which appeared at times harsh; but, as he loved right and truth, he was loved for his sincerity. He enthroned duty as the object of life. Pleasure and personal interest were not allowed to displace personal duty. When the church commanded of him any service he always answered to roll-call. In the Quarterly, Annual and District Conferences we will miss this true and loyal servant of Christ. He loved every interest of the church. Education, missions and the temperance cause had a sacred place in his heart. He often used the lancet to open dangerous places, but the hand of love held the lancet. His pastor he made his companion, and there was always a joyful welcome for the itinerant at his home. His friendship had the fragrance of spring-time. His home, his church, his community will miss him, but he has left a rich and blessed memory. Since he has departed, his companion of many years, his children and many friends are passing under the shadow of a great sorrow, but they are comforted with the thought of meeting again. To this beloved Christian physician, we say good-night, while we watch for the eternal morning. I. W. COOPER.

WARREN—Sister HARRIET LAZINKA WARREN was born August 6, 1854, and died May 16, 1889. She joined the church when nine years old, and was converted when twenty-two; was married to Mr. W. W. Warren, January 7, 1874, by Rev. D. P. Bradford.

Sister Warren not only ranked, but excelled, among the pure in heart. She seemed to have resolved, from her conversion, to exclude all sin from her heart and life, and to be contented with what was lawful. In fact, she tried to develop human life, in all that was lawful, in Christian love toward all with whom she was called to associate with, which only the pure in heart would attempt or could hope to succeed in. "Unto the pure all things are pure: but unto them that are defiled and unbelieving is nothing pure; but even their mind and conscience is defiled."

Hers was a beautiful life. She was just the wife, pictured by St. Peter, in I. Peter iii, 1-6, "of a meek and quiet spirit," whose "chaste conversation, coupled with fear" of God, won her husband to Christ. She was a loving, tender and prudent mother, by whose prayers and faithful teaching her two only children early became Christians; to whom is left, in her beautiful life, a priceless legacy. She was beloved and admired by all that knew her. She was a Christian of great faith and untiring devotion to the church, in which she moved as "a bright and shining light." Many hearts were made sad when she closed her eyes to all that was earthly. May God, at last, bring the bereaved family together safe in heaven!

J. W. ELLISON.

ROGILLIO—Miss FANNIE ROGILLIO was born in Jackson, La., and died, at her home, June 1, 1889. In the early morning of June 2, the beautiful Sabbath of our Centenary commencement, a vast congregation attended her funeral services at the church. At twelve years of age Fannie joined the Baptist Church. Her purity of character and gentle, persuasive ways, combined with religious cheerfulness and a singularly sweet and refined disposition, made her influence felt; and as she grew into womanhood, she developed rare and commanding qualities. Gifted and cultured with intellect of a high order, her joyous, happy nature and consistent piety made her an example and an inspiration to others. While yet a young girl she became organist for the church, and scarcely a Sabbath, for ten years, have we missed her rich, powerful voice, as she led the choir in sweet old-fashioned hymns and songs of praise. To the young lover, who came from a distant land to claim his bride, but came too late, we extend our heartfelt sympathy. May our heavenly Father soothe his sorrowing heart! God help and pity the lonely father and mother in their darkened home! We will not intrude on their sacred grief. The Master hath need of their precious child.

"The rest which he giveth his beloved
Is hers, untroubled and deep,
And because we loved her, we say,
It is well, she has fallen asleep."

LILAH V. SCHWING.

CALHOUN—MAGGIE WILLIS, daughter of Dr. J. D. and M. E. Calhoun, was born at Arizona, La., May 7, 1888, and died June 28, 1889. Maggie was, indeed, a beautiful and sprightly child; so affectionate and trustful. Ah! she is missed, sadly missed, in that family circle; even the pastor will miss her loving embrace and affectionate kiss in his visitations. But God is good and wise, and it does not behoove us to murmur or complain. May his grace be sufficient, and the blessed Comforter whisper consolation in this trying hour!

J. L. P. SHEPPARD, Pastor.

Beacons Along the Wayside.

When one who is bewildered discovers a beacon ahead, difficulties seem to vanish and if we except intervening roots and brambles, the haven is soon attained.

So much for what will presently be our simile.

When one, who is ill sees the good results of a means of cure, in cases far more desperate than his own, convalescence seems possible were it not for doubts and fears. Nevertheless Compound Oxygen is still a refuge for the sufferer. Here are a few encouraging beacons along the wayside.

ATLANTA, GA., March 22, 1888.

"I still recommend your remedy. It saved my wife's life and cured my boy of catarrh."

WALTER T. FORBES.

COLUMBIA, S. C., March 13, 1888.

"I have reason to believe that I have been benefited by this treatment, and commend it to those whose nervous systems need to be invigorated."

Dr. JOHN L. GIRARDEAN.

WILLISTON, S. C., March 20, 1888.

"I am pleased to report a continued improvement both in myself and wife. May you live long to bless suffering humanity with your Compound Oxygen treatment."

REV. W. W. GRAHAM.

GASTONIA, GASTON CO., N. C., May 25, 1888.

"I speak to you the real sentiment of my heart when I state that I sincerely believe that had it not been for the Compound Oxygen Treatment, I would have been in my grave before this time."

W. D. HANNA.

We publish a brochure of 200 pages regarding the effect of Compound Oxygen on invalids suffering from consumption, asthma, bronchitis, dyspepsia, catarrh, hay fever, headache, debility, rheumatism, neuralgia; all chronic and nervous disorders. It will be sent, free of charge, to any one addressing Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch St., Phila., Pa.; or 120 Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

At a meeting of the Cincinnati saloon keepers, last week, a resolution to defy the Sunday law was presented and unanimously adopted.

An English syndicate has purchased five of the six breweries in Patterson, N. J., for an aggregate of $2,380,000, the owners to retain one-third interest in the concerns.

The failure of the great dry goods firm of Lewis Bros. & Co., in New York City, for four million dollars, was announced last week.

The Standard Oil Company is endeavoring to get control of the natural gas lands in Indiana, evidently with the intention of controlling the entire gas field intimately.

In the cases of a physician and a dentist, indicted for practicing medicine and dentistry without a license, in New Hampshire, the supreme court to-day quashed the indictments and declared the law requiring license for the practice of medicine and dentistry unconstitutional.

The citizens of Wilson county, Tenn., have declared war against Mormon elders and converts, who have been for some time past operating in that section.

A contract was signed with the Union Iron Works, of San Francisco, for a coast defense vessel for $700,000.

The count of the cash and securities in the United States Treasury, incident to the transfer of the office from Mr. Hyatt to Mr. Huston, the incumbent, was completed on July 27. There is $70,000,000.

Regulators in Marion county, Ind., brutally whipped two women on July 27. When released, they were warned that severer treatment was in store for them if they did not cease talking of their neighbors.

There is an association in Chicago which is sending postal cards to Eastern men offering to give them any academic degree they desire for a money consideration.

Illinois was visited by a heavy rainfall on July 27. It inflicted thousands of dollars of damage in Chicago. Basements and cellars were flooded all over the city. Eight persons were killed by the falling of an unfinished building, which was blown down by the violence of the storm.

Judge Field, of the circuit court, Kansas City, Mo., in a decision declared the statute allowing religious associations to be incorporated unconstitutional. The decision was rendered on the application of Reyerson Ritche and others for the incorporation of the Reformed Methodist Episcopal Church.

Refractory saloon keepers of Cincinnati were brought to terms by the police, on July 28. About 150 arrests were made for violating the Sunday Law. Great excitement prevailed, but repeated arrests resulted in the closing of the bar-rooms. The police were attacked by hoodlums, and one policeman was badly beaten.

A recent list shows that twelve relatives or family connections of the President have been appointed to office since the inauguration of the Republican administration.

FOREIGN.

July 25 was the occasion of the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone.

The trial of the strikers arrested at Breslau has resulted in the conviction of thirty-two of the prisoners. The ring leader was sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary and to be deprived of his civil rights for seven years.

The Yellow river has again burst its banks, in China, inundating an immense extent of country. There are twelve feet of water throughout ten large government districts.

The greatest diplomatic triumph of Prince Bismarck's life will be achieved if he succeeds in his latest project, which is to arrange a meeting between the Czar, the Emperor Francis Joseph and the Emperor William. It is intended that the emperors shall meet at Potsdam. The chancellor is supposed to be aiming not at a definite treaty of alliance involving Russia in the central European league, but only to re-establish better relations between the three empires.

In debating on the royal grants in the House of Commons, on July 26, Mr. Bradlaugh said the opponents of the grants meant nothing personally discourteous to the members of the royal family, but were simply acting within their rights when they met the demands of the crown on a question of finance with a direct negative.

Princess Louise, eldest daughter of the Prince of Wales, was married at noon, on July 27, at Buckingham Palace to the Duke of Fife and Marquis Macduff by the Archbishop of Canterbury. A drenching rain fell during the ceremonies.

The hopes of the Boulangists have been shattered by the defeat of their leader in the elections on July 28.

The Vatican and the Quirinal are doubly guarded, owing to the receipt of information of a plot to blow up both with dynamite. It is rumored that the departure of the Pope will be forcibly resisted, and that the government secret police watch the exits of the Vatican.

A cyclone in Hungary, Transylvania and Bukovina, on July 28, swept over several thousand square miles of territory. Hundreds of persons were killed. Crops were destroyed and enormous damage was done to houses. The districts of Grossmonden and Mohaes were completely ravaged.

The Czar desires that Emperor William receive him at Potsdam. He will not visit Berlin for reasons of personal safety, as he will be able to keep the public at a greater distance at Potsdam than at the capital.

Many Christian families are arriving at Athens daily from Crete, having fled from the island on account of the uprising there. Two British men-of-war are expected soon at Suda Bay.

All humors of the scalp, tetter sores, and dandruff cured, and falling hair checked; hence, baldness prevented by using Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer.

Notice.

The corresponding secretary of Woman's Board of Missions, of Methodist Episcopal Church, South, recommends that memorial services be held in all the auxiliaries for Miss Clara Chrisman; therefore, the Executive Board of Louisiana Conference, Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, requests that every society in the State, at an early day, will pay this respect to our honored dead. The vacancy caused by Miss Chrisman's death has been filled by one of Louisiana's consecrated daughters. Miss Sallie M. Phillips has already sailed for Brazil, and the foreign work is thus brought feelingly near to our own hearts. At the time of memorial service, therefore, every auxiliary is requested to take up a public collection and remit same to Mrs. S. B. McCutchen, State treasurer, designated "for our outgoing missionary." As true women, we will esteem it a happy privilege to prove our love by a free-will offering.

CAMP MEETINGS.

There will be a camp meeting at the Boyt Camp Ground, at Doubleley station, on the V., S. and P. R. R., seven miles from Minden, and twenty-five miles east of Shreveport. The people of North Louisiana are cordially invited to unite with us and make this a central camp meeting. We have boarding and lodging cheap for all who do not wish to build tents and board themselves. Preachers and their wives free.
B. PARVIN, Pastor.

The camp meeting on Sparta circuit, at Providence, La., four and a half miles east of Sparta, La., will commence on Friday before the third Sabbath in September, 1889—September 13—on the self-sustaining plan. Preachers invited, and will be provided for. B. A. DAVIS, P. C.

Students of medicine would do well to send for the catalogue of the Memphis Hospital Medical College.

BEAUTIFUL CHAUTAUQUA LAKE,
Lakewood, New York.
The most healthful resort in America, situated on the Main Line of the New York, Lake Erie and Western R. R., at Lakewood, N. Y., midway between Cincinnati and New York City. The highest navigable water in the United States, over 1,400 feet above the level of the sea, and 700 feet higher than Lake Erie. Weather cool. No malaria. No mosquitoes. Hotels open June 1 to October 1. Round-trip fare from Cincinnati $11 25, good returning until October 31. Be sure your tickets read via New York, Lake Erie and Western R. R., from Cincinnati, as this is the only line running solid trains, Pullman cars, through to the Lake. Tourist tickets for sale at all large stations. For further information please apply to ticket agents of connecting lines, or to H. C. Holabird, Division Passenger Agent, 99 West 4th St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

TO BE PROUD OF.
It always gives us pleasure to record the successful result of well-directed effort in any department of business, especially when that success is backed by merit, and tends to promote the general welfare. Competition in all branches of business at this time is great, and he who by energy, integrity, and perseverance takes the lead is worthy of commendation. In this connection we allude to Dr. Tutt, of New York, who has achieved a great victory over long-established competitors in the introduction of his world-renowned Liver Pills. In a comparatively short time they surpassed pills that had been before the public over a quarter of a century. Tutt's Liver Pills have gained a popularity unparalleled. Indorsed by the Medical Faculty in Europe and America, they have become a household word on both continents.
Dr. Tutt deserves, and, doubtless, has, the gratitude of thousands of invalids who have been healed by his medicine. In this age of quackery it is refreshing to know that there is, at least, one who furnishes a remedy prepared on scientific principles, and offers it to the sick conscientiously. We record his success with a feeling of pride which every American should have at the triumph of one of his countrymen.

The clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.
The Episcopal Diocese of New York has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and The Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.
A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

Timothy Davis, postmaster at Pattersonville, La., says: "Some years ago, while living in Algiers, I contracted a cough that everyone thought would cause my death. I was unable to sleep, had night-sweats, and soon became too weak to work. I had several doctors and tried many remedies, but with no improvement. An old friend hearing of my condition recommended Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. It had cured him of a serious lung trouble, and he had great confidence in Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar. Before three bottles had been taken I was up and about, a well man. It saved my life. I always recommend it for consumption, asthma, bronchitis, any lung or throat trouble." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

Summer Tours.
Nowhere can there be found more pleasant spots in which to enjoy health and recreation than in the mountains of Tennessee and Kentucky. With pure mountain air, excellent waters, fishing, boating, hunting, horseback rides through the mountain glens, delightful promenades, music, dancing, and all that go to make life enjoyable, is found at many points on line of the Queen and Crescent Route. From Most Rev. Bishop Ryan, of Philadelphia.
I can testify to the efficacy of J. & C. Maguire's Cundurango, it having been my favorite medicine for several years past. I believe it to be the best Anti-Bilious Cathartic and Corrector of Liver, Blood and Kidney derangements that can be taken, and its general use in families would no doubt avert attacks of sickness.

THE HILLS OF THE LORD.

BY WM. GANNETT.

God ploughed one day with an earthquake,
And drove his furrows deep;
The huddling plains upstarted,
The hills were all asleep!

But that is the mountain's secret,
Age-hidden in their breast;
"God's peace is everlasting,"
Are the dream-words of their rest.

He hath made them the haunt of beauty,
The home-elect of his grace;
He spreadeth his morning on them,
His sunsets light their face.

The people of tired cities
Come up to the shrine and pray;
God freshes again within them,
As he passes by all day.

And, lo! I have caught their secret!
The beauty deeper than all!
This faith—that life's hard moments,
When the jarring sorrows befall,

Are but God ploughing his mountains;
And those mountains yet shall be
The source of his grace and freshness,
And his peace everlasting to me.

Travels Abroad.

MR. EDITOR: After a long delay I take pleasure in favoring you with a few jottings of our wonderful trip abroad.

Our trip across the ocean, from New York to Queenstown, and thence to Liverpool, was pleasant and very interesting, as neither of us (wife and self) had ever crossed the broad Atlantic before. These palatial ocean steamers are a floating world, and one is frequently musing, if not a sufferer from mal de mer, as if the next moment they might start up and go out for a walk, or make a visit, for the once forgetful of being surrounded by sky and water, only beyond the sides of the noble vessel, steadily steaming and plowing her way through the troubled waters; the throbbing of the mighty engines ever reminding one of the pulsations of the life current through the human frame. The reputation for safety, which a few of these trans-atlantic lines has acquired, lend much to relieve the traveler's mind of anxiety about reaching the desired haven—a sensation not at all unlike the Christian's confidence in the wisdom and power of the all-sufficient Savior. Looking at these grand objects of man's construction, one would be led to rashly exclaim that nothing in nature's elements could materially interfere with their progress upon the rolling ocean; but one needs to experience sailing in one of these "floating worlds," amidst the high winds and mighty storm-crested waves, to test his confidence in anything of human invention. Helpless, he must irresistibly look away and up to heaven, from whence cometh certain deliverance from Almighty Goodness.

With what sensations of gladness did we hail tidings of "land ahead," as the beacon light from Fastnet Rock gleamed out in the hazy distance. A few hours, and our steamer was riding at anchor in Cork harbor. We were glad this was not our disembarking place, as it was now three o'clock A. M., and all passengers for Queenstown had to transfer by small steam tender before reaching shore. Their luggage and the several hundred bags of mail for Europe followed. Liverpool was reached at eight o'clock P. M., with the sun still a full hour above the horizon. What tremendous long days! The remaining passengers also were transferred by small steam tender with their laggage to the universal landing-stage. Here a delay occurs for the alphabetical assortment of the luggage; then the customs examination of same follows. As we had no tobacco or liquors hid away in sly corners, the delay was insignificant. Kind friends met us and piloted us safely to a resting-place for the night—a temperance hotel managed by a prominent Wesleyan layman. We tarried "but a night," for our ulterior destination for a season was the teeming city of London. This we reached, via Midland railway, after a six hours' ride through a magnificent stretch of mountain scenery. Another kind friend was on the lookout for us as we stepped down upon the platform of the immense station. We would call it a depot. A friendly look, an extended hand, and a hearty greeting followed. Into a cab and across the great city we sped; a transfer to a train of the Dover and Chatham railway followed; then a ten-mile run down to the little suburban town of Beckenham, Kent. Here we were hospitably entertained for several days; resting there at night, and running up to London during the day for appreciated mail from home, as well as viewing some of the wonders of such a great metropolis. We were now separated from loved ones by a mighty ocean and many days' travel. Imagine our satisfaction upon the receipt of a cablegram reporting: "All well; managing everything nicely."

As the World's Sunday-School Convention did not convene for ten days yet, we proceeded, via Dover and Calais, to Paris on a Cook & Son excursion ticket. As our train wormed its way down to Dover, a fellow-passenger pointed out to us the old castle and cathedral at Rochester, "built in the time of William the Conqueror." The latter has been kept in a fair state of preservation. Further on we saw the cathedral at Canterbury, sitting in the midst of the old historic hills, and admired for its attractive proportions. At Dover we were charmed with the sight of the bright blue waters of the channel, as they washed against the sides of the tall, white chalk cliffs, which stand out all along this strongly fortified coast. A powerful and rapid steamer bore us safely over the channel to Calais in sixty-five minutes. The moment we landed on French soil we experienced a queer sensation—lo! another tongue was spoken, and we were aliens! But we live in a progressive age, and Americans can generally manage to make themselves understood wherever circumstances may place them. Very soon we had found our train, supplied ourselves with a lunch and a bottle of aerated drinking water, and ready for the five-hours' run down to Paris. The scenery along the route was attractive at times, and full of historical reminiscences. Stopped at Amiens for ten minutes, and alighted to stretch our tired limbs. Here we also invested in some strawberries of prodigious size and refreshing properties. In fact, wherever we went while in Europe, we feasted on tremendous and luscious berries and pure, sweet milk. Reaching Paris at night, in the rain, does not produce a favorable impression; much better than in a Southern city we think so much of, however. Another examination of our inseparable luggage. Nothing contraband being found, we secured a cab through the aid of Cook & Son's interpreter, and reached our hotel, within a stone's throw of "the Bourse." Here we were wonderfully relieved to find "English spoken." A comfortable room on the fourth floor ("Rather lofty for my friend!" I hear you say), and two excellent meals a day, fitted us physically for an enjoyable three days' stay in this beautiful city. We visited the magnificent Exposition the next day, entering it by the Trocedero gate. After looking through one wing of the palace, we walked down to the bridge, which spans the Seine at this point, and over to the base of the Eiffel Tower. Our visit would have been incomplete without ascending it; so we stepped into the "lift," and after being safely locked in, were rapidly lifted upward to the first landing-place. Here we stepped out and found ourselves upon a broad and substantial platform covered with booths and restaurants. After a luncheon, we walked around its four immense sides, and had a splendid bird's-eye view of the city and environs. As our time was limited; and our desire for going any higher unmentioned, we descended and walked about the attractive grounds; thence into the Main Building. Its immensity staggered us, while the displays and exhibits seemed to be endless. Much we saw to instruct and interest us; but time flies and bodies tire—so we reluctantly bent our steps towards our temporary abiding-place, and reached it by first sailing a part of the way in one of the commodious small steamers which constantly ply this wondrous river. A young friend of ours, from New Orleans, temporarily doing business in Paris, very kindly tendered his services as interpreter and guide. Need I add, we were not slow to accept them? As the day dawns in these parts at three o'clock, and twilight lasts until after ten P. M., we were enabled to go about and see a wonderful lot of places and things. The weather was always favorable, and conveyances obtainable at a nominal cost. An open "cab" with driver, and room for four persons, can be hired for two francs an hour. Very little walking is, therefore, done in Paris. The cheap riding is a wonderful help to the weary sight-seer, and enables one to accomplish astonishing things. Be assured we saw all that Americans, with their natural curiosity, could see, and never tired. The number at the head of this page (10) admonishes me to stop. Another opportunity presenting itself, may dilate further from this point in our trip. We expect to be home again about August 12.

A favoring and gracious Providence has accompanied us in all our goings to and fro, and we have leaned very heavily at times upon the divine arm.

Accept our kind love and best wishes for self and family. Hope, ere many days, to grasp again your brotherly hand. Sincerely yours,

E. P. MACKIE.

From the West.

MR. EDITOR: About July 15 the sun came down upon us in such Southern geniality that we began to feel like we were directly under the Equator; so a family council was called and a migration to some cooler country agreed upon. The committee on "ways and means" decided that, as a summer resort, no country offered more inducements than Colorado; so here we are at the very feet of the mighty Rockies, breathing air which carries the spirit of health upon its noiseless wings, drinking from streams whose source is in the snowy mountain peaks above us, and resting thoroughly.

After a two days' journey over the Ft. Worth and Denver railroad, we reached Manitou, our present destination.

I should never have thought of writing to the ADVOCATE, but the ubiquitous newspaper reporter is here in strength. With pencil and note-book, he is on every hotel gallery, at every mineral spring. I have met him above the clouds on Pike's Peak, and under the earth in the Grand Cavern; and I also procured pencil and book, and herein you will find the fruits of my industry, or, perhaps, you will read, seeking fruit and find leaves only.

Manitou is a village of hotels, bath-houses, stables and railroad depots; but it is a most charming resort, and is rightly the most popular watering-place in Colorado, for its waters are for the healing of the nation. It is said that when all herbs and orgies failed, that the Indians resorted hither with their sick, when these mountain heights and pleasant valleys knew not the tread of a white man. There are five mineral springs here, each claiming its own particular healing qualities, and all are largely patronized. I would not make any stereotyped remarks about the priceless ness of health, etc.; but one must moralize when at a place like this, where one sees saint and sinner, old and young, clinging to life with a like tenacity, all—

"Mourning that this transient shading
Was not made more permanent."

These springs are beautiful at night, for they have fallen upon an artful and happy conceit that I have not seen practiced elsewhere: they throw an electric light down under the water which makes them look like vats of molten gold.

The hot soda baths are only less invigorating than a dip into the "salt sea wave." The water is said to give a beautiful gloss and freshness to the skin; consequently, they are much frequented by ladies who are just a little passe, just a tinge of the "sere and yellow leaf" upon them.

Manitou is situated in a pleasant valley, surrounded on three sides by towering mountains, down whose rocky heights dash the coldest, clearest streams in the most fantastic cascades. All that we have read of this climate is true: the temperature is like our early spring-time; the air is crisp and bracing—it is happiness alone to breathe it, and I think a month here would bring roses to the most faded cheeks and clothe the leanest frame in flesh. The chief pastime is driving, riding, and, with alpenstock in hand, toiling up these mountain-sides, the latter being a rather hazardous undertaking. There is a guest in this hotel who was maimed of a hand on one of these expeditions, a falling rock crushing it to such a pulp that amputation was necessary; still many go up and down in safety.

We have visited many interesting places around here, notably among them the Grand Caverns. These caverns were accidentally discovered in 1881 by their owner, Mr. George Snider, while out deer hunting, and he has made them a source of revenue by constructing at great cost a beautiful carriage road, one and one-half miles long, up the mountain-side from Manitou. At the cave an entrance fee is paid, and it is said that 2,800 people went through the cave last August. The drive is most picturesque. It goes up the old Ute Pass, where the Indians poured down from their mountain fastnesses to do battle with their warlike neighbors, or to kill game for their winter food and raiment. The old trail remains when the proud warriors have passed on to the happy hunting grounds. The carriage-way leads by Fountain Creek (or, the Fontaine qui bouille), which comes dashing over rocks, lashed into fury as it leaps one precipice after another, until it takes the maddening plunge at Rainbow Falls, where the sun finds it and kisses it into the most exquisite coloring one could wish to see. The view at the entrance of the cave is grand indeed to one who loves nature; the hoary-headed peaks in the distance throwing their shadows, like sheltering mantles, around the green valleys below them.

Here at the entrance guides meet you with well-filled lamps; otherwise one is wrapped in midnight darkness in the very vestibule. So you journey through the different halls and chambers the entire length of the cave. The mind is so interested in all the strange formations around you, some grotesque as carnival masquerades, others as symmetrical as a Grecian chisel could carve them, that one forgets he has journeyed more than a mile in cold and damp and darkness more dense than Sinbad's gloomy tomb. The most wonderful thing to me was the Grand Organ, which is composed of thirty musical stalactites which give forth the sweetest sounds when struck softly with a stick. There is a musician who manipulates this wonderful instrument. He played perfect scales of the keys of C and F, respectively, the compass of the organ being from low C to high F. Then he played, "Come, thou fount of every blessing." I can not describe my sensations. This song thrills me as no other can when I am sitting in my pew at home; but here, in this weird place, the soft strains stole upon me like an echo from the heavenly choir. In the dim light of the cave the organ looked like silver with drapery of lace, and the musician seemed a phantom. They showed us a skull and cross-bones which were found in a dark vault of this sombre place. Perhaps the hermit of the mountain died here, securely shut in from the temptations of a wicked world, or some lost hunter may have waited here for the rescue which never came.

I would not attempt a description of this museum of wonders; they must be seen to be appreciated. There is Grandma's Churn, a flock of crystal sheep, the Crane's Head, Texas Steer, Wax Candles, Silver Cord, White Owl, the Bridal Chamber, the Jewel Casket, and figures of every conceivable shape, formed of glistening stalactites and stalagmites. A piece of rock crystal in the roof, which shone brilliantly against the guide's lantern, was called the North Star.

We spent part of one day driving up Williams Canon. The carriage road goes between cliffs 1,400 feet high, the sunshine can scarcely penetrate the gloom; when you emerge into a forest of silver spruce and pine trees. Another drive carried us through the Garden of the Gods. This consists of the most curious rock formations; igneous rocks thrown into the wildest contortions by some terrific heat, applied when the mountains were brought forth. They show you Mushroom Park, the Antelope, the Sphinx, the Lady of the Garden, and many others, a bare mention of which would make my letter too lengthy. I will also reserve for another time our visit to Pike's Peak and Cheyenne Canon, where Helen Hunt is buried, etc. So, Mr. Editor,

"I'll never say 'good-bye;'
But always when we're parting—'Till to-morrow.'"

Location and Endowment.

The question of the location of the Mississippi Methodist College is a very important one, and the interest in this subject, indicated by the number of advantageous localities suggested, is a very auspicious sign. It shows, first, an appreciation of the necessity and a realization of the advantages of such an institution; and, secondly, a profound faith in the success of the enterprise so enthusiastically inaugurated last winter.

But just at this time the question of the endowment of the college is of much more importance than that of its location. Any community would be glad to have located in its midst an institution, which would add a hundred-fold to its attractions, increase by thousands of dollars its annual business, secure the presence permanently, or for the greater part of the year, of hundreds of persons, and render easily accessible the means of the higher education of its boys. The questions of accessibility and healthfulness can be answered satisfactorily by scores of towns in our beautiful State. But we must have a college before we can locate it; and not until the unselfish generosity of a community has been demonstrated by a liberal subscription to the endowment fund, independent of the location of the college, should this secondary and largely selfish question be considered.

Four considerations will probably govern the location of the college: First, an appreciation of the value of such an institution, without reference to its particular location; secondly, an appreciation of the advantages of the institution to the locality in which it may be placed; thirdly, the healthfulness; and, fourthly, the accessibility of the proposed locality, and it is safe to say that by no means could the locating committee be more certainly prepared to view with favor the last three points, as possessed by any community, than by a demonstration of the first point, by means of a generous response to the call for the endowment of the college.

Accessibility, healthfulness, and a desire to possess such an institution, do not show love to God or loyalty to Methodism. The first two are blessings from God, and demand gratitude; the third is simply the evidence of worldly wisdom, which knows a good investment when it sees it. In addition to these, that consideration ought to be emphasized which evidences Christian liberality and denominational loyalty.

The existence of the college does not admit of a reasonable doubt; but the prosperity and usefulness, which must mark its history, depend, not upon the few who have heretofore shown their interest in the enterprise, but upon the great body of Methodists in the State, who, up to this time, have not been reached in the canvass.

The fifteen appointments filled by Bishop Galloway and his co-laborers have resulted in raising $25,000, one-half of the amount upon the securing of which the gift of Maj. Millsaps was conditioned, and the amount thus raised has come largely from the preachers of the two Conferences.

While the results of the canvass so far put beyond a peradventure the success of the enterprise, the necessity has arisen for a more aggressive plan of action, a plan that will reach the great masses of our people. Such a plan is set forth in the proceedings of the recent meeting of the Joint Commission in Winona, and in its execution a contribution ought to be secured from every member of our church in the State.

Let every preacher in the State do his duty, not only in subscribing to the fund, but in urging upon the membership of the church in his charge the privileges and duties, the opportunities and obligations of the hour; and success, such as Mississippi Methodism has never known, will crown the effort.

FARRAR.

Rev. A. B. Stewart.

My friend is gone. For twenty-six years I have known him intimately. In 1863, when I volunteered as a Confederate soldier, I joined Company A, of Wither's Artillery, in order to be with him. He became my mess-mate and constant companion. He took great interest in me while I was a penitent, seeking the forgiveness of my sins. He would go with me to the woods for secret prayer. On these occasions he would instruct me as to my duty, and then pour out his soul in prayer to God for my conversion. Seeing I was very deeply in earnest and greatly affected, and yet finding no peace, he would encourage me with the promises of God. On one occasion he said to me: "Albert, don't become discouraged. As long as you are penitent and earnestly seeking the forgiveness of your sins, God will not let you die unsaved." At this juncture I resolved, "If I go to hell, I will go praying." After my conversion we would often go to the grove for secret prayer. This habit we kept up as long as we were together, which lasted till 1865. When he learned that I had made up my mind to become a preacher of the gospel, he gave me every assistance possible. He and I memorized I. Corinthians xiii, and a part of Luke xii, and many other passages. He stored his mind with passages of Scripture, and memorized many whole hymns. When called upon to hold family prayers, he would often repeat a whole Psalm, and give out a hymn from memory, and sing it. He organized a prayer meeting in his company, and would sometimes preach for his comrades.

In 1865, when the war was over, he opened a school in his father's yard, and invited me to join his brothers under his tuition. Here, with my neighbor and friend, I began my preparation for the ministry. After about six weeks we were separated. Soon after he became a member of the Mississippi Conference. I kept up an irregular correspondence with him as long as he lived. A few years ago, while on a visit to my mother's, in Madison county, Miss., I found he was living near by. As soon as he heard of my arrival, he called to see me. After a short talk he asked me to take a walk with him. We had not walked very far before he said to me, "Do you know what I am up to?" "Yes," said I, "you are looking for a place where we may kneel down together and pray." "That is it," said he; and we knelt together as in other days, and prayed. I was often refreshed by his prayers and his songs during this visit. I shall never forget his fondness for that sweet hymn, "I have reached the land of corn and wine," etc. He loved the hymns of the church next to the Word of God. But for the cloud that came over his mind, he would have been one of the most useful as well as most happy members of the Conference he loved. Andrew Barton Stewart lives in my heart. He lives in our Father's house of many mansions. And in that home above I expect to meet him.

Church Extension Funds.

The preachers will do a particularly useful work by collecting early and forwarding church extension funds. Many church buildings—some in Mississippi Conference—are eagerly waiting for needed and promised help.

I am in full accord with Dr. Morton, who says (Nashville Advocate, July 25): "Let no preacher fail to collect, if possible, his entire assessment at the earliest practicable hour, and remit the proceeds to his Conference treasurer without delay." As present needs are urgent, brethren might remit in installments.

I have received from T. B. Holloman, for Canton station, $20.

TYPES OF MY SAVIOR.

BY REV. ARTHUR J. LOCKHART.

Types of my Savior! ye symbols so glorious,
O'er the earth scattered or set in the sky;
Speak to my heart in a language victorious,
Tell me of him who ascended on high!

Bring me his lilies, that speak of his purity;
Bring me his roses that tell of his blood;
Show me his palm-trees, my place of security—
Home of refreshment and garden of God.

Point me at midnight his star that burns brightest,
Show me at twilight his gem o'er the sea;
Rise, O thou Rock the wild billow that smitest—
Star of my hope, and the refuge for me!

Bread I have broken—'tis he is subsistence,
Feeding my soul in the desolate waste;
Fleet-flowing wave, he's my fount in the distance,
Free to the thirsty, and sweet to my taste.

Types of my Savior, exalt him, express him!
Emblems of beauty in sky and in sea;
Flowers of the field, in your blooming confess him,
Teach my faint heart to be constant as ye!

Mississippi Methodist College.

At the meeting of the Joint Committee, held at Winona, July 23, 1889, a special committee was appointed for certain purposes, and their report given below was unanimously adopted:

Your special sub-committee would report that we are rejoiced at the work which has been done, and the prospect for the immediate obtaining of the balance of the $50,000 needed to secure the $50,000 so generously offered by our brother, Maj. R. W. Millsaps. The interest in the cause is deepening and broadening. The earnest efforts of the friends of the enterprise are attracting attention at home and abroad. Already the citizens of various towns, irrespective of denominational affiliation, are arranging to offer lands, buildings and money for the location of the college. We need now to make a more general and aggressive advance. To this end we recommend:

1. That the preachers in the two Conferences be requested and urged at once to preach at all their appointments on the subject of "Christian and Denominational Education," with special reference to our college enterprise.

2. That the presiding elders take charge of the canvass in their respective districts, appointing educational meetings in each pastoral charge, and calling to their aid such help as they can secure.

3. That educational mass meetings be held at one or more prominent points in each district, which meetings Bishop Galloway is expected to attend.

4. That every member of the Joint Committee is also authorized and expected to secure as many endowment notes as possible, and to lose no opportunity to further the enterprise.

5. That Bishop Galloway be requested to publish an address to the friends of the college.

6. That towns and communities competing for the location of the college be directed to send their offers, with description of lands, or of lands and buildings, with abstract of title, to Maj. R. W. Millsaps, chairman of Joint Committee, Jackson, Miss., by November 15, 1889.

Meridian District Conference.

The Meridian District Conference was convened at Vossburg, Jones county, Miss., at nine o'clock A. M., July 25, 1889; Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, P. E., in the chair.

Comments of presiding officer, Scripture selection, hymns and prayer indicated that the key-note of the session was to be spirituality, and all hearts said, Come, Holy Spirit, come! Business was dispatched with searching care, showing the fourth year's work on the district had placed its presiding elder in a condition of receptivity for a diploma.

Bishop C. B. Galloway arrived in time to hold morning session on Friday, July 26. Of the people, yet progressive, terse, deeply spiritual and practical, he, with business exactness, punctured to the very core each line of work, leading preachers and laymen to higher conception of duty.

Increased attention to the baptism of the children of the church was perceptible. A decided improvement in church buildings had been made. The spiritual condition of the field was improved and evidenced symptoms of great hope. Pastoral labor in many of the charges had been entered into with great care. In some cases each individual had been directly addressed in person by his pastor with the questions, "Are you a regenerated man?" "Do you enjoy religion?"

Finances were in a better shape than heretofore. Connectional claims had been pressed, and in some cases remitted in full to date. The number of church papers was far too small. The presiding elder rested the fault upon pulpit and pew, and made pungent remarks in regard to it.

Bishop Galloway emphasized the claims of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE upon the entire Conference. "Romanism is to be the grave question of the near future. A Protestant press will prove a mighty power to check it. Our literature should be in every home. An open Bible must be given the people."

Dr. C. W. Carter gave a very encouraging account of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and proved it, by comparison, a very cheap paper.

Dr. C. G. Andrews made timely, instructive remarks upon Methodism's progress, saying "the present type of Christian was never surpassed." Holiness might have been more emphasized in olden times, but believed the Methodist ministry was never as holy as now. Urged young preachers especially to stress "scriptural holiness"—"true consecration to Christ."

The condition of East Mississippi Female College and Whitworth College was frankly told. Both institutions are successfully conducted, and should be sources of pride and encouragement. Dr. R. M. Saunders, president of the former, was providentially kept away by a recent painful, but not serious hurt. Dr. W. B. Murrah, of "Whitworth" faculty, impressed the Conference by his candid statements and earnest, spiritual sermon.

A resolution urging the introduction of our new hymn book into every Sabbath-school in the district, and that it be used as far as practicable to the exclusion of all others, was unanimously adopted. Commendatory resolutions of Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, P. E., and his labors were adopted.

The sermons preached each day gave evidence of closet work, and were not without fruit.

S. S. Cope, L. P. Brown, J. S. Turner and W. S. Davis were elected as delegates, and T. J. Krouse and D. W. Heidelberg as alternates to Annual Conference.

Vossburg, the charge of Rev. D. C. Langford, is a place of family altars; hence the closing of offices and stores during the hours of service, and a genuine Christian hospitality was what we all expected and received.

After a strong, stirring talk upon education (without a public collection) by the Bishop, the District Conference adjourned, with the Doxology, to meet at Enterprise in 1890. Instructed, encouraged, strengthened and resolved, each left for his own home and field.

The Urgency in Japan.

LETTER FROM BISHOP WILSON.

The urgency of affairs in our Japan Mission constrains me to make appeal to the church. The following extracts from a letter just received from Miss Gaines, the only lady under appointment of the Parent Board, who has been working with great energy and devotion in Hiroshima, will explain one part of the situation:

"You have heard that we suspended the school in Hiroshima. It was almost a necessity, although if it had been best I would rather have remained and worked up to the best of my ability. Dr. Lambuth and all the members of the Mission think this school very important. At one time last winter everything was more encouraging than at any time since we entered Hiroshima; but we were not able to rise with the times, and the consequence was a new Buddhist school took some of our pupils, offering them inducements which we were not prepared to give, because I stood alone. None of our missionary families could be spared to go to Hiroshima after Dr. Walter Lambuth moved; and, though all agree to the importance of our work there, they are a unit as to the impracticability of my remaining there alone. I am more than willing to try it, for I feel there are mothers and sisters in America who could and would help me in this matter. My heart is heavy, and try as I will to think it best, I can not feel this work ought to go. We will lose too much by waiting another year. We secured a building-lot. Dr. Lambuth, Mr. Waters, and I put in what funds we could, and I stand pledged for the remainder, if the church at home does not come to our help at this point. I do not tell you this for sake of boasting, but to let you know how much in earnest we are. Can you not rouse some one to come and help Hiroshima, while others may give to establishing a school there? We want one to organize and another who could teach music, both instrumental and singing. You know how they need to be taught hymn singing. I would call on my sister to come, but that her health is not good.

"Dr. Walter Lambuth is trying to do full work, never faltering, but the strain is breaking him down. We all fear, and others outside our Mission join us in the fear, that his health will fail.

"I felt I must write and ask you to make one more appeal for Hiroshima. We have gone through the roughest places, and now, after all our labor, I can't bear to give it up. A girls' school here from the Japanese standpoint, as well as our own, is of greatest importance, and now is our opportunity. We have lost by hesitation, and I want you, dear Mrs. Wilson, to beg the church to remember our need at this time."

Much more might be said than is expressed in the above extract. My own observation showed me that the demand for more ample provision for the women and girls of Japan is imperative. We ought not, we can not confine our ministry to the men and boys. We must bring under Christian influence the women of Japan, who have as much to do in shaping life there as in other nations. Failure at this point will operate most unfavorably on our whole missionary enterprise. Two women, at least—experienced, cultivated, devoted—ought to go at once. The Woman's Board of Missions, with its work for the year laid out and its resources exhausted, does not feel able to enter that field. Can there not be found in all the church two women of such quality, as thus indicated, who will give themselves freely to this work under the direction of the General Board? Let the preachers look out for such women, and at the earliest possible day communicate with Dr. John, the Missionary Secretary, at Nashville.

Besides this, we are in immediate want of three men to go into that work not later than September. Places of importance are open to us; work is pressing so heavily upon the force we have there that some of our brethren are in danger of breaking down. To meet the demand and lighten the strain it is indispensable that we furnish additional force. We want laborious, self-sacrificing men, who will not be deterred by difficulties or opposition. The time is fast approaching when the issue will be sharply joined between the native idolatries and Christianity. All the forces at command will be employed in resistance to the aggressions of the gospel. We must have men of the right calibre, mental and spiritual, to maintain our cause. If there be among us men of nerve and apostolic courage, who are willing to devote themselves for the sake of the Lord Jesus to confront the power of heathenism in Japan, let them now offer themselves. In despite of all the antagonisms aroused, the prospect is hopeful and inspiriting. There is hardly any land on earth that promises a richer reward to Christian fidelity and a larger harvest to Christian labor than this.

Still further; to meet these demands the conscience of the church in all its breadth must be awakened to the consideration of the pecuniary supplies. The men and women who go upon this warfare must not go at their own charges. It is the cause of the church that they are prosecuting; it is the work of the church that they are doing. The church must see to it that the means are not wanting which are necessary to equip them and to sustain them in their toil and strife. The Board of Missions able to provide but inadequately for the work, it becomes necessary that this provision should be supplemented by the free-will offerings of all who do not feel bound by the hard limits of an assessed statement. This work of God can not be brought within the compass of an official calculation. Conscience must be quickened to the highest appreciation of opportunity and responsibility. Faith must be enlarged to the full measure of God's call, and the heart must be stirred to prompt and generous response to this pressing need. What I say unto all, I say to each. Whoever has at command any resources available for the cause of Christ, let him bring his offering to this altar. There is no danger of waste; there need be no fear of lavish expenditure. A great and effectual door is opened, and there are many adversaries, and all the means at our command will be required to make full entry and overcome.

In the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, who is bend over all things to his church, I make this appeal for men, women, and supplies. In his name let there be quick and hearty answer.

There are 6,000 subscribers to the ADVOCATE! Will not 1,000 of them respond to the above call of Bishop Wilson, and send us one dollar apiece to send another missionary to Japan? Our fund for that purpose has not grown as fast as we desired. Why hesitate all summer over this plain duty? Brother, sister, lay down the paper and send us the dollar in the next mail, and let us have the missionary on the way by September 1. If every reader of the ADVOCATE will do as the Holy Spirit prompts, we will have that thousand dollars in a week! What say you?—EDITOR.

Woman's Department of Church Extension.

TWO DAYS OF PRAYER.

At its last meeting the Board appointed September 29 and 30 as two days of prayer, on which we ask the entire church to join us in praying to God for a special blessing upon our work. We trust the auxiliaries of this department will strickly observe these days of prayer, holding special meetings, making fervent prayers that God will own and bless our efforts to advance his holy cause. We hope they will, preparatory to these days of prayer, endeavor to bring back old members of the societies, enlist new ones, and collect back dues that they may be forwarded as soon as possible. We ask that our sisters everywhere will pray with us for the success of our work; that they will regard September 29 and 30 not only as days of prayer, but also of work, and will endeavor to organize auxiliaries to the Woman's Department of Church Extension. To be prepared for this, write to the Conference secretary for copies of our Constitution and leaflets that you may learn the full meaning of our plan of work. Taking the words "church extension" in their spiritual and only true sense, we labor for the extension of the kingdom of God in our midst. We most earnestly beg that each and every minister in our connection will, on September 29, pray for and present the work of our society to his congregation. Trustfully we beseech the Lord God that he will raise up some one in each congregation who will take this work upon her heart. We ask that all and each one who unites with us will pray definitely that there may be such a rapid increase in the number of our auxiliaries and of funds coming into the hands of the Board that we may see his power and all may know "this is of God."

In his name, whose life and death revealed to us our Royal Father's love, we lay upon your hearts our requests for your prayers and your help.

From the Work.

FLORA, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: We have been still and quiet at Flora, as far as mention in the ADVOCATE goes, this year; yet there has been life, growing as the spark into flame; and recently the warmth of God's love and presence has filled all Flora. We have not had such a visitation before. Not very often have I seen and sensibly felt the Spirit's presence, and often it has given pain to note other's emotions, and have slight thrill of heart and moisture at the eyes in sympathy. But there was little lack for emotion during our late protracted services. The Spirit was present, and we knew it. At a word, large congregations would melt down upon the knees, saint and sinner; and in the eloquent silence of the moment, the soul thrilled from the power that wrought such quick and earnest attitude. Some ten or twelve were added to the church, among them souls which long and faithfully served the devil. With tears of contrition, confession was made, and souls proclaimed the joy they felt in new and heavenly mastery. We have the privilege of aiding them in such contentful service henceforth—the restful service for the Master. God bless them with glad continuance along the route his love has elevated the balance of their days!

An equal number of converts will probably join the Baptist Church at Flora. This is a new church, with large membership; and the harmony with which it worshiped with us has brought revival of the faith upon it. We are very thankful to him from whom all blessings flow; and we have got religion at Flora.

Bro. Powell assisted; indeed, bore the heat and burden of the day. He was clear and strong and Spirit-blessed. And he won my people, leaving them sorry at his going, and earnest in his praises after he was gone. God give him return for the earnest labor so lovingly rendered me and mine. Our associate Baptist brother, Croom, was with us long enough to give some willing and efficient help.

A meeting at Bentonia begins now. God listen to all prayers which may be offered for us here, for we are sorely needful! We look toward the hills, and trust the light which streams in radiant promise down to us and all. Please "Amen!" this prayer: that he shall scatter the darkness clouding this little community, and have "the Sun of Righteousness arise with healing in his wings," to gladden us now and shine on forever!

W. H. HUNTLEY.

BENTONIA, Mississippi.

CENTERVILLE CIRCUIT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I commenced a meeting at Mt. Nebo on Wednesday night before the third Sunday in July, which lasted eight days. We preached on Wednesday night, the opening service, from Psalms lxxxv, 6: "Wilt thou not revive us again, that thy people may rejoice in thee." That old soldier of the cross and faithful brother, E. W. Yancy (superannuate), and J. J. Masters, J. J. Arnold, local preachers, were our ministerial helpers. The meeting resulted in forty-three accessions—the number of conversions not known, but we think it reasonably estimated by nearly all to be fifteen or eighteen. And as for the children that were baptized, we think it beat Bro. S. S. Keener's class. Bro. Yancy baptized twenty-six Sunday, at the eleven o'clock appointment, and three others in a night or two afterwards. Total, 29. He has been engaged in administering this sacrament for more than forty years, and says that was the largest class he ever baptized at one time in his life.

I have been asked to state an incident relative to a sweet little girl, about ten years old, coming forward and uniting with the church with perfect composure in the presence of a large congregation and taking the vows of the church—none of her family being Christians; but her father, being present, became interested in his salvation, and in a few nights gave his heart to God and joined the church; and now little Maggie has a Christian father to help her praise her risen Lord.

Men would start home after preaching at night in company with their families; begin to relate their experience, get happy on the roadside, stop, and praise the Lord, to be heard some distance. After the benediction was pronounced one night, a shout was heard in the church, and on rushing to the place, our eyes were greeted by the scene of two ladies who had been enemies embracing each other with shouts of triumph and love. A similar occurrence between two men was the occasion of much remark and satisfaction.

Our work is in a more favorable condition just now than it has been at any other time this year. We have in expectation a church building at Gelvin's Creek, which we hope to have completed before we go to Conference.

J. J. KELLY.

WESSON AND BEAUREGARD.

MR. EDITOR: I have just held the third quarterly meeting of the Wesson and Beauregard charge, Rev. T. L. Mellen, pastor. Seventy persons had been received into the church by profession of faith since the last quarterly meeting, and several applications for membership were pending. The whole amount assessed this charge for foreign missions had been collected and forwarded to the treasurer of the Board, and all the other collections ordered by the General Conference had been secured by cash and good subscriptions. Other finances were well up. The Wesson Church has now 489 members. The Sunday-school is large and growing. The pastor teaches a Bible class of 35 or 40 young people. They have from 150 to 200 persons at the weekly prayer meeting, and more than 60 persons of this church will pray in public. There are 120 members in the Beauregard Church. They have a good Sunday-school and prayer meeting there also, and many of the members will lead in prayer. They have also in each church a regular system of class meetings, which is doing much to develop the spiritual interests of the church. One fact elicited in the Quarterly Conference that interested me was their plan of Sunday-school teachers' meetings. The superintendent and teachers meet thirty minutes in advance of the Sunday-school, and go over the lesson together, the superintendent or pastor leading. This is the most practical plan for a Sunday-school teachers' meeting I have ever heard of. Its many advantages are too obvious to need mention here. Superintendents and teachers are all developing under this system at Wesson and Beauregard.

There are in this charge four young men preparing for the ministry, and one young lady preparing for foreign mission work. They have one lady missionary in the field; and another, Miss A. C. Chrisman, of precious memory, was on her way to New York, thence to sail for Brazil, but went to heaven from Johnstown, Pa.

Bro. Mellen is indefatigable in his labors, and God honors his ministry. His diligence in pastoral work is worthy of imitation, and his success in working up the young people of his charge is truly refreshing to behold.

W. H. LEWIS.

ARCOLA AND HOLLANDALE, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: Some good news from this part of the Lord's vineyard: We held revival services for fifteen days in May, at the two points, which resulted in increasing the membership of my charge from forty to ninety. A good prayer meeting and Sunday-school at each continues. A Young Men's Christian Association organized and doing well at Hollandale. Also money and subscriptions obtained and contract let to build a two-thousand-dollar Methodist Episcopal Church, South. A promising Woman's Missionary Society organized at Arcola.

Rev. Joe Jones, a man of God, full of faith and the Holy Ghost, conducted the revival services, and his work abides. He preaches a pure gospel—so say the good; and only the vile revile him. He uses harsh and severe terms to expose sin; but such seems to be needed to arouse some hardened cases. We think we are moving onward and upward in this charge. God is with us.

J. H. SHUMAKER.

Spiritual Fatigue.

A writer in the London Spectator believes that much of the skepticism of the day is due to the fatigued spiritual feeling which is so widely prevalent. He goes on to remark:

There is now no adequate economy of human strength for the higher objects of life, too much a great deal being lavished on its petty interests. People are attached to their religion much as Amiel said that he was attached to his ennuis. They have not the strength requisite either to give it up, or to give themselves up to its demands; and so they hover, in a miserable state of nervous tension, on the boundary that divides faith from doubt, their worldly energy being diminished by the anxious glances they cast over their shoulder at the faith which they half believe, and their spiritual energy being "sicklied o'er by the pale cast" of skeptical hesitations. Christianity can not be understood in any degree without being approached with a certain passion both of hope and fear. The whole history which led up to it, the whole history which has flowed forth from it, has been a history of spiritual passion, and there is no meaning in Christianity at all if it be not true that divine passion is as deep-rooted in the eternal spirit as infinite reason itself. If men come to Christ with exhausted natures, they will never know what there is in him. And they do come too often to the study of his teaching with the mere fag-end of their powers, with heart and mind both battered and fevered by the contending interests and pleasures of a life that is much too full of small excitements. No doubt Christianity offers a new life of its own, and an inexhaustible spring of that life; but it offers it only to those who can give up the whole mind and heart that a new mind and a new heart may be substituted in their place. There must be the power to exult even in suffering for a great end, in the who would really understand the passion of Christian teaching; and the power to exult in suffering for a great end takes an intensity of nature which is very easily extinguished by a life of minute distractions and of widely distributed affections. A generation which the most impressive characteristic is its spiritual fatigue will never be truly Christian till it can husband its energy better, and consent to forego many petty interests that it may not forego the religion of the cross.

Repeating Other's Remarks.

In repeating the statements of one man to another, we take upon ourselves a responsibility which is frequently quite overlooked. Many of the misunderstandings and difficulties between people, arising constantly in all departments of life, are to be traced to the forgetting of this responsibility. It is the responsibility of safe transmission of thought, without damage or breakage, from one soul to another. Whether we voluntarily undertake the transportation and delivery, or are commissioned so to do, makes no difference; we are responsible for the ideas we receive, handle, and deliver in both cases. It is surprising that people are always so ready to tell us what another says, or to report the views of another, when they know that their possession of the other's thought is at the best uncertain, and that their facility and skill in transmitting it are by no means beyond question. They certainly do not handle another's transcendental goods, his purposes, intentions, hopes, fears, relations, ideas, and all his personal possessions as carefully as they do their own. And by their carelessness they are often the cause of mishaps or injuries which they can never repair. Successful thought-transference is, indeed, a very difficult art. To get the mental picture substantially perfect and complete out of one mind, and then to present it successfully to another mind, with all its proportions, attitudes, relations, perspectives, lights and shadows; to impress on the peculiar individuality of the listener no more, no less, than exactly the whole truth, is a difficult and delicate undertaking. So many and various kinds of allowances, reductions, or enlargements, must be made in taking the matter out of one set of circumstances and out of one kind of personality, and adjusting it to the other. Every man before he repeats what he supposes another has said, and thus assumes the responsibility of injury and damage to an absent one, ought to be sure that his camera has focused a substantially true and accurate picture of the other man's mind; and then he ought to be sure that he is able to transfer the picture to the listener's mind with substantial fidelity.—S. S. Times.

Sparks.

The one who will be found in the capable of great acts of love is the one who is doing considerable small ones.—F. W. Robertson.

A man's moral being is concentrated in every second of his life; it lives in the tips of his fingers, and the spring of his insteps. A very little thing tells what a man is made of.—Cardinal Newman.

Many favors which God giveth us ravel out for want of hemming through our own unthankfulness; for though prayer purchaseth blessings, giving praise doth keep the quiet possession of them.—Thomas Fuller.

If you live in the full sunshine of Christ, and have him not merely playing upon the surface of your mind, but sunk deep down in it, transforming your whole being, then some men will, as they look at you, be filled with strange longings, and will say, "Come, let us walk in the light of the Lord."—A. Maclaren.

Not a day passes over the earth but men and women of no note do great deeds, speak great words, and suffer noble sorrows. Of these obscure heroes, philosophers and martyrs the greater part will never be known till that hour when many that were great shall be small, and the small great.—Charles Reade.

I am certain that it is impossible to keep the law towards one's neighbor except one loves him. The law itself is infinite, reaching to such delicacies of action that the man who tries most will be the man most aware of defeat. We are not made for law, but for love. Love is law, because it is infinitely more than law.—George Macdonald.

We ought daily or weekly to dedicate a little time to the reckoning up of the virtues of our belongings—wife, children, friends—and contemplating them then in a beautiful collection. And we should do so now, that we may not pardon and love in vain and too late, after the beloved one has been taken away from us to a better world.—Jean Paul Richter.

Where Christ brings his cross he brings his presence; and where he is, none are desolate, and there is no room for despair. As he knows his own, so he knows how to comfort them, using sometimes the very grief itself, and straining it to a sweetness of peace unattainable by those ignorant of sorrow.—E. B. Browning.

I can not but think that the world would be better and brighter if our teachers would dwell on the duty of happiness as well as on the happiness of duty; for we ought to be as cheerful as we can, if only because to be happy ourselves is a most effectual contribution to the happiness of others.—Sir John Lubbock.

Sunday-School Lesson.

(Barbour and Simpson's Lesson Commentary. Phillips & Hunt, New York.)

LESSON VII.—August 18.

SAUL REJECTED BY THE LORD.

I. Sam. xv, 10-23.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Because thou hast rejected the word of the Lord, he hath also rejected thee from being king.—I. Sam. xv, 23.

TIME.—B. C. 1079.

PLACE.—Gilgal, in the valley of the Jordan.

10. Came the word of the Lord—The command came directly from God, either by a dream or a vision of the night.

11. It repenteth me—That this does not express any changeableness in the divine nature, but simply the sorrow of the divine love at the rebellion of sinners, is evident enough from verse 29. The repentance of God is the anthropopathic expression for the change of the divine proceedure with the opposite of what the holy and righteous will of God had determined under the condition of holy and righteous conduct by men, when on man's side there has been a change to the opposite of this condition without repentance. Hath not performed my commandments—They were to destroy the prey quite as thoroughly as they were to destroy the people. They were to enrich themselves in nothing. Now, this was a most important modification of the current practice in such things. But for this restriction the extermination of the Amalekites would have been a wild carnival of selfish passion. The extermination was to be carried into effect with all the solemnity of a judicial execution, and the soldiers were to have no benefit from it whatever. It grieved Samuel—Literally, it burned him; it thrilled his great soul to its profoundeth depths, for he saw that this rejection of Saul must result in a great calamity to Israel. Cried unto the Lord—Dean Stanley thinks there was something peculiar in Samuel's cry, "the wild scream or shriek of supplication," as it is repeatedly mentioned. At all events, the place and the action mark Samuel's fervent, earnest character.

12. Samuel rose early—The old man's affection for Saul overflowed in tears and cries of prayer all the night, but in the morning he rose up to fulfill his hard commission. No interview recorded in history has a deeper moral significance. Carmel ("park," or "garden")—A city in the mountains of Judah, three hours to the south of Hebron, slightly by east. It is now called Kurmul, and the names of the neighboring cities, Maon, Ziph, Juttah, Anab, etc., survive also. He set him up a place—The Vulgate translates, He erected for himself a triumphal arch. But the word translated place means a hand, and is used of Absalom's pillar, II. Sam. xviii, 18. Such is its meaning here. Saul erected at Carmel a monument, as a memorial of his victory over the Amalekites. It may have been an elevated hand, serving as an index to attract the attention of the passing traveler. Down to Gilgal—The going down would be about 3,000 feet in thirty miles. In the same place where Saul's kingdom had been confirmed it was to be taken from him; and where the warning of the consequences of disobedience had been uttered the sentence on disobedience was to be pronounced.

13. Blessed be thou—A form of salutation. I have performed the commandment of the Lord—This is the language of hypocrisy, by which the disobedient warrior presumes to hide his guilt. As if God would be satisfied with such a partial fulfillment as the man chose to accord to him. But it may be asked, Was not Saul's performance entitled to some recognition? Was it not partial obedience? We answer, No. It was not obedience at all. It was not done simply because it was God's will. Saul did just so much as seemed good to himself. It would be as well to ask if Ananias and Sapphira did not make a sacrifice to God, proportioned to the amount they brought to the apostles.

14. What meaneth then this—God had commanded the slaughter of all the Amalekites and the destruction of their property. There seems to be an obvious policy in this command to destroy all plunder, lest the Israelites should have been tempted to make marauding excursions upon their neighbors, and by degrees be trained up as an ambitious and conquering people. This danger the law-giver clearly foresaw if they should fall under a monarchy.

15. The people spared the best . . . to sacrifice—Even if the cattle spared were really intended as sacrifices to the Lord, not only the people, but Saul also, would have had their own interests in view (vide verse 9), since the flesh of thank-offerings was appropriated to sacrificial meals. Every word uttered by Saul seems to indicate the breaking down of his moral character. There is something thoroughly mean in his attempt to shift the responsibility of what was done from his own kingly shoulders to those of the people. One feels that, after the scene so forcibly described in this chapter, Saul must have forfeited his own self-respect, and that his downward career was henceforth almost inevitable.

16. Stay—Perhaps he was exasperated by Samuel's rebuke; but the prophet detains him, in order that he may hear his condemnation from God. This night—Gilgal was within fifteen miles of Ramah. Samuel might easily have come from Ramah that morning.

17. Little in thine own sight—As was manifest in his modest response to Samuel's first salutation. (Chap. ix, 21.)

18. Sinners the Amalekites—Sin was the ground of their doom. The special sin which singled them out for punishment was their opposition to the will of God as regards the destiny of his people Israel.

19. But didst fly upon the spoil—The "fly," as in xiv, 32, expresses eagerness, passionate craving.

20. Yea, I have obeyed—This last claim we take to have been a gross attempt to bribe the Lord, under a most offensive misconception of his nature and character, to acquiesce in the exemption he had made. For although stated as an original motive, it is palpably an after-thought suggested by the stringency of Samuel's rebuke. And have brought Agag—Bringing Agag he mentioned probably as a practical proof that he had carried out the war of extermination against the Amalekites. This was the common title of the Amalekite, as Pharaoh was of the Egyptian, and Abimelech of the Philistine kings. There is no reason to suppose that Saul spared the king for any other reason than that for which he retained the spoil, namely: to make a more splendid show at the sacrificial thanksgiving. Such was the Jewish tradition preserved by Josephus, who expressly says that Agag was saved for his stature and beauty, and such is the general impression left by the description of the celebration of the victory.

21. The chief of the things—Hebrew, the devoted things. Should have been—Saul admits that in sparing the spoil the people disobeyed God, but pleads that their motive was praiseworthy. Thy God—As if he had been showing honor to Samuel, as well as God, when he was disobeying both. There is an implied censure of Samuel in this phrase. Saul says that Samuel blames him for what was done in honor of Samuel's God; as if he had more zeal for the glory of God than was felt by Samuel.

22. To obey is better . . . to hearken than the fat of rams—For all the sacrifices and ceremonies of religion are to aid and promote obedience, not to be made a substitute for it. Disobedience can never be made a virtue, even though attended by thousands of sacrifices. Samuel's words here rise far above the special occasion, and contain the keynote of the long remonstrance of the prophets in all subsequent times against an exaggerated estimate of ceremonial above obedience. The very flow of the words recalls to us the form as well as the spirit of Amos and Isaiah.

23. As the sin of witchcraft—This gives the sense, but it would be well to transpose these words and follow the order of the Hebrew, thus: For the sin of witchcraft is rebellion and iniquity and idolatry and stubbornness. That is, Saul's rebellious and stubborn opposition to the word of God is as bad as the sins of witchcraft and idolatry; for these sins in their inmost nature and essence are refractoriness against the divine law. Either willful and presumptuous sin, whereby a man violently breaks loose from God's command and resists his authority; or, rather, perseverance or contumacy in sin, justifying it, and pleading for it, which was Saul's present crime. He hath also rejected thee—His repeated acts of disobedience had destroyed all hope of finding in Saul a religious and constitutional king, punctual in his conformity to the law of the land and to the divine commandment.

Temperance.

A pleasant surprise has come to "Rest Cottage." Miss Willard's home—a letter from Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, the W. C. T. U. round-the-world missionary, stating that she goes at once from Cape Town, Africa, to Hannah Whitall Smith in London—is doubtless there by this time. It is four and a half years since she sailed from San Francisco; years of hardship, but of marked success. That her heart is undaunted is shown by this extract from her letter: "As to prolonging my journey, let me say, It is my life-work, this pioneer business, and as long as my health continues I think I must keep at it till I have tried all the continents." In announcing this welcome news to local unions Miss Willard says: "How good and gracious is our God, who has guarded this brave heart during the more than five years since she left Boston to belt the world with the white ribbon of peace, purity and prohibition!.... Pray thankful prayers and sing the doxology for our home-coming sister, whom God has so greatly honored and whose work helps to hasten Christ's coming kingdom."

In 1827, a Virginia temperance society, in a series of resolutions, "advised young ladies to look with suspicion upon all young men who were fond of strong drink, and to frown them from all social circles"—advice which is not yet out of date.

"Prohibition is worth to us as a firm at least $10,000 a year in the general regularity of the men at their work." So Withall, Tatum & Co., employing 1,500 men in their glass factories at Millville, N. J., are reported as saying.

The Medical Review says: "The death-rate in the case of brewers, commercial travelers, and others exposed to the temptation of frequent alcoholic drinking, is six times greater than in all other industries combined."

A German lecture bureau is to be opened in Chicago by the National German Prohibition League. This will facilitate the securing of German temperance speakers where such are needed.

Waited Two Months.

ATLANTA, GA., December 21, 1888.

To make up our minds whether or no to send for a treatment of Compound Oxygen for a dear wife who was lying at the point of death. Oh, no, there was no time to wait; it was ordered by telegraph, and a marvelous cure was effected. But would such a cure last? Let us see.

"Your Compound Oxygen Treatment has restored my wife to perfect health. When I telegraphed for the Treatment we were very solicitous regarding the state of her health. She had been a very sick woman for eighteen months previous to the date your Oxygen Treatment arrived. Within ninety days' time she has been restored to perfect health. We have waited two months in order to see if the improvement was permanent before writing the facts to you, and we say with all candor that to Compound Oxygen is the credit due.

"I omitted to say that we cured our little ten-year-old boy of catarrh by the same Treatment."

WALTER T. FORBES.

We publish a brochure of 200 pages regarding the effect of Compound Oxygen on invalids suffering from consumption, asthma, bronchitis, dyspepsia, catarrh, hay fever, headache, debility, rheumatism, neuralgia; all chronic and nervous disorders. It will be sent, free of charge, to any one addressing Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch St., Phila., Pa.; or 120 Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal.

Missionary.

Armenian Village Work.

BY REV. HENRY MARDEN.

A few hours to the north and west of Marash, scattered in numerous villages among the peaks of the Taurus, are found from 15,000 to 20,000 nominal Christians of the Armenian church and race. They are ignorant and poor, and suffer fearfully at the hands of the merciless tax gatherer. During the past few years Catholic priests from Italy have entered upon the work of proselyting among them. We are not aware that they distribute any Bibles, preach any sermons or make any efforts for the spiritual or moral reformation of the people, but when the policeman has confiscated the flocks and the winter's provisions for taxes, after the free use of his club upon the prominent men of the village, the Catholic priest comes with offers of advance money to cover the taxes year by year, on the sole condition that the people enter their names upon his list of converts. In their desperation they accept his offer, and are saved from the absolute treatment of the police, but the wily priest has bound them hand and foot. By means of their hopeless debt to him, he is able to send them to the Turkish prison the moment they venture to renounce the Catholic faith, or in any way displease him. In due time he sends out his teachers to drill his spiritual conscripts in the routine of Catholic worship. The iron grasp of the priest seems to close every avenue to their hearts, and they henceforth want no Bible, no prayer and no exhortation to duty.

On the other hand, the Armenians, however ignorant or immoral, listen to the reading of the Bible with respectful attention, and generally welcome the efforts for their spiritual improvement.

The missionaries have recently taken new interest in these poor villagers. They have visited them at their homes, fed them when they were starving from the famine, sent Bibles to those who could read, and have now sent to them several preachers who go from house to house with the gospel message.

When one of these preachers comes to a village at night he is entertained in the best mud-house, and the villagers gather around the evening fire and listen with open eyes and breathless attention as he reads from his Bible by the light of a torch, and explains the way of salvation. His prayer is followed by a hearty "Amen" from several of his hearers, or some enthusiastic listener approvingly exclaims, "Health to your tongue!" Although these people feel a deep and almost superstitious reverence for the Bible, and cling tenaciously to the Christian names and the dead forms of the old church, yet their religion has very little influence upon their character, and their ignorance of religious truth is appalling. In one of the larger towns where there were four priests, a young man who had for years taken lessons of his priest, and who assisted him in the daily services of the church, was unable to tell whether Christ had already died, or was now in the world, or was yet to come! In the midst of such ignorance and spiritual darkness, when men for generations have believed that baptism and communion were a sure passport to heaven, it is hard to stir them into spiritual life.

We have a dozen boys gathered from these villages now in course of education. Several of them give promise of great usefulness as teachers or preachers.

The present is a time of seed-sowing. The good seed falls upon all kinds of ground, but we keep on sowing, and pray the Lord of the harvest that it may soon spring up and bear fruit.—Advance.

Briefs.

We are now in the middle of Self-denial Week. How are you enjoying it? Are you fasting and praying and denying self that you may give to the cause of missions? The fields are white unto the harvest; the laborers are few! Are we praying during this week to the Lord of the harvest to send forth more laborers? Many laborers are now ready, but they can not work without meat! Are we denying ourselves that these laborers may be sustained in their work and giving of our substance that they may receive their hire? These are solemn questions that we should ask ourselves during this time set apart for this special service of prayer and giving. The world is open to the church, but the church must supply the means to enter these open doors, and this is the special time for collecting the supplies and sending them to the front to meet the necessities of the soldiers who are already in the line of march upon the enemy. Let every reader of the ADVOCATE do his or her "level best" during the remainder of this week. Let there be importunate praying, earnest and sincere self-denial, and joyful giving of the proceeds of that self-denial, and we shall see the cause of God spring forward with new and astounding energy. Praying and self-denial and giving in the proper spirit will "pull the throttle-valve wide open," and the car of church progress will rush forward with a velocity never witnessed before. Let us all be humble, prayerful, self-denying, and give largely, and then we shall see things "great and mighty."

Dr. Brown-Sequard, the great French specialist in nervous diseases, claims to have discovered the elixir of life. He says that he has found a substance which will renew the life of the old and make strong the feeble. If the growing cells of young life can be injected into the exhausted and enfeebled life of aged persons, vitality will be imparted and youth renewed. The substance with which life can be revitalized is derived from certain organs of animals, which are reduced to a pulp in a mortar with distilled wator. This compound furnishes an essence, which may be used as a hypodermic injection, with the result as described. This sounds very nonsensical, and were it not for the great name from which this claim emanates, it would be treated with derision. As it is, all we can do is to hold our judgment in abeyance and await further explanations.

It would be a laudable ambition for every pastor deliberately and prayerfully and persistently to undertake to put this paper in every family in his charge before Conference. Why not be ambitious on such a line of work and undertake such a magnificent achievement? The influence of such an undertaking would thrill our Zion with an inspiration that would be felt tremendously everywhere! Suppose we try it.

Meridian District Conference.

Rev. R. D. Norsworthy is the presiding genius over this body of preachers and laymen. The annual meeting occured this yoar in Vossburg, a little city set on two little hills, with the railroad occupying the interlying valley. The place is quite small, and we believe that business was suspended and doors all closed that the citizens might be undisturbed in their enjoyment of the District Conference. The readers who are members of District Conferences will lodge that fact in their memories. It may help them next time to answer the question: "Where shall the next District Conference be held?" We have attended several Conferences this season, and the rule, so far, is, without exception, the larger the town, the smaller the Conference. The Conference at Vossburg was quite large, and the attendance of the citizens upon its sittings was very good indeed. Bishop Galloway arrived after one day's sessions had been held, and so skillfully did he guide and drive, that the chariot gracefully rolled into adjournment sine die, Saturday morning, at half-past ten o'clock. There is no perfection like that which comes from practice, and this was the tenth or eleventh Conference the Bishop has held in Mississippi this summer. In this Conference we met some of the old veterans of Mississippi Methodism, two of whom we knew well in boyhood—Bros. Godfrey and Hines.

The spiritual state of the church, as evinced by church work and brought out by questions, is improving all over the district. There is a growing increase in attendance upon the public services, and the social and family means of grace are being more freely used than formerly. One brother reported that family worship was held in every family in his charge, and another reported fifty-one infants baptized in one month. The brethron in this district seem more disposed to assist one another in protracted meetings than to call to their help the roving evangelist. We think that is best, provided the pastor don't neglect his own flock. There have been some conversions and additions to the membership in nearly all the circuits and stations, and the people of God aro looking forward to many more during the remaining months of tho Conference year.

In the matter of church-houses there has been some advancement, and as to parsonages, this district, with eighteen appointments, boasts of having fifteen comfortable homes for its preachers. Is that excelled by any other district? No financial system seems to have been generally adopted. One or two places have good systems, and hence keep up in money matters, while the majority have no system, and are behind in their finances. It seems to be a difficult matter to adjust any system to the circumstances which control many country appointments. One brother, in the simplicity of his faith in his stewards, did not know anything about their methods of raising church funds. The ADVOCATE has increased a little in circulation on the district, but there are large communities of Methodists, and we heard of one circuit of three hundred members, where not one copy is taken. If our own people don't support our own institutions, then who is to do it? Let not our pastors become discouraged about those waste places! Keep the subject of church literature before the people, and afterwhile "waters will break out and streams in the desert." The Sunday-schools are well attended and our own periodicals generally used. The Conference passed a unanimous vote that all our Sunday-schools shall use the new hymn book. These were elected to the Annual Conference: S. S. Cope, L. P. Brown, W. S. Davis and J. S. Turnor. The presiding elder, R. D. Norsworthy, without the fear of the Bishop and his cabinet before his eyes, had the temerity to announce that he did not intend to be presiding elder of this district any longer than the next Conference. Thereupon the brethren passed a resolution commending his administration and recommending him heartily to some other field. After the Conference adjourned the Bishop delivered his address on Christian Education to a very large audience, but did not take a collection. He has raised up to this writing $25,000.

The editor, in company with Bro. Chambers, ran up to Enterprise and spent the Sabbath. He enjoyed the hospitality of Dr. Rencher and family, and also that of Bro. L. J. Davis, preaching Sunday morning to an attentive audience, and in the evening making the address at the anniversary of the Woman's Missionary Society of Enterprise. The audience was large and the music superb. Thus endeth the account of another pleasant District Conference.

The Last Command.

"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Do you hear this command of your Lord? Do not these words, coming in sparkling freshness from the fountain of divine love, bring to your heart the inspiration to a renewed consecration to this noblest of all works? Do you recognize, in these words, the confidence your Lord has in you, in thus committing into your hands the work of evangelizing the world? Have you faith that the command carries with it the promise of equipment and is itself the earnest of victory? Have you forgotten the one only purpose for which the church was organized and for which it exists? Are you sitting down careless and unconcerned amidst the havoc sin is producing around you? Are you indifferent to the perils of dying men, the agony of whose hearts and the hunger of whose souls load every breeze that comes to you from heathen lands with wails of despair? Will you sit by the way-sides of life and see millions pass by, posting to irrevocable woe, and interpose no obstacle to their ruin? How can you to-day look Christ in the face, and say, "I have done what I could"? Do you read these last words of your Lord, and say, "I can't go into all the world"?

Reader, what every Christian needs to-day is more love for souls—love for the souls the Father loved, when he sent his Son into the world—love for tho souls Jesus loved, when he endured the agony of the cross—love for the souls the Holy Spirit loves, when he makes intercessions with the unutterable groanings. If the exercises—the prayors and songs and self-denials and gifts—of this week shall awaken in the hearts of God's people a deeper love for souls, it will be a result which will quicken the life and accelorate the progress of the church through many long years to come.

Oh, let us open our hearts, that the spiritual power and reality of the truth "as it is in Jesus" may give us the proper conception of the true value of human souls, and the proper estimate of the nobleness of the work of saving souls, and the proper view, that money invested in this work is, by a divine alchemy, transmuted into life eternal to the hopeless sons and daughters of sin!

We are indebted to Rev. R. M. Saunders for the annual catalogue of his thriving female school, East Mississippi Female College, located at Meridian, Miss. A full attendance last year, and the promise of larger attendance this coming year.

In Memoriam.

Martha Ellen Thompson, wife of Rev. T. C. Bradford, was born in St. Helena parish, La., May 19, 1849; married to T. C. Bradford, December 31, 1865; joined the Methodist Church in her youth, but was not converted until 1876, at a protracted meeting held by the writer while pastor of the church at Beauregard, Miss., whither Bro. Bradford had moved, and where he was teaching at the time. She was a lovely, sweet-spirited girl, and developed into a beautiful Christian woman, possessing the faculty of making and keeping friends wherever she went. For five years after Bro. Bradford entered the Mississippi Conference, she was a faithful, consecrated itinerant's wife, cheerfully bearing the burdens and privations incident thereto; and, as a true helpmeet, encouraging him in his labors.

When Bro. Bradford was elected to the prosidency of Port Gibson Female College, she roadily adjusted herself to the changed condition of things, and assumed the delicate and onerous duties of matron of that institution, and discharged them with such motherly kindness, tact and dignity as to secure the undying affection of the girls committod to her care, and the confidence and lasting gratitude of a large circle of friends and patrons.

Bro. Bradford was in 1887 transferred to the Chilocco School, in tho Indian Territory. With cheerfulness, she accepted the situation, and bravely met all the toil and self-sacrifice incidont to her position. Enduring the isolation from pleasant and congenial society, she wrought as gracefully as if it were in the most luxurious and delightful atmosphere of culturo and refinement. Bro. Bradford's failing hoalth necessitated another transfer, and he was placed in the Florida Conference. With the same sweet submission, she accepted her lot. In fact, as her now sadly bereaved husband says, she was "the light of his life and the joy of his home." "Twenty-three years a loved and loving wife."

Alas! that a life so sweet, pure and womanly should be so suddenly cut off. They had been in Florida a short time—only a few months—when suddenly, without a moment's warning, just after supper and family prayers, which were always held at the table, she was called to rest in heaven. Bro. Bradford writes these particulars of her death:

We had just had supper and an evening prayer at the table, and I walked out on the front porch, leaving Mattie and the children at the table, she nursing the baby. She suddenly said to Hezzie, who was sitting near her, "Take the baby quick, and call your papa," and leaned back in her chair and quietly expired. I reached her in time to keep her from falling to the floor; but I doubt if she breathed more than once or twice after she was attacked.

Bro. Bradford also says:

I thank God for her pure, sweet, loving Christian life. Whenever the occasion offered, she was glad to testify to her love for her Savior. A short while before her death she was suddenly and violently attacked with congestion of the lungs, and we thought she would not live an hour; but she was almost as suddenly relieved by violent remedies. Just twenty-four hours after the first attack, a second came on, and her life was again despaired of, but she was again relieved. After that, in view of a third and fatal attack, she said to me, "My darling, in case anything happens to me, I want to say to you now, My Savior is just as precious to me as he can be."

How comforting that assurance to the loved ones left behind! Sister Bradford was the mother of twelve children, nine of whom survive her. Oh, her example! May its Christian symmetry and beauty inspiro hor girls to emulation of her virtues, and load the procious boys to strive oarnestly to meot "mother" in heaven, where no parting is, and where sorrow and death never come! May our heavenly Father's grace be so abundantly given as to enable our dear brother to find comfort in his sad bereavement!

How to Study Your Sunday-School Lesson.

While attending the District Conference, at McComb City, recently, the writer promised to give through the columns of the ADVOCATE a plan of studying the Sunday-school lesson adopted by the teachers' meeting of Carondelet Street Church. This plan is taken from "The Modern Sunday-School," by Rov. J. H. Vincent, D. D. (now Bishop Vincent, of the Methodist Episcopal Church)—a book that every Sunday-school teacher should have. Dr. Vincent introduced this plan through the Chicago Teacher, in 1866; and if there is a simpler or better one, I have not seen it.

THE PLAN.

P. P., P., P. D., D., D., D.

Under these four P's and four D's the lesson is analyzed as follows:

P. P.—Parallel Passages. Find with your reference Bible or concordance all of the Scripture that will throw light on the lesson.

P.—Places. Where was this parable spoken? At what place did the incident occur? Where situated, size, distance and direction from Jerusalem?

P.—Persons. Who wrote the lesson? To whom was it written? What persons are mentioned, and what do you know about them?

D.—Dates. In what year of the world and of Christ did these things occur? Age of persons mentioned? If in the lesson, what day, hour, or season?

D.—Doings. What is the subject of the lesson? What is mentioned as the principal thing? What did each person in the lesson do? Who had the most to do? Why?

D.—Doctrines. What truths about God, man, character, conduct, the future and the present, are here taught?

D.—Duties. What duties to God, man, self, to church, nation, neighbor, enemy, friend, world, old, young, good and bad, are here taught?

I would advise all who wish to try this plan to take pencil and paper and put down, one under the other, the eight letters thus:

P. P.....
P.....
P.....
D.....
D.....
D.....
D.....

Then read over your lesson, and as you come to places mentioned, put them down opposite the third P., and in the same way put down opposite the fourth P. all persons mentioned in the lesson. If the date of the lesson is given in the lesson, put it down; if not, it will remain open until you look up your parallel passages, when you will discover it with other information, which will surprise and delight the student. After using the pencil and paper a few times, the mind will become accustomed to this plan of analysis, and with a single reading the mind will locate each place, person, date, doing, doctrine and duty, when it meets it.

To anyone who has not tried a plan of this kind, we can assure them, if they will try it, they will learn more in one hour than they have been able to learn in a week's hard, but aimless study. Try it.

Centenary College.

I was one of three appointed a our last Conference to visit this institution of learning. I had the pleasur of being present at the late commence ment part of the time, and am sorr that I was prevented from being pres ont the last day. From all that I coul see and hear, Centenary has had prosperous session—better than fo many years past. Tho outlook now i certainly encouraging, and the futur is full of hope. I was permitted t meet with the Board of Trustees i their open session, and was impresse with the fact that the endowmen money was in good and safe hands

No one need fear to give their money to Centenary endowment; it will no be misapplied or lost. Dr. Hunnicut is in the right place. He was born t be president of some college, and w should all rejoice that he now ha charge of Centenary. The fact is, th president of a college should be larger than all the buildings. Mere brick and mortar will not make a good school. Spurgeon is a thousand times larger than the Tabernacle in which he preaches.

The cause of education is on a boom in our two Conferences. One hundred and sixty thousand dollars raised for the endowment for the two colleges. Let the good work go on!

F. M. FEATHERSTON.

A Preacher Falls in the Pulpit.

To-day a scene was witnessed at Shiloh Church that will dwell in the memory of those present while life lasts. Bro. Hurst is the prencher on the Rocky Springs circuit, and in very had health, but has been laboring earnestly and faithfully through it all. He failed to meet his last appointment, and thore was some grumbling, and today's appointment he was determined to meet, ill as he was. In the beginning of his sermon he said that he was not able to preach, and ought to be in bed. His text, "Add first the righteousness of God, and all else shall be added unto you;" and he was proceeding so logically, and in the demonstration of the Spirit, that it was hard to believe that he was suffering so much. He had been preaching just fifteen minutes, when, in a feeble voice, he said, "I can proceed no farther," and immediately pitched forward on the desk, insensible, but was immediately caught before falling and eased to a seat. It looked for a while that the end had come, but after a long time recovered sufficiently to be driven a couple of miles to a neighbor's house.

SHILOH.

AUGUST 4, 1889.

(We sincerely trust that our good Bro. Hurst will suffer no special inconvenience from his sudden attack.)

That College.

Winona will offer forty acres and much money to secure the location of Mississippi Methodist College. Kosciusko was represented by a strong committee before the Joint Committee, in recent session, and Kosciusko's claims were well presented. The success of the college is assured. No step backward! Onward we go!

Presiding elders are to take charge of the campaign in their respective districts, appoint educational meetings in each pastoral charge, and call to their help such aid as they can procure; besides they are to appoint one or two mass meetings in each district, where Bishop Galloway will be present and speak in the interest of the college. An address to the church in Mississippi will soon be published by Bishop Galloway in behalf of the enterprise. We will round up tho year with the endowment fund secured.

Another Missionary to Japan.

Our fund to send another missionary to Japan is growing gradually. Why should it not grow faster? Have you sent your $10? Can't you spare that much to help the Lord's cause on this line? Won't you send it right away? Who next? The following have contributed up to going to press:

Reported previously	$175
Mrs. Isabella Coffrey	10
A Lady (collected)	50
A Lover of the Cause	10
Cash from Camp Ground	15
F. D. VanValkenburgh	10
W. B. Thomson	10
Frank Daniels	10
A Friend	10

The Memorial Tablets.

The following additional amounts have been subscribed for the McTyeire and Parker Memorial Tablets:

A Friend—cash	$ 25
Rev. J. A. Millor, from the Homer District—cash	4 70
	50
Chas. J. Wolfe	50
Ph. Werlein	5 00
	$10 45
Previously reported	22 00
Total	$32 45

Personal and Otherwise.

See what an advertisement of schools this paper presents this week. It shows that school teachers want the patronage of people who read the ADVOCATE. It also shows that the teachers consider our readers to be a class whose patronage is worth having, and also that the ADVOCATE and its readers "are sound" on the educational question. Now, count the schools advertised, and, as you can not patronize all, select the best and get your boys and girls ready to start with the first day of the coming session.

Don't fail to read Bishop Wilson's "Appeal for Japan," on the second page of this paper, and then look how our fund to send a missionary there is growing; and then send us your contribution to add to the list. This is the Lord's cause, and you have some of his money, and he makes a demand on you for it now!

Bishop Granbery has lost a daughter, and at last accounts had a son extremely ill.

Rev. R. W. Erwin, the recently elected president of Galloway Female College, Ark., died a short time ago in Memphis. He was buried in Nashville.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, writing from Benton, Miss., August 2, says:

Our meeting in Beaton closed Sunday, July 28. Bro. Jo. Jones was with me six days; preached eighteen sermons. Thousands of persons heard him. Scores of sinners converted; over one hundred applied for membership in the church. I baptized between forty and fifty candidates for church membership on Sunday—last day of the meeting; four of them by immersion. Over sixty received into the Methodist Church in Benton last Sunday. We are in the midst of a good meeting at New Hope, near Deasonville. Prospect for a grand revival good. Pray for us. God bless you!

Books.

THE BLOOD OF JESUS. By P. Waldenstrom, Ph. D. John Martensen, publisher, Chicago.

This is a small pamphlet containing meditations on all the New Testament passages in which the expression, "The blood of Jesus" occurs. From these meditations the author concludes that the expression means only the life of Jesus given in sacrifice for sin.

THE RECONCILIATION. By P. Waldenstrom, Ph. D. John Martensen, publisher, Chicago. Price, seventy-five cents.

In this little book the author discusses the question, Who was to be Reconciled, God or Man, or God and Man? The gist of the book is announced in these words: "The Scriptures teach that no change took place in God's disposition towards man, in consequence of his sin; that, therefore, it was not God who needed to be reconciled to man, but that it was man who needed to be reconciled to God; and that, consequently, reconciliation is a work which proceeds from God, and is directed towards man, and aims not to appease God, but to cleanse man from sin and to restore him to a right relation with God."

THE LORD IS RIGHT. By P. Waldenstrom, Ph. D. John Martensen, publisher, Chicago. Price, $1 25.

In this book we have twenty meditations on the twenty-fifth Psalm. The writer sets forth in plain language, and in a devotional spirit, what he conceives to be the Bible truths concerning the real character of God, the nature of the forgiveness of sin and the varied experiences of a godly life.

The author of the three fore-mentioned works is professor of theology and of Biblical Hebrew and Greek in the College of Gefle, Sweden. They have been translated by an American minister, and the translation revised by J. G. Princell.

From the Professor of English in Vanderbilt University:

NASHVILLE, TENN., June 22, 1889.
For four or five years I have every year spent, at least, one day in the class-room of Messrs. Wall and Mooney's School. I have questioned their classes, and heard them recite in English, Mathematics, German, Greek and Latin; and I do not hesitate to call their work excellent. Better trained pupils it would be hard to find. The moral culture is equally good.

DISCOVERED.

BY HELEN THAYER HUTCHESON.

On the slope of a hill in the edge of a wood,
Bloomed a tall nodded a sisterhood
Of pale-tinted Blossoms that nobody knew,
Saving the Wind and the Sun and the Dew.

The Wind blew back the curtains of dawn,
And the Sun looked out when the Wind was gone,
And the flowers with the tears of the Dew were wet.
When the Wind was flown, and the Sun was set.

The Wind brought a wild Bee out of the west,
To dream for an hour on a Blossom's breast,
And the Sun left a Butterfly hovering there
With wide wings poised on the golden air.

And the Dew brought a Firefly to whirl and dance,
In his own bewildering radiance,
Round the slender green pillars that rocked as he flew,
And shook off the tremulous globes of the Dew;

The creatures of air gave the secret to me.
I followed the hum of the heavy-winged Bee,
I followed the Butterfly's wavering flight,
I followed the Firefly's bewildering light.

I found the pale Blossoms, that nobody knew;
They trusted the Sun, and the Wind, and the Dew,
The Dew and the Wind trusted Firefly and Bee.
I give you the secret they gave unto me.

Little Helen's Mite-Box.

Helen's grandma was a kind, good old lady, and when she read in the ADVOCATE that the women and children of the church were gathering money to build homes for our preachers, she wanted to help. She called her grandchildren together, organized them into a home-builders' society, and wrote for mite-boxes. Then two or three of the neighboring children joined, and they had quite a good society. As they lived in the country, and could not get to church when the waters were high, as they frequently were in winter, the Pecan Grove Home-builders—so they called themselves—met each month at the house of Helen's grandmother, who read the leaflets to them, and told them what the children everywhere were doing to help. Their meetings were very pleasant indeed, and they became very much interested in getting all they could in their mite-boxes—and quite a neat sum of money they sent in each quarter. Many larger societies have sent less, because the members were not so much in earnest. Little Helen, a member of grandma's society, was a pretty little girl only five years old. They called her the "Pet Lamb," she was so sweet and gentle. She became very much in earnest about filling her mite-box, and was so industrious everybody was willing to give something for little Helen's mite-box. But she did not depend on that. She made her money herself in every way she could. And it is wonderful how many useful things children can find to do when they set their minds to it. Helen had a pet hen whose eggs were all her own. These she sold, and put the money in her box. She picked up chips, and mamma paid her for it. And, though such a little girl, she picked one hundred pounds of cotton. It must have taken a great deal of patience and perseverance to have done that. But Helen was a brave little girl and went to work in good earnest; and we can not do anything unless we are really in earnest. Grandma went away to visit one of her children. She was gone but a few days, but when she came back she found her precious little grandchild was dead. She was sick only three days. Every one grieved very much, though they knew she had gone to join the angel band that "do always behold the face of our Father in heaven," for they loved little Helen so dearly, and missed her sweet, bright face.

Grandma was heart-broken, for little Helen was her darling, her pet grandchild, the one always ready to wait on her, to bring her a drink of water, to do anything for her so small a child could do; and she was always so happy to wait on grandma.

After her death, they found little Helen's mite-box with one dollar in it. Grandma wept over it, for she remembered how bright and eager her sweet little Helen had been to fill the box. She sent the dollar to help build a home for dear Bro. Methvin out among the wild Indians. Then she put little Helen's mite-box on the mantlepiece, where it stays all the time now.

She sells the eggs of Helen's hen, and puts the money in the box in memory of the dear child who was always delighted to put her hen's money in her box. All the family and friends, when they see her box upon the mantlepiece, remember sweet little Helen, and put in a few cents in memory of her. Whenever she finds one dollar in the box, the grandmother sends it away to be used where it will do most good in building homes for our preachers. Thus little Helen's mite-box stands on the mantlepiece gathering pennies for God, and the good the dear child tried to do lives after her.

Ah, children, you can not tell how much good you may do in trying to do the little things for God your tiny hands may find to do, nor how much love and happiness you may bring into the world by the words you speak and the little deeds of kindness you may do. To hand grandma a drink of water is a little thing to do, but she will remember it if you do it cheerfully and lovingly. LUCINDA B. HELM.

MR. EDITOR: We are two little girls living in Crystal Springs, and we want to tell you about our success in raising missionary money. We belong to two societies: One a Baptist society, called the "Bethel Sunbeams," and the other a Methodist society, called the "Bethesda Juveniles." Last Sunday one of us joined the "Crystal Springs Juveniles," and, of course, the other one will have to join too; for, although we are not related, we love each other so much, that we always try to do everything just alike. It was suggested to us, by a member of one of the societies, that we each earn a nickel and then invest it in something that we could sell, and see how much money we could make off of it. Well, we earned the nickels, and then bought a dime's worth of sugar, and a young lady made it into candy for us. She fixed it real niee, plaited it, and put it up in little sticks, nicely wrapped in tissue paper, and placed them on a decorated waiter, and we carried it around and sold it all out for a dollar, which we are going to send to the Bethesda Juvenile Society next Sunday. Before we say goodbye, we want to tell you that we love to read the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and we hope you will come up to our camp meeting, which begins August 8.

Your little friends,
LILIAN W. KETHLEY,
MATTIE N. WHITAKER.
CRYSTAL SPRINGS, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: Here comes a little Mississippi girl knocking at the door. Please do let me in. I have three sisters and four brothers. I study grammar, geography, history, arithmetic and dictionary. We are orphans. Our mother died on December 31. We have preaching every month. Our preacher's name is Rev. W. H. Eckles. We love him very much. I am going to school now. Mr. Wirt Scott is our teacher. I was glad to see a letter from my friend, Daisy Lester, as she was a school-mate; hope she will write again soon. What book in the Bible don't mention the Lord's name? I hope some of the little cousins will answer my question. I will close for fear of the waste-basket. I remain, as ever, Your friend, MAUD HALL.

Household.

HELPING AND HINDERING AT HOME.—It is very easy to add to people's burdens. A single word may do it; indeed, even an ugly, frowning silence may do it. When mother is tired with her overwork and overcare—so tired that she can scarcely keep on her feet—and you come in and find something not exactly to your fastidious taste, it is very easy by a word, or even by a look, almost to break her heart. You have only to criticise something, or ask why something is not different, or to show your disapproval by a look, or by pushing back your plate, or by some other gesture of contempt.

On the other hand, it is just as easy to lighten people's burdens. Suppose the same circumstances—you notice things not exactly right, but you see the weary and perplexed look on mother's face, and you speak kindly; you make no complaint, nor any allusion to the thing that is not precisely to your taste. You are cheerful and show by no word or look or gesture any feeling of disapprobation, or disappointment. You do all you can to chase the wrinkles from mother's brow and the weariness and perplexities from her face.

HEROISM AT HOME.—How useless our lives seem to us sometimes. How we long for an opportunity to perform some great action. We become tired of the routine of home life, and imagine we would be far happier in other scenes. We forget that the world bestows no titles as noble as father, mother, sister or brother.

In the sacred precincts of home we have many chances of heroism. The daily acts of self-denial for the good of a loved one, the gentle word of soothing for another's trouble, the care for sick, may all seem as nothing; yet who can tell the good they may accomplish? Our slightest word may have an influence over another for good or evil.

We are daily sowing the seed which will bring forth some sort of harvest. Well will it be for us if the harvest will be one we will be proud to garner. If some one in that dear home can look back in after years, and, as he tenderly utters our name, say, "Her words and example prepared me for a life of usefulness, to her I owe my present happiness," we may well say, "I have not lived in vain." —National Presbyterian.

A SMALL LIBRARY.—"Every husbandman needs a small library to hold at his services the wisdom of ages. Such a library will eat less than a goat and elevate the plane of order and comfort in the family. The family is pre-eminently an agricultural institution. It is not beyond the reach of happy progress and every expanding improvement." So said our venerable and clear-headed Dr. Daniel Lee, and Prof. J. P. Steele, the able agricultural editor of the Moline (Ala.) Register, thus endorses the sentiment: There is a world of good sense in this paragraph, yet how seldom this idea is carried out! As a too common rule the first thing a farmer thinks of buying when he gets well-to-do is a span of dashing fine horses and a carriage to match, and the next thing is a piano. In very many cases, after these things have been secured, you could easily carry all his books under one arm as far as you wanted to go.—Exchange.

BITTER WORDS.—A single bitter word may disquiet an entire family for a whole day. One surly glance casts a gloom over the household, while a smile, like a gleam of sunshine, may light up the darkest and weariest hours. Like unexpected flowers which spring up along our path, full of freshness, fragrance and beauty, so kind words and gentle acts and sweet dispositions made glad the sacred spot called home. No matter how humble the abode, if it be sweetened with kindness and smile, the heart will turn lovingly toward it from all the tumults of the world, and home, if it be ever so homely, will be the dearest spot beneath the circuit of the sun.—Evangelical Messenger.

Sufferers

FROM Stomach and Liver derangements—Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick-Headache, and Constipation—find a safe and certain relief in Ayer's Pills. In all cases where a cathartic is needed, these Pills are recommended by leading physicians.

Dr. T. E. Hastings, of Baltimore, says: "Ayer's Pills are the best cathartic and aperient within the reach of my profession."

Dr. John W. Brown, of Oceana, W. Va., writes: "I have prescribed Ayer's Pills in my practice, and find them excellent. I urge their general use in families."

"For a number of years I was afflicted with biliousness which almost destroyed my health. I tried various remedies, but nothing afforded me any relief until I began to take Ayer's Pills."—G. S. Wanderlich, Scranton, Pa.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for the past thirty years, and am satisfied I should not be alive to-day if it had not been for them. They cured me of dyspepsia when all other remedies failed, and their occasional use has kept me in a healthy condition ever since."—T. P. Brown, Chester, Pa.

"Having been subject, for years, to constipation, without being able to find much relief, I at last tried Ayer's Pills, and deem it both a duty and a pleasure to testify that I have derived great benefit from their use. For over two years past I have taken one of these Pills every night before retiring. I would not willingly be without them."—G. W. Bowman, 26 East Main st., Carlisle, Pa.

"Ayer's Pills have been used in my family upwards of twenty years, and have completely verified all that is claimed for them. In attacks of piles, from which I suffered many years, they afforded me greater relief than any medicine I ever tried."—Thomas F. Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

APPLEWHITE—Mrs. NANCY APPLEWHITE, daughter of Benjamin and Frances Paxton, born November 11, 1837; married Dr. Rufus R. Applewhite, October 30, 1861; went home to God, June 13, 1889. She was the mother of four children; two little girls went before her. She had the care of four orphan nephews, some of them verging into manhood. These, with her bereft husband and two sons, mourn her loss. She was given to hospitality, and her house was often the weary preachers' restful home, and the poor and needy found her a friend indeed. She was not a member of New Hope Church, but was one of its best friends and supporters. She was never known to speak evil of any one. Her life was a steady, consistent, onward movement, that did not depend upon outward circumstances, for "her life was hid with Christ in God," a beautiful, symmetrical Christian life. Such a life closed by a triumphant passing away, not a death.

When her boys came home from school, she had them to take their places near her bed, so she could look at them. She committed them to God with "a silent hymn and fervent prayer," and assured her stricken husband that "all was well" with her. The transition of such a Christian is a sign-post put down on the road of life to tell the wayworn traveler, "This is the way to heaven." Without such triumphant deaths we would soon lose our way. We deeply sympathize with the bereaved family in this sad hour, when the brightest star has been stricken from their firmament, and the light of their home is shrouded in gloom. May the faithfulness of her life and the triumphs of her death rest upon the sorrowing ones as a halo forever, "moving them to heaven."

Her pastor, WM. HOOVER.

KELY—ZERILDIA SALASTINE KELY, daughter of James S. and Amantha Harper, was born in Copiah county, Miss., near old Crystal Springs Church, February 25, 1847; united in marriage with T. J. Kely, February 9, 1869; emigrated to Texas, 1885. After intense suffering of typhoid fever, for thirty days, she quietly passed to her reward, July 7, 1889, near Spring Hill, Navarro county.

Sister Kely professed faith in Christ at the age of fifteen years; but, for reasons peculiar to herself, did not unite with the church, but lived a quiet, consistent life. On being interrogated a few days prior to her death in regard to her future prospects, she expressed a willingness to depart, saying she feared not death. On the day of her death she gave her husband charge concerning her funeral; shortly after closed her eyes in death without a struggle.

Sister Kely leaves a husband, four children and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her departure. Her remains were interred in Post Oak Grove Cemetery to await the resurrection morn. Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord!

J. W. FRENCH

MOORE—The sad intelligence has just reached me of the death of ROBERT MOORE, son of one of our most prominent laymen in North Louisiana, J. M. Moore. Just thirteen months ago Bro. Moore laid his devoted wife to rest, and now his sorrow has been doubled by the death of her oldest son. Robert was an exceptionally good boy. He was a manly, noble, dutiful son. He died holding on to the cross. He said to his father, "I am ready; God's will be done." Oh, how hard to part with such a promising boy! He had been a blessing to his parents, and would have been a blessing to the church and the world had he lived. God wanted him, and took him just as he was blooming out into manhood. Mother and son have met to part no more. W. WIMBERLY.

JACKSON—MARY MARTHA, infant daughter of Willie and Mrs. Jennie Jackson, was born August 20, 1888, and, after several days of intense suffering, died June 25, 1889, aged ten months and five days. Some one has said that a babe in heaven is a babe forever. If this be true, how happy ought these parents to be, as they now have two little ones awaiting them on the other shore. May these weeping parents look up through their tears and behold him who doeth all things well, and realize that he is the same in wisdom, mercy and love, when he takes away as when he gives!

FRANK M. KEEN.

WORTHY—Mrs. EDITH J. WORTHY, daughter of T. H. and Jane Loflin, was born in Covington county, Miss., September 2, 1856. When about fifteen years old, she joined the Methodist Church, was converted, and remained true to her Christian obligations to the day of her death. On November 8, 1877, she was married to Mr. J. H. Worthy. Three children were born unto them, one of whom preceded his mother to heaven. Her husband and two little girls remain to mourn her loss. For two years past Sister Worthy's health has been very bad, and for, at least, nine months past she has been confined to her house, most of the time to her room and bed. She was a great sufferer, but bore her afflictions with Christian fortitude, and was always happy in the love of Christ, her Savior. During her last prostration, which lasted for three weeks, she realized that she would never recover, and frequently spoke of heaven as her home, and of death and the grave as simply the doorway. On Saturday night we thought she was dying. I remained to talk, sing and pray with her until past midnight; then went to my room to prepare for my Sabbath duties. When I saw her early Sunday morning, one of her first utterances was: "Bro. Lewis, I thought I would have been at home this morning, but God hasn't seen fit to take me yet." Monday she said to me: "I am so tired waiting; I am restless to go home and be at rest."

She fell sweetly asleep in Jesus, Thursday, July 18, 1889. Her remains were laid away in the family burying-grounds in Brandon, Miss.

R. F. LEWIS.

VENABLES—Died, as she lived, in faith and obedience, at her late home, St. Helena parish, La., on April 11, 1889, Mrs. LYDIA P., wife of William F. Venables.

This good woman was twice married: First to James A. Thompson, December, 1845. Being left a widow with two children, she was again married, February 22, 1851, to her now bereft husband, whom, with eight children, she leaves to mourn her loss. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, under the ministry of Allan Castle, in 1845; was converted at a camp meeting, near Greensburg, La., in 1859, or 1860, which happy state she maintained until death released her pure spirit from a long afflicted body. P. HOWARD.

DAVIS—Died, June 13, 1889, at his home, near Grand Bay, Ala., Mr. HANSFORD DAVIS. Mr. Davis was born in South Carolina; came to Alabama in early youth, and to Grand Bay about forty years ago. He had been ailing for some time, but managed to superintend his farm work till January last, since which time he has been confined to his house, and for several months past to his bed. Though a great sufferer, he seldom complained, but bore his pain with fortitude, patience and submission. About three weeks previous to death, he professed faith in Christ, and bore testimony to the power of God's grace to save, even at the eleventh hour. He leaves a wife, five sons and four daughters to mourn their loss.

J. D. MOONEY.

WILLIAMS—Sweet little IRMA WILLIAMS, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Williams, of Arcola, Miss., has left the fond embraces of loving parents and grandparents and has gone to heaven to live with Jesus and the angels. She was about seven months old, and departed this life July 18, 1889. She was beautiful and lovely in appearance and disposition. She was too pure for earth, and is taken from its evils. She is safe in heaven, where loved ones expect to meet her. Be comforted, beloved; your most precious jewel is with God in heaven. J. H. SHUMAKER.

BURNETT—The following resolutions were adopted by the Cedar Grove Sunday-school:

Whereas, The angel of death has visited our Sunday-school, and claimed for his prize our worthy young member, CHARLEY BURNETT, twelve years of age, who came to his death by being drowned in Leaf River, on July 17, 1889; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in his death our Sunday-school has lost a worthy member; his parents, a child who was ever affectionate; his school-mates, a kind and courteous companion; his teacher, a most respectful and obedient scholar—a boy whom all loved.

Resolved, That we deeply feel and mourn his loss, yet not as those who have no hope, for our loss of him, we trust, is his eternal gain—where sickness, sorrow, death and parting are no more.

Resolved, That we tender to the family, friends and relatives our heartfelt sympathy, and pray the Lord to heal and comfort the wounded hearts caused by this sad event; and may this teach us the importance of our duty to our fellow-beings during our stay on earth!

and money experimenting with doubtful remedies, when Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is so positively certain in its curative action as to warrant its manufacturers in supplying it to the public, as they are doing through druggists, under a duly executed certificate of guarantee, that it will accomplish all it is recommended to do, or money paid for it will be promptly returned. It cures torpid liver, or biliousness, indigestion, or dyspepsia, all humors, or blood taints, from whatever cause arising, skin and scalp diseases, scrofulous affections (not excepting consumption, or lung scrofula), if taken in time and given a fair trial.

A Unique Spectacle.

One of the unique spectacles at present attracting the attention of mechanics as well as ordinary observers, in New York, is a five-story building, the machinery of which, on every floor, is run apparently without motive power. One sees no shafting, no connection between the revolving wheels of lathes, punches and other forms of mechanism that are in operation; and nothing of the labyrinth of pulleys and belts to which the eye has become accustomed in all factories. Electricity has taken the place of steam wires, of belts, and a curious little motor supplies the power. The building referred to is used for the manufacture of all kinds of electric motors. In the cellar is a boiler and a small engine which runs a dynamo of seventy-five horse power. From the latter wires are distributed to the floor above, where are small motors that may be run or not, according to the needs of the establishment. These wires are connected with each motor by a key which enables the workman to turn the current on or off at will. Four of these tiny mechanisms furnish work for eighty men. Electricity is found to be cheaper than steam because there is a saving in the use of coal, engine, belting, pulleys, etc., and hence power. Another advantage is that electric wires may be stretched for several miles, and the motor at that distance from the dynamo will be run as well as if it were in the next room. It is said that the power of a dynamo goes about three times as far as that of an engine of equal horse power, and it is believed that this is the only establishment in the world worked in this manner—that is, by wires instead of shafts and belting. Verily the revolutions of art and science are becoming more miraculous every day.—Domestic Journal.

The Discovery of Oxygen.

"Fixed air" and "combustible air" had been speculated upon, and "the air that is left after combustion" had attracted attention. But the phenomena of this kind, inconsistent as they were with the phlogistic theory, had not been sufficient to overthrow it. The first germ of Lavoisier's theory on these matters was embodied in a sealed packet which he deposited with the Academy in 1770. Recognizing that the calcination of metals could not take place without the access of air, and that the freer the access the more rapid the calcination, he "began to suspect," as he expresses himself, that some elastic fluid contained in the air was susceptible, under many circumstances, of fixing itself and combining with metals, and that to the addition of that substance were due calcination and the increase in weight of metals converted into calxes. From this thought came, after much groping with erroneous conclusions, the idea that air is a compound containing a vital part and another part, and that it is the vital part that is absorbed. The behavior of charcoal when burning in oxygen pointed to the nature of that substance and to the true theory of combustion. This new vital substance, which, uniting with metals, formed calxes, and with other substances generated acids, he called oxygen, or the acid-producer; the air that was left after combustion was azote, or lifeless. The inflammable air which, combining with oxygen, was found to form water, was called hydrogen.—Popular Science Monthly.

NOTES.

It is proposed lighting Galway harbor by electricity.

It is now proposed to clear the air in mills and factories of all dust by means of electricity.

Paper is now made as tough as wood by mixing chloride of zinc with the pulp in course of manufacture.

Prof. Ayrton estimates that the power wasted at Niagara Falls exceeds that which could be produced by the annual consumption of 150,000,000 tons of coal.

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla, do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion and preparation, curative power superior to any other article of the kind.

And in all Affections of the Blood, P. P. P. stands alone and unrivaled and some of its cures are really wonderful.
If you suffer from anything like Syphilis, Scrofula, Blood Poison, Ulcers, Old Sores, Rheumatism, or any disease of the blood, be sure and give P. P. P. a trial.
P. P. P. (Prickly Ash, Poke Root and Potassium) is no secret patent medicine like the many on the market. Its formula is on every bottle, thus giving a guarantee of its purity and wholesomeness that no other blood purifier does give. For sale by all druggists.
SCROFULA
Is an impurity in the blood, producing Lumps or Swelling, causing Running Sores on the Arms, Legs, or Feet, for the cure of which use P. P. P., the greatest blood medicine on earth. All these diseases yield readily to the power of P. P. P., giving new life and new strength.
BLOOD POISON
Cured in its worse form; sometimes in cases with Erysipelas, where the patient was in Eternal Pain and given up by the physicians. In some cases Scrofulous Ulcers broke out till the party was a mass of corruption; a bottle of P. P. P. was procured, and the disease yielded quickly.
Also cures Syphilis, Primary, Secondary, Tertiary, Syphilis and Syphilistic Eruption.
Dyspepsia and Nervous Prostration.
Want of energy and all diseases resulting from overtaxing the system are cured by the use of P. P. P. (Prickly Ash, Poke Root and Potassium.)

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The grand national monument in honor of the Pilgrims was dedicated at Plymouth, Mass., on the first instant. The dedicatory exercises were carried out by the Masonic Grand Lodge, and were followed by an address by Hon. W. C. P. Breckinridge, of Kentucky.

The Dow liquor tax reports for the first half of 1889, which have been received by the auditor of the State of Ohio, show 9,602 saloons in the State, an increase of 115. The receipts to the revenue fund are $232,000, an increase of $6,000.

Indications of gold in paying quantities have been discovered on a farm near Arrow Rock, Mo. The gold is deposited in a bed of rock.

Watkin's Glen, N. Y., was washed out by a freshet on August 2.

Vicksburg, Miss., is preparing for the proposed reunion of veterans. Committees have been appointed to confer with the G. A. R. and with General Gordon, president of the Confederate Veterans' Association. A committee to obtain aid from Congress was also decided on and will consist of Governors Lowry and Stone, the State's representatives in the House and several leading citizens of Vicksburg.

Ex-Governor H. C. Warmoth has been appointed collector of the port of New Orleans, and John F. Patty (colored), of St. Mary Parish, naval officer.

The great sugar combination is about to reduce its capital stock, and will pay out $7,000,000 of the profits exacted from consumers.

The statement recently published that there was to be something like a trust formed among the publishers of school books for the purpose of raising the price and limiting the output has called for a denial from various publishers.

Last month 24,716 immigrants landed at Castle Garden against 28,690 in July, 1888. Every month this year has been marked by a gradual decline in European immigration.

A number of saloon keepers in Vicksburg were arrested on August 4 for violating the Sunday law.

A train of the Denver and Ft. Worth road was stopped by masked men in Oldham county, Texas, on August 4. The express and mail cars were plundered.

Col. J. R. G. Pitkin, of New Orleans, has been appointed U. S. Minister to the Argentine Republic.

In the Republican Convention, in Franklin, La., on August 5, H. C. Minor was nominated by acclamation to succeed Edward J. Gay (deceased) in Congress, from the Third Louisiana District.

The entire business portion of Spokane Falls, Wash. Ter., was destroyed by fire on August 4. Twenty-five blocks were reduced to ashes. The estimated loss is $14,000,000. The disaster is due to the negligence of the superintendent of the city water works, who failed to furnish sufficient water for the emergency.

FOREIGN.

General Boulanger has issued a manifesto in which he attributes his defeat in the election for the councils general to the ambitions of local candidates. He declares that he is confident of the result of the elections in France for members of the Chamber of Deputies.

Emperor William was welcomed to England on August 2. He was cordially received by the Queen.

A deputation appointed by the Equal Rights Association to present petitions to the governor-general, asking him to disallow the Jesuits' estates act, recently passed by the Quebec legislature, granting $400,000 to the Jesuits, had an interview with him on August 2. The governor-general stated that in his opinion and that of his advisers there were no grounds either for the disallowance of the act or for the dissolution of Parliament.

The minister of war and minister of foreign affairs of Roumania have offered to resign, on account of a quarrel with the finance minister. The result will be a recasting of the ministry, followed by a general election.

The British schooner "Black Diamond" was seized by an American revenue cutter in Behring Sea; but, the guard being powerless to prevent it, she escaped and arrived at Victoria, B. C.

Dispatches from Crete say that Riga Pasha, the new governor of the island, has ordered the withdrawal of the troops into the forts with the view of preventing collusion with the insurgents.

The Emperor William, the Prince of Wales and Prince Albert Victor, on August 4, inspected a number of representative British ships at Portsmouth, after which they returned to Osborne House for a family dinner. The Emperor William was dressed as a British admiral.

The American Art Association has paid to M. Proust 580,650 francs for Millet's picture, "The Angelus," which was bought at the Secretan sale.

The Royal Grant bill passed in the House of Commons on August 5.

General Grenfell, commander of the Egyptian troops, who defeated the Dervishes on Saturday, telegraphs that he has made a reconnoissance and found that the battle has completely broken the Dervish army.

General Boulanger has issued a declaration in which he says the accusations against him are infamous slanders and that he relies upon the French people as his sole judge.

Our readers have doubtless often noticed that Hood's Sarsaparilla is well spoken of in the newspapers. The press is quick to recognize merit, and does not hesitate to give praise where it is due. The following is from the Baptist Weekly, a leading religious paper:

"Advertising may bring an article prominently before the public, but no advertising can long help it if it has not real merit. Hood's Sarsaparilla is well advertised; but the best proof of its value is that so many persons use it on the recommendations of friends who have proved its peculiar virtues."

CAMP MEETING NOTICE.

The public sleeping department at the Sam Jones Camp Ground will be in charge of the Ladies' Christian Aid Society, and will be under the management of Mrs. F. C. Huff and Mrs. Nannie McNeil.

Students of medicine would do well to send for the catalogue of the Memphis Hospital Medical College.

Recently the Christian women of Tokio and Yokohama, Japan, decided to give a copy of the Bible to the Empress on her next birthday. A member of the imperial household has decided that the Bible is a proper book for Her Majesty to read.

BEECHAM'S PILLS cure sick-headache.

The clergy of America take kindly to Life insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders. The Episcopal Diocese of New York has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and The Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the Insurance to these worthy people.
A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

Hot for Niagara Falls and Toronto!

The popular Erie railway will run one of its personally conducted excursions from Cincinnati, O., to these points of interest at the very low rates of $5 for the Falls and $6 to Toronto from Cincinnati. Palace sleepers, chair cars and elegant day coaches will run through to the Falls. Do not miss this opportunity for a grand trip. Secure your sleepers early. Apply to H. C. Hohnbird, D. P. A. Gen'l Office, 99 4th St., Cincinnati. Train leaves Grand Central Depot, 12 noon, Thursday, August 22, 1889.

Summer Tours.

Nowhere can there be found more pleasant spots in which to enjoy health and recreation than in the mountains of Tennessee and Kentucky. With pure mountain air, excellent waters, fishing, boating, hunting, horseback rides through the mountain glens, delightful promenades, music, dancing, and all that go to make life enjoyable, is found at many points on line of the Queen and Crescent Route. For summer tours address
R. H. GARRATT, Div. P. A.,
34 St. Charles St.,
New Orleans, La.

Inka Normal Institute.

Summer School closed July 26. One hundred registered; the youngest sixteen, the oldest forty-seven—average age about twenty-seven. I still have a few male teachers, experienced. All hold from their county superintendent high first-grade certificates. Also a number of ladies, experienced teachers—scholarship from a second-grade certificate to a full college course. They can give references. Do you need an assistant? Write to H. A. DEAN, Inka, Miss.

Many people neglect a cold, thinking it will go as it came. Frequently with serious results, the cold of to-day may be the pneumonia of to-morrow. Nothing will cure a cough or cold so rapidly as Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. Its reputation has been established for over fifty years as the best remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, all throat and lung troubles. For croup and whooping-cough it is invaluable. Mothers will be saved much anxiety and loss of children by having Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar always on hand. Consumption has been cured many times by its use. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

Prevent Attacks of Fever.
We ask but a glance at this, and it will pay any sufferer from liver complaint, enlarged spleen or ague cake, billous affections of any kind, deranged secretions, prostration from dissipation, constipation, dropsy, or any affections where liver, bowels, blood and stomach are involved. A guaranteed cure for all this class of diseases is offered in J. & C. Maguire's Cundurango. Doctors are astonished and invalids delighted.

STRENGTH'S TEST.

BY EDNA SHELDRAKE.

I.

To laugh when the world is laughing,
To weep when it sheds its tears,
To cry, Bravo! with its bravos,
Or shudder when it fears;
Walk the highway with the many,
Or apart with the favored few,
To greet with a face that's smiling
The world that's applauding you;
To love when you are loved,
To give when much is gained,
Or even to die as others,
Leaving life unexplained—
Why, all men can do that!

II.

But to smile when the world is frowning;
To weep when its laughter is loud;
To face its scorns and jeerings,
Or pray apart from the crowd;
To walk with the lowly and shining,
Blessing the lips that revile;
To stand unscarred 'mid the lightnings
That blind the eyes erstwhile;
To unravel life's deep mystery
With hand and heart that braves;
To give where naught is given,
Change hate to love that saves—
Can you and I do that?

An Interesting Document.

MR. EDITOR: Here is an old book of valuable Methodist history. It is well bound in sheep. The title page is as follows:

MINUTES
OF THE METHODIST CONFERENCES, ANNUALLY HELD IN AMERICA,
From 1773 to 1813, inclusive.
VOLUME THE FIRST.

NEW YORK:
Published by Daniel Hitt and Thomas Ware, for the Methodist Connection in the United States.
JOHN C. TOTTEN, Printer.
1813.

These Minutes are authentic and official records of the movements of Methodism in America during that period of development, which culminated in the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Delegated General Conference.

The owner of this copy of the book is a venerable Methodist layman of Lowndes county, Miss.—Gen. N. D. Guerry—who inherits it as a sacred relic from his father. I am permitted to use it, and if you think it well, will transcribe it seriatim for the columns of the ADVOCATE. The book is out of print, and its publication in the ADVOCATE will give each of your subscribers the opportunity to possess it in that form. I give you this week the preface and the Minutes of 1773.

TO THE READER.

The volume of Annual Minutes, published in 1794 by the Rev. John Dickins, no doubt had its use, and yielded satisfaction and profit to thousands. That small volume shows the rise, progress and increase of the Methodists in America for about 21 or 22 years. There are now comparatively few copies of this publication to be seen in the hands of the preachers, or in the houses of our friends; in consequence of which many of our brethren, both traveling and local (who are measurably or altogether confined to the extreme parts of the work, seldom have an opportunity of seeing one of the Annual Minutes), have frequently expressed a wish to have them all in one complete volume, arranged in the order in which they occurred. We feel the more inclined to comply with their request because this publication must confessedly contain the best history (as far as it goes) of the Methodists and Methodist preachers in America, now extant, from the commencement thereof to the year 1813, showing to the reflective mind what the Lord hath done for us, and by us, in the space of the 40 years last past. This work becomes the more interesting, as it contains brief memoirs of all our deservedly esteemed brethren who have foregone the pleasures of domestic happiness for the sake of winning souls. They lived the life of piety and virtue, died triumphantly, and now enjoy that inheritance which is incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away. And shall it now be said, as it was of old, the righteous perish, and no man layeth it to heart? No. They shall live in our affectionate remembrance. Their names, their indefatigable and successful labors, their peaceful and triumphant deaths, shall be transmitted to posterity, and generations to come shall praise the Lord that such men ever lived and labored and died in America. By a reference to this volume you may see when each preacher began to travel, how long he traveled, whether he located, withdrew, was expelled, or died in the blessed work.

In the year 1773 the first Methodist Conference in America was held in Philadelphia, and consisted of ten traveling preachers, at which time there were only 1,160 members in the society. In the space of 40 years you see the astonishing increase, amounting to 678 traveling preachers (besides in the provinces of Upper and Lower Canada*), with several thousand local preachers of sufficient worth to grace any pulpit, and members amounting to upward of 214,000. With wonder and gratitude we may exclaim, What hath God wrought? To make this work the more entertaining, with the annual amount of members, you also have that of the preachers, as they stand on their respective stations. Likewise you will find that in the space of 40 years there has been about 1,800 preachers admitted into the traveling connection, and about 110 died in the glorious work, not counting their lives dear unto them, that they might finish their course with joy. To view between 600 and 700 faithful ministers of the Lord Jesus Christ, spread from the northern extremities of the province of Maine to St. Mary's and the Altamaha river, in the southern extremities of Georgia; and from the seaboard in the Atlantic States to Erie, Detroit, Michigan, Wabash and Missouri, in the West; and southwestward to the Mississippi, Natchez, Upper and Lower Louisiana, to New Orleans and the Tombeckbee settlements—what may we not expect and look for from the hands of a gracious God in answer to prayer and the reward of faithful and diligent labors? Will not the Lord reward us with the reformation and conversion of many precious souls? Brethren, let us earnestly pray that God may make us abound in every virtue and all the fruits of the Holy Spirit, in proportion as we increase in numbers, that holiness may be our constant object and enjoyment.

N. B.—It has been thought proper to publish the whole in one volume, intending to publish another whenever they will make a volume.

MINUTES
OF SOME CONVERSATIONS BETWEEN THE PREACHERS
IN CONNECTION WITH
THE REVEREND MR. JOHN WESLEY.
PHILADELPHIA, JUNE, 1773.

The following queries were proposed to every preacher:

1. Ought not the authority of Mr. Wesley and that Conference to extend to the preachers and people in America as well as in Great Britain and Ireland?

Ans.: Yes.

2. Ought not the doctrine and discipline of the Methodists, as contained in the Minutes, to be the sole rule of our conduct, who labor in connexion with Mr. Wesley, in America?

Ans.: Yes.

3. If so, does it not follow that if any preachers deviate from the Minutes, we can have no fellowship with them till they change their conduct?

Ans.: Yes.

The following rules were agreed to by all the preachers present:

1. Every preacher who acts in connexion with Mr. Wesley, and the brethren who labor in America, is strictly to avoid administering the ordinances of baptism and the Lord's Supper.

2. All the people among whom we labor to be earnestly exhorted to attend church, and to receive the ordinances there; but in a particular manner to press the people in Maryland and Virginia to the observance of this minute.

3. No person or persons to be admitted into our love-feasts oftener than twice or thrice, unless they become members; and none to be admitted to the society meetings more than thrice.

4. None of the preachers in America to reprint any of Mr. Wesley's books without his authority (when it can be gotten) and the consent of their brethren.

5. Robert Williams to sell the books he has already printed; but to print no more, unless under the above restrictions.

6. Every preacher who acts as an assistant to send an account of the work once in six months to the general assistant.

Ques. 1. How are the preachers stationed?

Ans.: New York—Thomas Rankin; Philadelphia—George Shadford—to change in four months.

New Jersey—John King, William Watters.

Baltimore—Francis Asbury, Robert Strawbridge, Abraham Whitworth, Joseph Yearby.

Norfolk—Richard Wright.

Petersburg—Robert Williams.

Ques. 2. What numbers are in the society?

Ans.:

New York, 180	Virginia, 100
Philadelphia, 180
New Jersey, 200	1,160
Maryland, 500	Preachers, 10

*They are not numbered, in consequence of the present war.

THE ASCENT OF PIKE'S PEAK AND MT. CHEYENNE.

MR. EDITOR: The ascent of Pike's Peak is the act of "Derring Do" for Manitou tourists. It is the highest point accessible by foot or horse, and the view from the summit is unrivaled. Croakers in this hotel warned us in the most solemn manner, each "with choppy finger to her lips," not to attempt it; the roadway was so dangerous. The altitude affected some seriously. A lady in the hotel had not breathed freely since she went up, a week ago; and the same party had left a horse dead on the mountain; but—

"One convinced against her will
Is of the same opinion still."

and I was confident I could go to the very summit. So one morning, at eight o'clock, a large party of forty-five tourists set off on this perilous journey. The trip is made in coaches, drawn by four stout horses. Only six passengers are allowed to each coach; so, in fine spirits we left the valley, with its summer verdure and caressing airs, a cloudless sky overhead, and a sunny landscape on every side. The mettled horses dashed up the rocky heights as if the toilsome journey were unknown to them; or, perhaps, the bracing mountain air imparted to them the same new life that we felt glowing through us; for eyes sparkled, cheeks took on the crimson hue of health, and merry talk and laughter ran high as we sped upward. For a little way the carriage road is comparatively straight, and we sat complacently watching the groves of spruce and aspen, listening to the roar of the mountain streams as they dashed from boulder to boulder, exclaiming upon the brilliant flora of the mountain-side; then a series of graceful curves set in, and the road climbed up to the Half-way House, where a luncheon awaited the passengers, and the four stout horses were exchanged for four stouter mules. Then, indeed, did the ascent begin, and the gay party were awed into silence. The swaying coach rocked all too near to the edges of the dizzy precipices beneath us, any one of which might have originated Dante's idea of the Inferno, and the overhanging rocks seemed too insecurely fastened to the mountain-side. Snow lay in perpetual banks on either side of us. We tucked our cloaks and mufflers more securely about us, and thus we went up, up, up, looking down upon scenes which the mountain eagle views in his flight to his eyrie. Steeper, steeper grew the ascent, darker frowned the beetling rocks above us, and wilder yawned the cold depths beneath. Looking directly down, the road over which we had just passed looked no wider than a wavering cattle trail; looking up, and the front coaches were directly above us, toiling up such heights, over so narrow a road, that I closed my eyes and trembled. I looked down a fearful chasm, whose sides were bristling with crags, jags and splinters. An awful blackness of depth was beneath me. It was like nothing I have ever seen, save a mountain in a dream, where you go down, down, down, grasping, clinging to any projecting object to save you from the black abyss beneath. Here a cold, steady sleet set in, and the clouds encompassed us round about, the thunder muttered at our very ears, and the lightning shot its frightful glare adown the rough and chasmed mountain-side. To add to our terror, the driver here pointed out to us the horse which had died in making the ascent a few days before. His lungs were bad, they said; he could not stand the altitude, and the poor burden-bearer was cast out on the rocks to "sleep the sleep that knows no waking." Now the driver cracked his whip and shouted to his panting mules. They tossed the snow from their feet, and bent themselves to "the long pull and the strong pull." A few heroic struggles, and we stood on the summit of Pike's Peak, at an altitude of 14,446 feet. Who shall fitly describe the scene? Sublime, indeed, and yet so wild and lonely that the vision seemed not of this earth. The clouds floated away beneath us; the neighboring mountalas, with their snowy crests, seemed only foot-hills. Denver and Pueblo, fifty and seventy-five miles away, might be the cities of Lilliput. Pike's Peak is the grim granite monarch that towered

"High over all that might or mind made great."

I will attempt no further description of it; for here

"Nature is poet for herself,
And writes her epics everywhere;
Each lofty leaf and soft wind stirs,
Each bird-song heard in forest ways,
The sea's deep melodies are hers,
And storm and silence sing her praise."

We stayed an hour and a half on the summit. The altitude affected me only with a slight dizziness; others were not so fortunate. Restoratives were resorted to in several instances. We had our pictures taken, and here I noticed what a large ingredient vanity is in the make-up of man; not frail woman, mind you, but 'twas the sterner sex who struck attitudes and manufactured smiles for the occasion. We gathered rocks and relics, played snowball, took some luncheon, and the descent began. Heaven preserve me from such another journey! The driver put on his brakes, and gave the lines to his mules. Down we went at a sweeping gallop; rocky peak and mountain-scaur were left behind us; snow-drift after snow-drift disappeared; the clouds were again above us; the sleet was changed into a steady rain; the timber belt was reached, and the pine and spruce trees flew past us like a retreating army. The curves in the road are turned so rapidly that I grow seasick and nearly desperate, when the Half-way House came into view. Here the mules were exchanged for horses, and just as we started on our journey again the sun burst forth in a glory of radiance, and across the heavens was spread the "bow of promise" in all its beauteous coloring. I took it for a sign. "I will not leave thee, nor forsake thee." Surely he guided us that day through dangers seen and unseen.

After resting a day or two, we made the ascent of Mt. Cheyenne, to Helen Hunt's grave. The scenery was almost the same as other mountain views, and the climb was seldom made until after this popular authoress was buried there three years ago. In life this was her holy of holies. Here on this mountain-top, with the pines whispering and sighing above her, and the Sevier Falls dashing and roaring at her feet, she sat and wove her pretty romances. She was resting against nature's heart, and must have been very close to nature's God. Be that as it may, here, at her own request, she lies on this lonely mountain, taking "the long and dreamless sleep." It seems so near heaven that I think the angels will only have to part the drapery of blue and beckon her to come up higher on that day when the graves give up their dead. Her only monument is a heap of stones, each visitor adding one to the already monstrous heap, which it oppressed me to look at. Her only epitaph is in "H. H." cut deep into the body of the pine that waves above her sleeping dust. Here we left our carriage and walked down Cheyenne Canon. It is two miles in length. Two miles of perpendicular cliffs, of wild and gloomy gorges, of foaming cataracts, and dark and narrow defiles. Three hundred and fifty steps led past the Sevier Falls, where a pretty tumbling water dashes in frothy jets over the ledges of rocks, forming the falls. The cliffs are almost sky-piercing, and every cleft is studded and colored with the most beautiful wild flowers. One can realize here what a hazardous thing it is to gather edelweiss on the Alps. Everything conspired to make that day enjoyable; but the day following we were weary unto death. We laid our alpenstocks away, determined to climb no more mountains for the present. I really sighed

"For scenes of peace,
Where to rivers murmuring,
The sweet birds all the summer sing."

The Churches—Statistics.

(Editorial.)

The Independent, of August 1, gives its annual review of church statistics in the United States. There are 20 denominations; ministers, 98,322; churches, 142,767; communicants, 20,667,318. This is an increase over last year of 3,865 ministers, 3,882 churches, and 876,995 communicants. The increase in ministers and churches is smaller than the increase last year, but the increase in number of communicants is larger by 102,134. According to the tables given, the Baptists have gained more in numbers than any other denomination, gaining during the past year 106,904 members. The largest number of communicants belong to the Methodists, they numbering 4,723,881. The Roman Catholics come next with 4,438,019. The Baptists are third, with 4,078,589 communicants. The Presbyterians number 1,180,113. The Lutherans aggregate 988,008; Congregationalists, 475,608, and the Episcopalians, 459,642. The smaller denominations make up the remainder of the 20,667,318.

According to polity, the membership ranges in this way: Episcopal, 9,433,196; Congregational, 4,928,619; Presbyterian, 2,888,228. The Congregational polity has 39,719 ministers; the Episcopal, 39,598, and the Presbyterian, 19,065. As to church edifices, the Episcopal polity has 61,597; Congregational, 56,478, and the Presbyterian, 25,722.

The inference from these figures is this: In a country where there are 142,767 churches and 98,322 ministers and 20,667,318 members it is all nonsense to talk about the country "going to the dogs!"

The Bookless House.

BY CHARLES F. RICHARDSON.

My father's useful life was that of a village doctor. As he went about his practice, by day or night, in the town or the surrounding country, he used to keep his eyes open, and to try to minister to something more than the sick bodies of his patients. The word of friendly counsel, the promotion of schools and their work, the development of the children's musical powers, all such things interested him; but most of all, as he was a book-lover, the growth of the town library and of the reading habit. The need of the last was constantly manifest to him, for in his ceaseless rounds he never failed to enter house after house which he aptly described as "literary Saharas," without a living leaf of literature, or a single refreshing draught from the springs of genius.

One does not need to be a doctor or a minister to be sadly familiar with such dreary abodes. They are less numerous, perhaps, than when my father died, but they are plenty enough still. Their dearth of reading matter may not be so absolute as that of a railway-station or a hotel parlor, but it is pitiful. You and I often visit such houses, and we know by heart the very titles of their melancholy "libraries," if their few books deserve that name, or gathered as they have been by the irony of luck. There is a huge "family Bible," the neglected fetich of the unwarmed parlors, resting on the chilling marble-top table in lonely and begilt grandeur. Grouped about it, in various awkward attitudes that never suggest actual use, are a subscription-life of Abraham Lincoln, a "fringed" copy of some famous hymn, a "Friendship's Offering" of 1842, given to mother as a wedding present, and an autograph album, perched on top of the inevitable collection of family worthies whose counterfeit presentments, in most unnatural attitude and expression, have been caught by the photography of the past two decades. Elsewhere, if book-cases or "whatnots" there be, one may find half-a-dozen text-books, neither very new nor very valuable; Mrs. Hemans and Mr. Tupper; "The Wide, Wide World," well-worn; a few juveniles, ill-worn; and a campaign life of General Garfield or Samuel J. Tilden. A couple of hymn-books, maybe, repose on the cabinet organ; and if by chance you find a stray presentation copy of a real poem like "Snow-Bound," or "Evangeline," or an actually readable miscellany of the Harper's Magazine or Century type, you seize it with an avidity very unlike the impartial indifference felt toward it by its owner, who regards it as exactly on a level with the pamphlet novel bought by a guest on his hitherward railway-trip, and accidentally left behind.

Now, for actual poverty I have the highest respect, but for literary Saharas I have none, when their owners live in five-thousand dollar houses, keep a horse and carriage, spend two hundred dollars a year for an individual's clothing, take a trip to the city once a year, contribute liberally to their church, and are willing to send their sons and daughters to school or college. How can you educate a child without accustoming him to an atmosphere of books? As well expect him to grow to be an artist with only a few daubs on the walls of his childhood home. Few can paint, but all ought to read. I never knew a child to acquire the reading habit after fifteen years of age; and yet parents expect their progeny to get the most of learning at school and of piety at Sunday-school. Saharas will starve them, though the sands be golden. If men are content to read nothing but the daily paper, and women nothing at all, or nothing better than an occasional borrowed novel or Sunday-school book, let them say, at least, with Froebel: "Come, let us live for our children."

We call ourselves a nation of readers, and so we are. But when we think of the discouraging circumstances of the case, let us remember that there is plenty of work left for the literary helper to do. Doctor, minister, schoolteacher, librarian, editor, bookseller, book-lover, must all pull together. They must tell house-holders that the standard reference Shakespeare, or the best-type Bacon's Essays can be bought for a dollar, and very respectable editions of most of our principal English poems or prose works for half that sum. Ten dollars will give you standard or interesting—and standard books are the most interesting after all—works adequate for six months' leisure. Let us intimate to friends, subject to the canons of courtesy and good judgment, that it is poor policy to spend twenty-five dollars for a table, and then leave it to support a miserable array of hap-hazard literature of the humblest order. A good set of Bancroft or Motley is a better piece of furniture than a handsome rug; and if we must choose between Dickens and a placque, let us take Dickens. Our latter-day art-revival in the home is meritorious, but a book revival would be better in every way. Even keramics can not make us learned.

This bookish poverty is by no means restricted to the country. There are city folk in plenty whose annual house-rent is ten or twenty times the value of all the books they own in the world. Folks will spend four dollars a day at a hotel, or toss a quarter to an officious hall-boy, who never dream of buying a book. In fact, actually buying anything to read is, to many minds, the last resort, to be accepted only as a grim necessity. Among readers, and rich ones at that, there are some who will wait a year for their turn in the town library or reading club, or will walk five miles to hunt up a book that may be borrowed, but never dream of an actual purchase, so long as humble begging, or heated sponging on a neighbor's good-nature or respectable deodorized stealing is possible. They want little but fiction, and their fiction must be extracted in some way that does not inure to the good of author, printer, publisher, book-seller. Fifty dollars for a luxury—or for a really praiseworthy charity—comes readily from bookless house-owners who are horrified that "John Ward, Preacher," isn't published in one of the pamphlet libraries, and who complain that Cousin William never even sent them a copy of his "History of the Non-Combatants in the War of the Revolution"—on which Cousin William spent ten years' patient toil, and from which his copyright receipts to date have been $3 82.

Good reader, this little sermon of mine, despite its seeming bitterness, is of the pleasantest sort. It doesn't "hit" me, who used in earliest childhood to pick up old iron that I might sell it at the junk-shop and buy long longed-for volumes at the book-shop. Nor does it rebuke you, for your interest in literature is shown by the fact that you are reading this periodical. Severity is easily endurable when it falls upon somebody else. But we really have a duty in the matter, a duty demanding all the tact we possess.—Book News.

The Unexpected Answer.

Something stayed his feet. There was a fire in the grate within—for the night was chill—and it lit the little parlor, and brought out in startling effects the pictures on the wall. But these were as nothing to the picture on the hearth. There, by the soft glow of the firelight, knelt his little child, at its mother's feet, its small hands clasped in prayer, its fair head bowed, and its rosy lips uttering each word with childish distinctness. The father listened, spell-bound to the spot:

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take."

Sweet innocent! The man himself, who stood there with bearded lips tightly shut together, had said that prayer once at his mother's knee. Where was that mother now? The sunset gates had long ago unbarred to let her pass through. But the child had not yet finished; he heard her, "God bless mamma, papa, and my own self." Then there was a pause, and she lifted her troubled blue eyes to her mother's face. "God bless papa," lisped the little one, "and—please send him home sober." He could not hear the mother as she said this, but the child followed, in a clear, inspiring tone: "God—bless papa—and please—send him—home—sober. Amen." Mother and child sprang to their feet in alarm when the door opened suddenly, and they saw who had returned so soon; but that night, when little Mamie was being tucked in bed after such a romp with papa, she said, in the sleepiest and most contented of voices, "Mamma, God answers most as quick as the telephone, doesn't he?"

LYRIC FOR TEMPERANCE DAY.

BY CLARA B. DRAKE.

Where the Mexique's sunny waters
Bathe fair Mississippi's beach,
And the grand oaks' leafy arches
High above the white sands reach:
Hither, in the sultry solstice,
Where the cool gulf breezes blow,
Keeping feast of tabernacles,
Israel's tribes are wont to go.

Here from quiet town and village,
Busy cities full of strife,
Come the heralds of salvation,
To hold forth the Word of Life.
Here dear friends and kindred meeting,
Who have sundered been for years.
Gathered round this common altar,
Blend in one their prayers and tears.

See the hosts together mingle
Underneath the spacious tent;
Hear their song of praise ascending,
In one mighty volume blent.
Now, the man of God arising,
Warns and pleads—"O sinner, yield!
See the living Fountain opened,
In its crimson waves be healed!"

Smitten sinners crowd the altar,
Plunged in penitential woe.
While God's pleading children ask him
Quick his pardon to bestow.
Hark! the joyful cries ascending
Tell God's answer from above.
Hallelujah! souls are ransomed!
Glory to redeeming love!

Lift your voice, assembled thousands!
Loud the mighty chorus raise,
Till the leafy spires around you
Tremble with the vibrant praise!
Till the winds repeat the story,
And the sea, with joyful roar,
Tossing high its foamy billows,
Thunders anthems on the shore!

Now the great feast nears its ending,
Soon the gathered host must part;
But to-day meet noble women,
Grand in purpose, pure in heart—
Meet around the sacred altar,
Banded in a sacred cause;
Pledged to God and home and country—
Zealous for all righteous laws.

Grand Wing of White Ribboned Army,
Foll'wers of the Prince of Peace,
In his name urge on the warfare,
Till the cause of rum shall cease.
In his name, high rear your banners,
Of his wisdom counsel take,
Till before Truth's gleaming weapons
All the hosts of darkness quake!

Brothers, these devoted women
Aid and cheer by word and deed.
Press the battle on before them
Till our shackled land is freed!
By your prayers and votes sustain them,
Legislate their holy cause—
Grave the statute Prohibition
Deep within the nation's laws!

O! a vision rapt, entrancing,
Bursts on my ecstatic sight!
See, forever from our home-land
Hell's dark minions put to flight!
See, among the heathen nations
Every idol totter, fall—
While earth's glad, redeemed millions
Crown Messiah "Lord of All!"

Let us speed the glorious dawning
Of that bright, resplendent day!
Striving with united effort,
Open wide the King's highway.
Lift your heads, ye lasting portals,
Give the King of Glory room!
Haste to enter, conquering Savior,
Let thy blessed kingdom come.

Responsibility—Preachers and Stewards.

Some time ago the question of an organized Board of Stewards was written about in the ADVOCATE, and the support of the gospel lamented. Now, is there not something in this worthy the most serious thought?

Bishop McTyeire said: "A careless, inefficient steward could starve out the ministry in the midst of plenty and a willing people. He is the commissary of the church, and by his non-action can contribute more to defeat than all the enemy." This non-action was the dread of the wise and good Bishop. Then should not something be done to vitalize and increase the energy of the stewards? They are the fiscal agents of the church, and whatever need or demand is made upon the financial subject should be at once referred to them, as the standing committee on the financial state of the church; while the preachers are a standing committee on the spiritual state of the church, and whatever the need or demand on the subject of spirituality should at once be referred to them. The confounding these especially called and qualified officers for specific work will always result in more or less confusion, if not in failure. What would be thought of a railroad company if the engineer was instructed or required to go around with the conductor, and see that all the collections were promptly made; or if the conductor was instructed or expected to see to all the various conditions of the engine? We would say that company must become confused and suffer loss by so doing. Yet, as a church, it seems to me we are pursuing just such a policy, and groaning at the result. When our Conferences, Quarterly or Annual, call on the preachers for a financial report, they suggest the question, How close have you followed up your stewards? Now, this does not appear consistent with Methodism, as its written law does not require a financial report or statistics from the preachers; but from the Board of Stewards to the Quarterly Conference, and through the recording steward to the Joint Board of Finance, is the legal and right way for our fiscal statistics to reach us correctly and according to law. (Discipline, p. 114.)

Now, is not this custom of calling on the preachers for fiscal statistics, and gauging their usefulness and ability by the same—to say the least—somewhat dangerous to each state of the church, spiritual and financial? To the spiritual, in that it divides the energy and weakens the force of the spiritual; to the financial, in that it releases the stewards from responsibility and fosters non-action in them. I have been in Quarterly Conferences when the question was called, What has been raised the present quarter?—and every eye would turn to the preacher in charge, and everybody wait as if, by some law, he was the identical one to whom the question was propounded. I have also been in Annual Conferences and heard the Joint Board of Finance report; but have never heard them read or asked to read the reports of the recording steward from any circuit, station, or mission. In this are we not ignoring the law?—and for convenience and brevity drifting into a hurtful custom? Could an engineer be made responsible to the company for the financial report of the trip, or the conductor held responsible for the condition of the engine? This dual responsibility can not be fixed on one officer, and at the same time insure safety and success in every department. Let the stewards make their own reports and receive their reward of applause or censure. Let the preachers make theirs, and be held responsible. When every man makes use of his own armor and stands in his own place, we may expect victory for the Lord. "Ye servants of the Lord each in his office wait." Yours truly,

COUNTRYMAN.

Along This Line.

MR. EDITOR: It is remarkably strange how rapidly a pet phrase or word of slang passes over the country. It was said, "Here's your mule;" and it passed all down the line. Then came, "Gone up the spout;" "He shore did;" "He sat down on him." These, with others, spread like fire in dry stubble.

Several years ago, as I was about to leave my pastoral charge to attend a District Conference, and to remain several days with the pastor to help in the meeting following, one of my stewards said to me: "You are going from home now, to be gone some time; and it is probable you will preach several times. I wish to call your attention to a growing habit. You often say, 'This line, that line, these lines.'" I endeavored to correct myself, and was astonished to see how often these things came up in a sermon. Since then my attention has been called to others. A preacher, an editor or a newspaper correspondent has not finished until he has said or written "on this line." A man solves a great "problem" in book-form; he must write "on this line" before he closes. A little Quarterly Conference report is well finished when the pastor can read, with telling emphasis, "along those lines." Here you are left to draw on your imagination. He is "mighty weak, shore gone up;" "Found your mule;" "Sat down on him," and tied him with "this line."

"So to speak," has been growing for some time, and is now having a high place with some men. I do not remember to have ever heard more than one or two public speakers who did not have some pet phrase or awkward gesture. "What to do with the hands," appears to be the question.

My health is improving, and I hope to be at work again in a few weeks.

Mission Fields in Louisiana.

In my perambulations as colporteur for the American Bible Society, of New York, in parts of this, my native State, my eyes have been opened, as never before, to some facts in the direction indicated above. According to my observation, the largest portion of this element, composing the Catholic Church in our State, is ripe for a change. As your readers are aware, a large percentage of the French-speaking people of Louisiana, and many of those who do not speak French, are under the influence ("delusion" is a better word) of the priestcraft system of Rome. Among the females I have found many true, pure Christians; but we think this is in spite of the fallacies of the Church of Rome, or "the man of sin." Among the men who are accustomed to do their own thinking, and who see the ridiculousness of the (I might say) whole system, I find very few or, in fact, almost none who make any pretensions to heart-religion at all. It is true, many of them, out of respect to the female portion of their families, do sometimes, and in some places, attend church, and sometimes go to mass or confession; but the largest portion of them say they are not quite fools enough to believe any such nonsense, and hence they make no pretensions to any religion at all. As a consequence, as "the devil always finds work for idle hands to do," their being nothing else to divert or occupy them, the Sabbath is generally devoted to horse-racing, dancing, hunting, fishing, gambling, etc., and in many places these things, if not participated in by the priests, are, at least, winked at by them. Even if they object to it, the fact that their own lives are so corrupt is sufficient to destroy any effect their reproof would otherwise have. These men, many of them as good, naturally, as Louisiana has in it, have become hardened and disgusted at anything which looks like religion; and the main cause of it, aside from the natural depravity of the heart, is the inconsistency of the lives of those who are sent to minister to them in holy things. In a few instances, priests have been the recipients of good curslags, and in one instance the "holy father" (good Lord deliver us!) has been forced to leave his parish virtually at the end of a rope. These are facts; names, dates and places can be given, if called for. This is only one, which must answer for many more which the writer has in his possession.

Now, then, you see why these men are disgusted; yet the question arises, Has the Spirit of God left these people? Are they so hardened that they can not be reached? I answer, No. Though upon the faces of most of them there is a peculiar look bordering on despair, still, by feeling about the heart tenderly and judiciously, you will find the blessed Spirit is still there knocking and asking for admission. I know whereof I speak. Yes, glory be to God! With no other desire or hope of reward, I have in the last six months preached hundreds of sermons to from one to five hundred auditors, and it has always been my blessed privilege to see evidences of the work of the Spirit, and in some instances, in private families, having had some member of the family to clap the hands, and, with the eyes filled with tears, and the face lit up with joy, to shout the praises of God. Glory be to God for his matchless love to the children of men!

These men when asked what they are going to do about death and the judgment, say they don't know. Oh, how my heart has bled, as the cloud would overshadow their faces, when this question is asked them! Would to God I had the means!—there would soon be a missionary among them.

LOCAL ITINERANT.

Notice.

To the Members of the Ministerial Educational Aid Association of the Mississippi Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South—

Dear Brethren: The next session of Centenary College, Jackson, La., begins in about a month. Last session we had at the college under us five young men preparing for the ministry. One graduated, and during the coming session we will have not only the four remaining under-graduates, but there are before us new applications for aid. We must educate our young ministers, so that they may be enabled to stand fully abreast with the times, and be enabled to occupy the important stations of our church. A great many of the members of our association are behind with their payments. Notices to that effect have been sent to all whose address could be found; but there are some, especially laymen, whose post-office address we did not know.

Brethren, we need money to start the session with. We will have to have the money or refuse some of the applications now before us. How can we say, "No," to one who says, "Brother, help me prepare to do the Lord's work!" We can't do it; we must not do it. We take it for granted that those in arrears do not fully appreciate the situation, and hence we make this public appeal to you. If you can not pay the entire amount, now pay a part, and the rest by Conference. Make your remittance either to Dr. C. G. Andrews, treasurer, Meridian, Miss., or to me, No. 13 Reynolds St., Natchez, Miss.; and credit will be given on your notes.

Yours in Christ.

A Mission to the Indians.

The Brandon District Conference has come to the conclusion to look after the spiritual interests of the Indians within its bounds. There are quite a number of these people in Mississippi, and the Methodist Church heretofore has paid very little attention to them. We are glad to publish the following action taken by the District Conference at its recent session:

Since there are about 2,500 Indians in this State entirely neglected, religiously, except a very few under the supervision of the Baptist Church, and all of whom, except a few, live within this district; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we do heartily recommend the plan formulated by Bro. A. D. Miller, published in the ADVOCATE, for raising money for an Indian mission in this State.

Resolved, That we insist upon every person, especially every Methodist, to assist immediately in this great work, so that the services of a missionary may be secured at once.

Resolved, That any person desiring to give money to this cause will please forward it to Rev. A. D. Miller, Cato, Miss.

Resolved, That the editor of the ADVOCATE is hereby requested to publish these resolutions at once.

From the Work.

CENTREVILLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have been thinking for some time that I would give you a faint idea of what the good Lord is doing for the Centerville charge. This work is very compact, and is on L., N. O. and T. railroad. The people are intelligent and appreciative, and they show their appreciation by many presents and cash, that gladdens and stimulates the preacher. Our first protracted meeting was at the above-named place, and resulted in 18 accessions and 45 convorsions. We were assisted in this meeting by Revs. John A. B. Jones, of Port Gibson, and W. W. Simmons, of Hattiesburg, Miss. These brethren preached sermons that resulted in the immediate conversion of souls. I have never witnessed such a meeting in my life.

Our second meeting was held at Macedonia, which resulted in five accessions and six bright conversions. Assisted in this meeting by Revs. R. N. Tucker, N. J. Roberts, Paul Brown, George W. Huff and James B. Anders. These brethren are all young, with a very promising future. The conversions that we have had on this work have been very bright; so much so, that, if they use the means of grace that God has blessed his children with, they need not trouble themselves about the "second blessing theory."

In my meetings I never give a penitent up until he knows as well that he has got religion as he knows that he exists.

A certain man asked me what was my theory. I told him that I used the same theory that the Savior used with Nicodemus—"Marvel not, that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again." Then he said: "What next!" I told him when they were satisfied with their conversion, then I urged upon the exhortation of Peter: "Add to your faith, virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness," etc. I assure them, if "these things be in them and abound, they make them that they neither be barren nor unfruitful in knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." I declare to them, if they lack these things, that they are blind, "and can not see afar off, and have forgotten they were purged from their old sins." I have been working this way for six years, and the good Lord has blessed my labors; and, let me assure you, Mr. Editor, I am going to pursue the same course until I can explain the second blessing theory better or more satisfactory than I have ever heard it explained. I insist upon the young preachers driving slow, for we will have plenty to do until the fathers in Israel settle this matter.

G. D. ANDERS.

RED LAND, LA.

MR. EDITOR: As I never read anything in the ADVOCATE about this part of God's vineyard, I thought that I would try to write to you. We have had plenty of rain, and crops are promising. Bro. A. A. Cornett is our pastor. Everybody loves him very much. He is a good Christian worker. He has stayed with us this week. We have had a good time here. Bro. Galloway was with us, and did us splendid service. Old Walker's Chapel was shaken from center to circumference. Church revived, backsliders reclaimed, sinners converted, six accessions to the church, and all of the collection behind; but I think they will come on the home stretch.

Yours truly in Christ,

A. H. MATTOCK.

NEW HOPE CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I have just closed a two weeks' campaign. The Lord has been with us in power. With two boy preachers, Bro. Wiley Ferguson and Willie T. Woodard, I held a meeting at Union Chapel. It had been so long since they had a revival there, no one could give the time. The church had a name, and that was about all. Assisted by Rev. J. W. Pettit and Y. D. Westerfield, of the Protestant Methodist Church, laying the whole matter on the altar, we went to work. I never witnessed such power of God's work in all my life. All old feuds were settled, and all rejoiced together. Twenty-five conversions, ten accessions to the church, and a goodly number of Baptists reclaimed. Five came forward and promised us to join the Baptist Church. The Baptists came forward and worked as Christians should. A good Baptist arose in the congregation, and said: "We were instrumental in God's hand in converting the whole country." He said that "such a meeting was never seen before."

Bro. W. B. Lewis sent me a second Sam Jones—Rev. G. W. Randolph, of Crystal Springs; and an Excell in Willie T. Woodard. We moved to Bethel. The people were discouraged. Grass, rain, everything wrong; but we went to work. God came down in power during the first sermon, and the shouts of God's people were heard in the camp. The meeting continued five days. The Lord was with us during the entire meeting. Five accessions and thirty conversions at Bethel. This church never witnessed such a demonstration of God's Spirit before. Bro. Ferll rendered good service. The Baptists joined heartily in the work. Bro. Lewis wrote me to "turn Bro. Randolph loose and let him rip," and I did. He preached with power and pathos; at times almost startling. My people were delighted with him. Bro. Woodard captured all by his singing. He is a second Excell. He can preach and pray as well as sing. The sky is bright. The best of all, the Lord is with us. "Happy on the way."

WM. HOOVER.

FRANKLINTON, LA.

MR. EDITOR: We closed a meeting last Friday at Mt. Hermon Church, with good results. We commenced there on the fourth Sunday at eleven o'clock, and closed on Thursday night, and God was with us in great power of the spirit. Eight conversions and 13 accessions to the church. Fifty-seven testified in the public audience that they had received a blessing during the meeting. Backsliders were reclaimed, old difficulties settled, and the church graciously revived. God's name was glorified in the church. All for which we give God the glory. We thank God for all his goodness toward us. We are under many obligations to Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, president of Kavanaugh College, for valuable help rendered in the meeting; and also to Rev. Sam Ball for his good, earnest labors in the meeting. We also married a couple, and took the lady into the church. J. H. EVANS.

RUSTON CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: Sunday night, July 28, closed a week of delightful and gracious services at Douglas Church, began and conducted by Rev. T. K. Faunt LeRoy, P. C., and two sermons each by Bros. Barr and W. J. Porter; regardless of very hot weather, anti-services, and preaching twice a day to large, attentive congregations. There were eight accessions to the church. The church has been wonderfully blessed. Our beloved Bro. Faunt LeRoy is a hard worker, an earnest, faithful pastor. The whole community respect him highly. We feel much encouraged. MEMBER.

Books.

THE BIBLE WORK. Prepared by J. Glentworth Butler, D. D. The New Testament complete in two volumes. Three volumes of the Old Testament also now ready. Volume III., fresh from the press, gives a full treatment of Israel under Joshua, the Judges, Saul, David and Solomon. Royal octavo, double columns, leaded brevier, 635 pages. Cloth, $4; sheep, $5; half morocco, $6 50, and full morocco, $9 per volume. New York: Funk & Wagnalls.

Butler's Bible Work is a marvel of successful compilation. The author's aim has been "to furnish an orderly, coherent, proportionate, and measurably complete exposition of the sacred text, so that the meaning of the divine utterances, as discerned by studious devout interpreters, qualified by special gifts or attainments, may be disclosed to all who will devoutly read." How well he has succeeded, may be inferred from the strong words of able critics, in the different denominations, who have examined the preceding volumes and emphasized various points of excellence. The work is highly commended by Bishop Huntington, Dr. Cuyler, Prof. Patton, Bishop Vincent, Herrick Johnson, George F. Pentecost and others. It is illustrated with various maps, diagrams, and engravings. It has a copious index, and a list of all the authors quoted. The present volume quotes from nearly 300 eminent writers, and the reader can tell in each case whose words he is reading. Each volume is complete in itself.

CHURCH HISTORY. By Prof. Johann H. Kurtz, D. D., Germany. Translation from latest revised edition by Rev. John MacPherson, M. A. In three volumes. Vol. II. now ready. Cloth, 12mo, 496 pages. Price, per volume, $2. New York: Funk & Wagnalls.

This standard work has now reached its tenth edition. The second volume covers nearly 700 years—from the beginning of the tenth to the close of the 16th century. It presents a rich bill of fare, treating vigorously and at length such topics as the following: Missionary enterprises, as conducted for 300 years in sixteen different fields; the crusades of the 11th, 12th and 13th centuries; the hierarchy, the clergy, and the monks; theological science and its controversies; the Germano-Romanic church; the papacy and its claims; monastic orders and societies; national literature; worship and art; church discipline; corruptions and indulgences; inquisition and persecution; the reformation; Luther and his co-workers; perils and martyrdom; divisions and fanaticism; councils and creeds; victories and defeats. These subjects are divided and developed with much interesting detail.

WHAT IS TRUTH? By the Duke of Argyll. A. D. F. Randolph & Company, New York. Price, 25 cents.

This is an address to the Students' Representative Council of the University of Edinburgh. It is an able discussion of the process of analysis whereby the truth may be reached. It is worth every young man's attention. The Duke of Argyll is one of the foremost scientific theists of the day, and always says something when he speaks.

THE PLEASURES OF LIFE. Twenty-five cents per copy.

A cheap edition of this wonderful book by Sir John Lubbock has just been issued by J. S. Ogilvie, 57 Rose street, New York. It is a complete edition, containing Parts I. and II.

HOW THEY KEPT THE FAITH. By Grace Raymond. A. D. F. Randolph & Company, New York. Price, $1 50.

This is a tale of the Huguenots of Languedoc. In this story the author has endeavored to depict not only the sufferings of the French Protestants for their faith, but the power of the truth itself to animate and sustain. The scene is laid principally in the Cevennes and the old city of Nismes. The period covered includes the ordinances with which Louis XIV. first infringed the liberties of his Huguenot subjects as well as the final extinction of these rights in the Dragonades, and the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. The hero is a pastor's son, who stimulated by the example of a martyred father, and the companionship of a noble mother, adopts the forbidden profession of medicine, and prosecutes his calling, and keeps the faith through the gathering and breaking storm.

THE LORD'S SUPPER. Compiled and edited by John L. Brandt. Standard Publishing Company, Cincinnati. Price, $2.

This is a compilation of about three hundred original articles on The Lord's Supper by two hundred and twenty-seven different authors. It appears to be the completest and most exhaustive work on the subject ever offered to the Christian public. It has a large table of contents, by means of which any particular point in relation to the communion may be easily found. It is sent postpaid to preachers for $1 50.

PERIODICALS.

—THE MANUFACTURER AND BUILDER is a monthly journal devoted to the advancement and diffusion of practical knowledge. The number before us has an interesting article on The Linotype, a new type-setting machine. There is also an exhaustive illustrated article on A New and Rational Method of Disposing of the Dead. There are other articles of value—all which combine to make a readable and instructive journal. Henri Gerard, publisher, 83 Nassau St., New York. Price, $1 50.

—CASSELL'S FAMILY MAGAZINE, for August, opens with a serial, A Woman's Strength; A Trip to the Mont Blanc of New Zealand, describes a little-known region; A Day in a Proof-Reader's Life, describes a night at proof-reading in the office of a London morning paper. Several short stories, poetry and a "Gatherer," unusually full, closes an excellent number. Cassell & Co., New York. Price, $1 50.

—THE KINDERGARTEN, for August, is well filled with articles illustrating the kindergarten system of teaching, and as in some places the system is growing in favor, this monthly will be appreciated in those places. Alice B. Stockham and Co., Chicago. Price, $2.

—THE GOSPEL IN ALL LANDS. The August number of this missionary monthly is devoted principally to the work of missions in Italy. There is also an article on Mission Work in Palestine. This is an ably conducted periodical, affording each month a vast amount of missionary intelligence. It is very cheap at $1 50 a year. Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, 805 Broadway, New York.

—HARPER'S NEW MONTHLY, for August, has The Kremlin and Russian Art, by Theodore Child, illustrated by various artists; Fifty Years of Photography, by J. Wells Champney; A Gentle Ghost, by Mary E. Wilkins; Westminster Effigies, illustrated, by John Lillie; Court Day in Kentucky, by James L. Allen; The Fan, with twelve illustrations, by Louisa Parr, and other papers by popular writers. George William Curtis presides in the Editor's Easy Chair, William Dean Howells in the Editor's Study, and the Drawer is conducted by Charles Dudley Warner. Harper and Brothers, New York. Price, $4.

—THE QUIVER is one of the best magazines coming to our table, and the August number is not inferior to any of its predecessors. For general and Sunday reading we can commend it, and it is only $1 50. Cassell & Company, New York.

—BOOK NEWS, for August, contains several interesting articles of writers and their work, and also literary notes and notices of the latest books, with extracts from the newspaper criticisms. John Wanamaker, Philadelphia. Price, fifty cents.

—The August FORUM has these articles: The Republican Program, John G. Carlisle; Government by Aliens, Bishop Coxe; Problem of Poverty, Edward Atkinson; Methods of Ballot Reform, Judge Hoadly; Transformation of New England, A. L. Bartlett; Canada's Form of Government, Judge J. M. Love; Abuse of Fiction, Walter Levin; Prohibition and License, Senator Ingalls; The Extinction of Leisure, A. H. Peters; Defects of the Coroner System, Dr. S. W. Abbott. Forum Publishing Company, New York. Price, $5.

—CHRISTIAN THOUGHT, for August, is the first number of volume seven. The magazine under the successful editorship of Charles F. Deems, D. D., LL.D., has placed itself among the foremost magazines. This number contains a most excellent paper entitled, Thoughts on the Discord and Harmony between Science and the Bible, by Francis H. Smith, LL.D., of the University of Virginia. Prof. Jerome Allen has a most able paper on The Relation of Pedagogy to Christian Philosophy. The Rev. Aason P. Atterbury writes on the Five Points in an Evolutionary Confession of Faith, and Dr. Deems has a most careful review of the article in a paper entitled, Evolution and Development. The magazine is published by Wilbur B. Ketcham, 13 Cooper Union, New York. $2 a year. Clergymen, $1 50. Single copies, forty cents.

—THE TREASURY FOR PASTOR AND PEOPLE, for August, has five sermons by celebrated preachers: Leading Thoughts of Sermons by several eminent divines; Notes and Suggestions on the Prayer Meeting; The Sunday-school Cause; Helps in Pastoral Work; Light from the Orient in Bible Texts, and many other good things. E. B. Treat, 5 Cooper Union, New York. $2 50 a year, in advance. Clergymen, $2. Single copy, twenty-five cents.

LESSON VIII.—August 25.

THE ANOINTING OF DAVID.

I. Sam. xvi, 1-13.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart.—I. Sam. xvi, 7.

TIME.—B. C. 1065.

PLACE.—Bethlehem (House of Bread).

1. How long wilt thou mourn—So far from the act of deposition being Samuel's, it is clear that it was grievous in his eyes, and if he had been left to himself, nothing of the kind would have taken place. He liked the man, and though compelled to reprove the king, he would probably have been willing to have let him run his course, looking forward to the succession of Jonathan as a sufficient remedy for the errors of his father's reign. Fill thine horn—For the purpose of anointing another king. Anointing with oil was a symbolical act, denoting the appointment to high office in the ancient church or kingdom of Israel. Jesse—The only one who bears this name in Scripture. His genealogy is given in Ruth iv, 18-22 and Chronicles ii, 5-12. I have provided me—Jehovah here gives proof that he still retained and was disposed to exercise the right of appointing the ruler under him. A king for me; not one to gratify the people's desires, but to fulfill all my will, as is said in Acts xiii, 22, and to serve my glory. Or, my king; the Hebrew phrase, to me, or for me, being commonly used for the word "mine."

2. How can I go—The sacred historian does not conceal from us that Samuel himself was afraid, but relates the fact; here is an evidence of verseity. If Saul hear it, he will kill me—This fear on the part of the prophet, who did not generally show himself either hesitating or timid, can only be explained, as we may see from verse 14, on the supposition that Saul was already given up to the power of the evil spirit. It is a remarkable fact that while Saul thus incurred divine displeasure for the willfulness of his conduct there is no reason to question that his popularity was great with the people, and his power constantly increasing. He had many qualities which the multitude admired; and even the very qualities which drew down the anger of the Divine King upon him were not such as an Oriental people regard with much disfavor in their sovereign, or deem to be unbecoming the kingly character. The Lord said—That there was some foundation for Samuel's anxiety we may infer from the fact that the Lord did not blame him for his fear, but pointed out the way by which he might anoint David without attracting attention. There is here an appearance of duplicity, sanctioned by divine authority, which it is important to examine. It was the purpose of God that David should be anointed at this time as Saul's successor, and as the ancestor and the type of his Christ. It was not the purpose of God that Samuel should stir up a civil war by setting up David as Saul's rival. Secrecy, therefore, was a necessary part of the transaction. But secrecy and concealment are not the same as duplicity and falsehood. Concealment of a good purpose, for a good purpose, is clearly justifiable; for example, in war, in medical treatment, in state policy, and in the ordinary affairs of life. In the providential government of the world, and in God's dealings with individuals, concealment of his purpose, till the proper time for its development, is the rule rather than the exception, and must be so. There is, therefore, nothing in the least inconsistent with truth in the occurrence here related.

4. Trembled—Perhaps Samuel's visits were often made with the view of rebuking sin and correcting abuses, and hence this alarm; or the breach between him and Saul may have made the elders afraid of incurring the royal displeasure by welcoming him. Probably they had heard of Samuel's denunciation of Saul, and of his execution of God's judgments on Agag.

5. Sanctify yourselves—By washings and legal purifications. He sanctified Jesse—For these particularly the sacrifice was intended, and it is probable, from the acts and words of Samuel on this occasion, that he privately informed Jesse of his object to anoint one of his sons, but it nowhere appears that Jesse was informed of David's royal destiny. Samuel sanctified those to whom he was specially sent.

6. He looked on Eliab—Eliab (to whom God is father). The eldest son of Jesse. Like many of the relatives of David, he seems to have been a young man of noble appearance and personal beauty.

7. Look not on ... countenance ... height—This time a king was to be chosen, not for his inches, nor for his beauty. Before, the Lord had chosen a king to please the people; now he proposed to choose one to please himself.

8. Neither hath the Lord chosen this—This statement, made to Jesse, implies that Samuel had already informed him of the object of his coming.

9. Shammah (astonishment)—He was the third son of Jesse, and father of Jonadab, "a very subtile man," Amnon's friend (II. Samuel xiii, 3), and of Jonathan, who slew a giant of Gath. (I. Chronicles xx, 6, 7.)

10. Seven—That is, including the three who had already passed. Compare a similar mode of expression. (Judges xiv, 17.) It appears from this, and from chapter xvii, 12, that Jesse had eight sons; but in I. Chronicles ii, 13-15, only seven are ascribed to him.

11. The youngest ... he keepeth the sheep—According to the chronology generally given this was not more than ten years before David became king of Judah, at the age of thirty years. His brothers were older than himself, and between them and him little familiarity existed. His associates were the sons of Abigail and Zeruiah, his half-sisters. The pastoral life was in those ages full of perils and hardships which we wot not of. A shepherd needed to be a man of powerful hand, firm nerves, and great presence of mind. If he went into distant pastures he had to protect his sheep from the depredations of Bedouin tribes; sometimes, especially in being led over the mountains, a sheep or two, if not the whole flock, would get into difficulties from which it required much agility and hardihood to rescue them. ... The true owner, the true shepherd, would rather lay down his life than abandon his sheep. This was the point of honor among shepherds. Now David was a true shepherd, and is known to have in his youth performed memorable exploits for the protection of his flock.

12. He sent, and brought him in—He knew where he would be found. Happy father who knows the absent son will be found at his work!

13. The horn of oil—The oil used on such sacred occasions was composed of a hin of the oil of olives, of the richest myrrh, of cassia, of cinnamon, of sweet calamus, ... This ointment conferred a high honor on the persons and things anointed with it. Anointed him—In all probability Samuel said nothing at the time, since, according to verse 2, he had good reason for keeping the matter secret, not only on his own account, but still more for David's sake; so that even the brethren of David who may have been present knew nothing about the meaning and object of the anointing, but may have imagined that Samuel merely ordained to consecrate David as a pupil of the prophet. As Samuel was now far advanced in years, while Saul's excesses might on any day hurl him to a premature grave, it was necessary that no time should be lost in doing an act with which the future welfare of Israel and of the church was so intimately bound up. In the midst of his brethren—This can only mean "in the presence of his brethren." As, in the subsequent history, they do not seem to have any idea of their brother's high destiny, the true significance of the act appears to have been concealed from them. Whether it was made clear even to Jesse and David himself may be doubted. They may have supposed that Samuel had selected David for a pupil in his prophetic school. Spirit of the Lord came upon David—Was David at any time a member of any of the schools of the prophets? We can not say with certainty, but when we ponder what we read about them it seems very likely that he was. These schools seem to have enjoyed in an eminent degree the gracious power of the Holy Spirit. The special supernatural preparation for his office began from that hour. A divine sign is not a mere ceremony. This could not have happened if the religious-ethical conditions had not been present in David's heart. From that day forward—The words "from that day forward" denote the continuity of the impartation of the Spirit to David's inner life, and indicate its unbroken development, under the guidance of the divine Spirit, to full fitness and capacity for the royal calling. From that time on he was king in fact, Saul king but in name. It is David that rescues Israel from the fear of Goliath, and that ever afterward saves his people. In that act of anointing, the unseen hands of Jehovah had placed in his the reins of power, and left Saul's empty of strength. Went to Ramah—That David was in constant communication with him (and perhaps with the prophetic school there) is quite certain from the following history. Missionary.

Islam and Christian Missions.

Canon Taylor's eulogies an Mohammedanism and his strictures on Christian missions have had the desirable result, at least, of directing special enquiry to the subject of the relations of those missions to the conversion of Islam. As it is necessary to thoroughly understand the strong points of an enemy before successfully grappling with him, so is it necessary for Christian missions to understand the strength of Mohammedanism before directing the assault against its strongholds. There can be no doubt that the religion of Islam has had a special fitness for the wide and powerful sway which it has wielded and still wields. We must start with a recognition of its excellences, and a knowledge of the character of its hold upon the affection and devotion of its adherents. It must be admitted that this has not hitherto been done. To start with the idea that Islam is wholly debased and pernicious in its effects, is not the habit of Christian scholarship; but it forms a strong leaven, we fear, in the less-informed notions of a great majority of Christian minds. It is necessary to know thoroughly whatever redeeming features there are in the religion of the Orient. Islam is a strong and subtle foe, not to be taken unawares nor to be met with ignorant enthusiasm, but to be attacked with every weapon which the resources of Christian thought and consecrated action can supply.

In an article in the August number of the Missionary Review this idea is explained and applied with great clearness and force. It is there shown that Mohammedanism has great moral and political forces with which Christianity must reckon. Among the reasons given for its success are the following: It represents the spirit of reform working under the inspiration of a great truth; it was established and propagated by the power of moral conviction and the power of the sword; it has never seen or known Christianity except in its corrupt or idolatrous forms; it has the advantage which lies in the magnetic power of personal leadership; and it proposes easy terms of salvation and easy dealings with sin, and is full of large license and attractive promise to the lower sensuous nature. A clear perception of this power over the trust and devotion as well as over the credulity and weakness of human nature is sure to give superior adaptation to the missionary methods employed in producing the best results. Those who are thinking and working for success in the Mohammedan mission field are striving to gain this perception, fully realizing the difficulty and importance of the problem they must try to solve.

What, then, is to be the attitude of Christian missions toward Islam in the subtler and more earnest struggle which has begun? Certainly not that of ignoble compromise or partnership. Canon Taylor's contention that Christianity should join hand in hand with Mohammedanism for certain purposes and with certain mutual concessions will never find favor with the consecrated effort of Protestant missions. It would be impossible to gain any concessions from Mohammedanism, with its claim of exclusive sway and the right to exterminate unbelievers. While it is in the highest degree expedient that missionary thought and effort should familiarize themselves with the strategic points of Mohammedan power and success, it is utterly impossible to sacrifice the principles of Christianity to any compromising contact with the spirit and aims of Islam. It must be the gospel message to the benighted Moslem soul. The higher, purer religion must meet and vanquish the false and sensual religion. Already the great work has been well begun in the Turkish Empire, including Syria and Egypt. There the American Churches have already 70,000 Protestant adherents among the native population. This shows that the spiritual weapons of Christianity can prevail against Islam, and is a pressage of their final triumphs.—Christian Guardian.

The whole church must accept the duty of telling the old, old story. Each one of us is his brother's keeper. To have heard the message is sufficient qualification and authority for sounding it in the ears of every unsaved soul.

Let every hearer become a herald. This is the theory of evangelism in a nutshell, and we have only to put this theory into practice to bring the gospel into contact with every soul before the bells of God's clock of the ages shall ring in the natal hour of a new century!

Temperance.

Prohibition in Kansas.

BY SENATOR J. J. INGALLS.

Civilization breaks upon the frontier in a turbulent and lawless surf of humanity, to whose existence alcohol in some form seems indispensable, and to those who can recall the pioneer period of the State, it seems incredible that among a population of 1,700,000 people, extending from the Missouri River to Colorado, and from Nebraska to Oklahoma, there is not a place where the thirsty or hilarious wayfarer can enter, and lying down a coin, demand his glass of beer. This does not imply that absolute drouth prevails everywhere, or that "social irrigation" has entirely disappeared. In the few localities where public opinion does not sustain the law, it is habitually and flagrantly disregarded, and the appetite that craves indulgence is gratified at the sacrifice of those moral restraints which are the barriers and safeguards of society. Sales for the special purposes are confined to druggists, who are hedged about with the stringent provisions of the "Pharmacy act," the penalties for the violation of which are ingeniously rigid, and have not been exceeded for severity since the code of Draco.

Since the adoption of the amendment four general elections have been held, and at each of them the people have repeated their adhesion to the principle by the election of Legislatures pledged to prohibition. The result is generally accepted as an accomplished fact. Hostility has practically been subdued. Prohibition prohibits. The prediction of its opponents has not been verified; immigration has not been repelled, nor has capital been diverted from the State. The period has been one of unexampled growth and development. Whether coincidence or cause, is not material. The evils prophesied have not come to pass.

In London the United Kingdom Temperance and General Provident Institution was established forty-nine years ago for the purpose of doing a general life-insurance business, but at the same time permitting its patrons who were total abstainers to enjoy whatever benefits might accrue to them as such. Two sections were established among the insured, one being known as the Temperance Section, in which none but total abstainers were admitted, and the other known as the General Section, in which all applicants who could pass a satisfactory examination were admitted. Twenty years of statistics show that total abstainers have nearly thirty per cent. advantage over moderate drinkers—that being the difference in the rate of the two classes.

"If this Book is right," said an old Roman Catholic to his wife, on reading the New Testament, "we are wrong." Three weeks after he said: "If this Book is right, we are lost." Three weeks after he said, as he continued reading: "Wife, if this Book is right, we are saved."

Briefs.

The Woman's Missionary Advocate says:

The Louisiana Conference Society may well rejoice that a young lady from her own borders, and one so highly endowed as Miss Sallie Phillips is, has offered to go to Brazil, and has been appointed to take the place Miss Chrisman was to fill. So the work goes on as the Lord wills. In just one month after the one was called up higher, the other was ready to take up her work. This one fact is enough to convince every woman who has not joined our society that this is a permanent institution of the church.

President Candler, of Emory College, Georgia, made a fine address before the Educational Convention, recently held in Nashville, in which he pointed out the progress the South has made in educating her people since 1865. Of church work in education, he gave the following significant figures:

Of the collegiate institutions of the South, as of the whole country, quite the largest number are church schools. Of the 365 colleges and universities in the United States, 278 are denominational institutions; of the 4,836 instructors in these 365 schools, 3,509 are in church colleges, and they teach over 50,000 of the 65,728 college students of the country. In the South about the same proportion prevails. Religion in the United States is not afraid of science, and science would be sorely bereaved were the support of religion withdrawn.

The saved heathen evidently intend to show us how to give to spread the gospel. Some of our people have learned that lesson; some are learning, but "other some" are still in ignorance. Here is the way some converted heathen show their appreciation of the blessings of the gospel:

It is said that there are about one thousand Christian Chinamen connected with the Congregational Churches of Oregon and California. Their religion seems to be sincere, as it is also said that they contribute about $2,500 for home mission work, and have organized a Foreign Missionary Society, with $1,400 to begin with, and have sent two missionaries to China.

A Christian who is not missionary is not Christian to hurt. Indeed, he has the wrong name, for Christ was the first great missionary; and he who is not missionary in spirit has no business with the Christian name.

Here is a good example of what "red tape" is:

A paymaster in the United States Navy gives the following account of the red tape that must be unwound in order to buy an article needed for use on board a man-of-war: Supposing that a paper of tacks is wanted on board a United States ship on a foreign station, the following is the routine actually required under general order No. 48: Four requisitions are made out, which are signed as follows: Officer making the requisition, four times; captain, eight; paymaster, eight, and admiral, four. Bids are sent out to five merchants which are signed by pay-officer five times; merchant bidding, five; acceptance of bid, paymaster, one. Bids are then made out in quintuplicate and are signed by the captain five times; paymaster, ten; senior officer of the Board of Inspection, five, and person receiving the money, five. A report is attached by the senior officer of the Board of Survey in duplicate, two signatures, and the officer who has made the requisition signs a receipt on the bill five times, when it is complete, with sixty-two signatures. This is called simplification of methods and protecting the government by a so-called system of checks and balances.

Brandon District Conference.

An all-day ride from New Orleans to Jackson, Miss., was beguiled and improved by reading, "What is Truth?"—an address delivered by the Duke of Argyll to the Students' Representative Council of the University of Edinburgh. Found Bishop Galloway on the platform waiting for the train to Pelahatchie, whither we were soon transported. The Bishop had conveyance provided to Shiloh, the seat of the Conference, and this scribe "tarried for a night" in Pelahatchie. Good accommodations made the night pass pleasantly. In the morning early Bro. Chapman came for the editor. That early morning ride in August, in a Milburn wagon, drawn by two mules—one, "Gus," by name, a nimble little black, with clean-cut limbs and a step which indicated that his hoofs were built of the finest steel; the other, "Peter," whose every movement indicated the loftiest genius for deliberation—will not soon be forgotten. The grand old woods, the pleasant farm-houses, the growing crops, the well-laden fruit trees along the way, left a pleasant memory, to which we may often recur with satisfaction.

The Conference was well under way when we came upon the ground. The attendance of the members of the Conference was very fine, but the attendance of visitors was simply astounding. It seemed as if the whole country had emptied itself out upon Shiloh Camp Ground. They came from all quarters, and in all sorts of conveyances—men, women and children—until the ground was filled. Many reports had already been made; but from those we heard, and from questions propounded, we were gratified to learn that the spiritual state of the church in the Brandon district is in a very healthy condition. Sunday-schools are well attended, churches are being built and repaired, and parsonages improved. We should take this to be the banner temperance district in Mississippi, every county having the local option law, except one. The finances of the district are in a hopeful condition, and the promise of good crops assures the realization of a full collection from many circuits. The revival spirit is in the churches. Several good meetings have already been held, and the camp meetings are coming on apace, when we expect to hear shouts of victory from Bro. Johnston and his faithful workers. Several young preachers have determined to leave their works and take a course in college. The editor took occasion to recommend Centenary, and to state the fact that from any point on the Meridian and Vicksburg road east of Jackson, and from any point on the Mobile and Ohio road from West Point to Meridian, and from any point south of Meridian on the Northeastern road, Centenary can be reached easily and comfortably in less than 24 hours! The fact is, all East Mississippi is right at Centenary's door, if Governor Lowry don't break up the Northeastern railroad!

The Bishop made an address on Christian education, and lifted a collection of about $1,300.

While the Conference was held on the camp ground, the preachers and delegates found homes with the brethren and friends near by. The editor stayed on the ground, and enjoyed the Christian hospitality of Bro. and Sister McGuffey, which was given on the old-fashioned camp-meeting style.

We left before Conference adjourned, in order to catch the train for Meridian, having promised Dr. Andrews to spend the Sabbath with him. We found him waiting at the depot, and in a few minutes were quietly snoozing in a comfortable bed in the parsonage. The larger part of the Doctor's family is enjoying the breezes that "blow soft" from the Mississippi Sound; but the welcome from the grandmother and Miss Martha was from the heart, and went to the heart. Our first day in Meridian was pleasantly spent, visiting the Sunday-school, preaching to a large audience on "The Holy Spirit and Missions," and enjoying the hospitality of that large-hearted layman, John A. Lewis, and his family. The appointment to preach at night turned into a disappointment by reason of a heavy rain; so, after hours of waiting, we took the delayed train for home. Thus ended the thirteenth District Conference trip the ADVOCATE has taken this year. Wherever it has gone, it has found welcome among "brethren beloved," and has made many friends. It has a large circulation in the Brandon district, and the determination of the brethren is to increase that circulation very largely by the next Conference. This is the resolution also of the brethren throughout Mississippi and Louisiana. During the camp meetings, and throughout the fall campaign, they will make special efforts on this line; and those efforts will be rewarded with abundant success, and at the annual convocations publisher and editor, and preachers and subscribers, will all rejoice together in the increasing prosperity of the paper.

Our communion with the brethren on these trips has resulted in great spiritual refreshment, and, if possible, our appreciation of the Methodist preacher's character is higher than ever, and our love for the preacher is deeper and broader.

Our New College.

During the last few weeks we have attended several District Conferences in the North Mississippi and Mississippi Conferences, and have heard much talk of the new Methodist College for boys which the brethren in that part of our territory have projected. There is a general sentiment, where we have been, in favor of the project, and this is indicated not merely by the talk, but by substantial giving of money to endow the institution, even before its real existence begins. The idea of a Methodist college for boys in Mississippi is taking firm hold upon the Methodist people, and they are so sure that the idea will resolve itself into a reality that they are not afraid to give their money to help bring about such a realization. Not only are our own people becoming enthused on the subject, but outsiders are stirred up. Quite a number of towns have entered the lists as bidders for the location of the institution. They propose not only to donate grounds, but also money to secure the college for their several communities. Bishop Galloway has been stirring the church all over Mississippi on the question of Christian education, and giving the people an opportunity to respond to the magnificent offer of Maj. Millsaps, of Jackson. By these efforts he has raised, up to this writing, about $26,500. It looks to us as if this is a long step toward meeting Maj. Millsaps' $50,000 with $50,000 from the church. Surely the Methodists of Mississippi can raise the other $23,500 by the meeting of the North Mississippi Conference, December 4.

The committee who have the matter in hand are working earnestly to complete the endowment of $100,000 by the time the Conferences meet, so that the whole matter may be made to assume a definite shape towards a permanent organization and equipment. We look upon these—organization and equipment—as of far more importance than the matter of location, which has been so thoroughly canvassed in our columns. The best location in the world can not overcome the evil of unwise organization and deficient equipment. On the other hand, wise organization and a thorough equipment for true college work will make a success at almost any point. Knowing those who are in charge of this important enterprise, we feel assured that they will take no step without mature deliberation and earnest prayer for heavenly guidance, and we bid them God-speed in their efforts to build up a college in Mississippi, which shall reflect additional honor upon the cause of Christian education in our beloved South.

We reproduce from last week's edition the recommendations of the committee to the presiding elders, preachers in charge and people:

1. That the preachers in the two Conferences be requested and urged at once to preach at all their appointments on the subject of "Christian and Denominational Education," with special reference to our college enterprise.

2. That the presiding elders take charge of the canvass in their respective districts, appointing educational meetings in each pastoral charge, and calling to their aid such help as they can secure.

3. That educational mass meetings be held at one or more prominent points in each district, which meetings Bishop Galloway is expected to attend.

4. That every member of the Joint Committee is also authorized and expected to secure as many endowment notes as possible, and to lose no opportunity to further the enterprise.

5. That towns and communities competing for the location of the college be directed to send their offers, with description of lands, or of lands and buildings, with abstract of title, to Maj. R. W. Millsaps, chairman of Joint Committee, Jackson, Miss., by November 15, 1889.

Appreciation of Our Own.

Selfishness leads us in most cases to overestimate whatever is our own, while we underrate that which belongs to another. But in some remarkable instances this rule is reversed. Where the possession is moral rather than legal, and the property is spiritual rather than pecuniary, there is a constant disposition to underestimate our possessions as compared with those of others.

To begin at home: A man is apt not to give his own wife credit for all the virtues she really possesses. He sees her in all her worst, as well as in her best, moods, and feels the effects of those infirmities and mistakes in her which are inseparable from humanity. He sees, and often exaggerates, her worst features, while he beholds other wives, with whom he compares his own, only under the most favorable circumstances. We put on our best clothes when we go abroad; and the fairer side of every life is usually shown in public. The same principles apply to wives when judging their husbands. Hence both are apt to fall into grievous errors when they disparage their own as compared with the husbands or wives of others. Brothers and sisters often fall into the habit of judging each other indiscreetly, and are seen preferring the companionship of others. I knew eight brothers of a very intellectual family, of whom, when half a dozen of them were attending the same school, no two would ever be seen going or coming together.

This principle operates generally and powerfully in determining the public estimate of schools and teachers. We are apt to know the faults of schools that are near us, while we are surer to hear the virtues of some that are far away, perhaps, extravagantly praised. Everybody knows how hard it is to keep up a neighborhood school; and herein we find the reason. When every child goes home at night and tells mother and father and the rest of the family just how often Miss Fanny, the teacher, frowned during the day, and how many wrinkles there were in her forehead, and how much harder she frowned at me than she did at Jim, I say, when this is (as it often is) the case, within three months the undermining of the popular school is perceptibly begun; and by the end of three years Happy Glorious Institute perishes amid its friends. It has been talked to death. Children talked to parents, parents talked to neighbors, and neighbors talked to friends, until the institute, the pet of the community, lost its reputation, which was its life, and that, too, because the gift of tongues round about it was not of the pentecostal sort. Meanwhile the patrons of what has now become Forlorn Academy read and hear many good things of schools far away, and send their children off to school. This applies to Christian denominations as well as to neighborhoods. Did anybody ever hear of a Methodist patronizing any but a Methodist school? If so, why? Even newspapers do not escape the baneful effects of this craze for things we know less about than we do about our own. (I leave the editor to enlarge on this point.)

Nowhere, perhaps, does this propensity find a more striking application than in the sphere of ministerial reputation. Instances there are in which people are selfishly devoted to their own preacher; but the cases are not few in which that sweet delusion by which "distance lends enchantment to the view" holds sway even to the destruction of the good name and usefulness of the ambassador of God. Our preacher—well, I like him—but * * *. From Sabbath to Sabbath you have listened to him over and over, from day to day you have seen him and heard him discussed. If he has a defect or a fault (and who has none?), you have discovered it or been told of it; his wrong side has been looked at and magnified until you think you would rather have another pastor, or hear another preacher. Rev. Dr. Paragonian Eloquentor comes along, or the Rev. Dr. Bitter Pill, or the Rev. Dr. Smooth-as-Butter, or the Rev. Mr. Rasper, or simply the Rev. Dr. Stranger; everybody goes to hear him, and, whether for a day or a week, everybody is pleased. Poor Bro. Known well! what can he say or do? He knows that if these people knew these transient brethren as well as they know him, the spell would be broken. What is to be done? Shall he hide himself till these calamities be overpast? Is the world of gospel hearers becoming so Athenian in its spirit that pastorates of even a few years will soon be impracticable? Or will sober sense still say the old wine is better? Ah! if we knew the faults of the strangers who charm us as well as we know the infirmities of our pastor, perhaps we would be satisfied with him. Let us consider these things and learn to appreciate our own.

W. L. C. H.

On Preachers Killing Themselves.

A few weeks ago, while standing with a beloved brother at the tomb of Elijah Steele, my friend remarked that the men who had done the most good in the world were those who had burned themselves out. "There is one who did this," said he; "and he gave the first impulse to Methodism in New Orleans. Summerfield was another; Kimball, another; Foster, another; Porter and Jackson were others, and so on. If the Lord wants me to burn out in five years, why should I not do it?" Being an older man myself, and having for a long time had charge of ambitious and aspiring youth, who often manifested an impulse to kill themselves by hard study and other work, I was led to reflect on the above remarks:

1. Our lives belong to God. He gave them to us, and he has the right to take them again when he sees fit.

2. Sometimes he puts us in places of danger or peril, where life itself must be exposed in the performance of duty. In such positions it is honorable to fall at our posts as a soldier falls in battle.

3. Ordinarily, a man is the guardian of his own life, and, as such, he is to consider what the call of Providence is concerning his disposition of it. Our Savior said of himself, "I have power to lay down my life and I have power to take it up again." He chose to finish his work in about three and a half years.

This is one side of the question. Let us now look at the other side:

1. He commanded his disciples to flee from danger. "If they persecute you in one city, flee ye to another." The Apostle Paul was let down through a window at Damascus in a basket.

2. The most useful men in the church have been long-lived. Look at Wesley, who died at eighty-eight; Lovick Pierce, at ninety-four; Dr. McFerrin, at eighty-odd; Bishop Kavanaugh, eighty-two.

3. The laws of health and physical well-being are as much divine laws as the command to preach the gospel.

4. An overworked brain is not fit for the guidance and instruction of others. Time and strength are necessary for the acquisition of knowledge or influence, as well as zeal and courage.

5. Divine wisdom is never in a hurry. The church and the world will need men as much thirty or forty years hence as they are needed now.

6. Impatience and fiery zeal do not show a great amount of confidence in God's methods of converting and saving mankind. "Not by might or by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord."

7. Rest in the Lord and wait patiently for him. The fact is, while there are many lazy and indolent people in the world, for whom such texts as, "The zeal of thy house hath eaten me up," and, "It is better to wear out than to rust out," would be very appropriate, these are the very ones who never take them home. If you have a lazy horse and a quick horse in the same team, you may know that when you crack your whip the latter will be the one to jump, while the former will never hear it.

Therefore, presiding elders and other old men ought rather to hold these fiery spirits in check than to pat them on the back and urge them beyond their strength. Our best young men require to be restrained rather than encouraged.

Polish is good when put on the right thing. Polish on a sermon is good, provided there is the solid stratum of gospel thought beneath it. Solid thought will "take polish," but no other sort will!

Personal and Otherwise.

Don't fail to read the thrilling account of the ascent of Pike's Peak, by "Shreveport," on the first page.

A private note from one of our pastors says: "I am praying for the editors and enjoying the Advocates, of course. It is very much like praying for the preacher. You can't pray for the preacher without enjoying his preaching." That is exactly the case. Try it, reader, in the case of your own pastor.

Rev. W. W. Elwang, pastor of the Memorial Presbyterian Church, in this city, brings us under obligation to him for his sermon on "Gambling, with Special Reference to the Louisiana Lottery." It is published by E. S. Upton, 94 Camp street, at five cents a copy, and is a good presentation of the subject. Mr. Upton also sends out: "Is It Right to Buy a Lottery Ticket?" by "R. Q. M." Price, thirty cents a dozen. This is good reading, and appeared first in the Southwestern Presbyterian.

Rev. J. L. Futrell has removed to Muskogee, Indian Territory. In a private note, August 5, he says: "We are off to-morrow for the home of the Indian, seeking health and work."

The good people of Louisiana Avenue, appreciating the work of their pastor, Rev. Dr. J. B. Walker, and recognizing his need of rest and recuperation, have given him a vacation of sixty days, and supplied him with means necessary to take a trip to the mountains. He and his wife are now at Glade Springs, Va.

The contract to build our new church in Gretna has been awarded to Herichs and Dannemanu, of this city. The house is to be built within three months, and to cost $1,800. The pastor, Bro. Henry Ahrens, deserves great credit for pushing this matter, and we hope to see him and his people in their new house before Conference.

The brethren are having some precious revivals, and will have more in the near future. Many souls will be converted and brought into the church. If you want your new converts to stick and grow in grace, see to it immediately that each one becomes a subscriber to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. That will hold them.

Gov. Lowry "hustled" the "rustler" Sullivan around quite beautifully, and finally landed him in prison. The Governor's determined action through his whole business is highly commended by all right-minded people. But the crowds that heroed the slugger wherever he showed himself are a sad comment on our civilization!

During Dr. Walker's absence from the city to recuperate his health, the editor has been "put in charge" of the Louisiana Ave. Church.

Rev. R. S. Collier writes that Rev. Sue Jones will be present on Saturday and Sunday of the Downsville Camp Meeting. The meeting begins August 23.

Three and a half years in this office have taught us to waste no time in reading anonymous communications. They go without reading into the "inscrutible and gaping maw" of the waste-basket. Anonymous writers had better save their time and postage stamps for some other purpose.

A brother, whose opinion we value most highly, writes: "You have my thanks for your timely and excellent editorial on 'Pulpit Language'." And he adds: "Blessings be upon you and the ADVOCATE." To which we say, Amen!

During the past week of "self-denial and prayer," one of our city pastors, following the program, had up the subject, China. After making a talk on the subject, he asked for remarks from any who were disposed to talk. There seemed not to be much disposition to speak on the subject. But it was getting to be embarrassing, when a young sister arose and said: "All I know about China is, that I have been teaching a Chinaman for two years, and now he is converted and gone to preaching among his own people." The effect was electrical.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. M. L. White writes that Vinclave circuit is in good shape. Mr. West has just held the third Quarterly Conference on this circuit. The salaries of the preacher in charge and the presiding elder well up. General collections nearly all paid. We have a band of faithful official men on this circuit."

—Rev. H. S. Johns writes from Waxia, La., August 8: "Bro. W. W. Sanford, of Donaldsonville, came up last Saturday, and preached several days for me at Lower Waxia. The meeting was well attended, and our little church much strengthened. Thank God, Waxia at both places is in better footing now than at any time since I have been here. Pray for us."

—Rev. H. P. Lewis writes from Gloster, Miss.: "Our meeting at New Hope, near Deasonville, closed on the seventh instant. Thirty-seven received into the church, with eight more applicants for membership. Bro. T. B. Holloman helped two days; Bro. Hopper, three days. Both did good, faithful work. Bro. T. B. Reagan, of Yazoo circuit, was with us three days, and did good work. About one hundred have been added to the church on Benton circuit during the last quarter. We are having a good time at Sam Jones Camp Ground. Rev. Jo. Jones is here doing good work."

—Bro. W. R. Stuart, writing from Ocean Springs, August 8, says: "Our week of prayer begun last Sunday morning, at eleven o'clock, in our humble little church. Bishop Keener preached. Every evening, at five to six o'clock, the dear Bishop holds the meetings—few in numbers; but, from my standpoint, I have never been in more powerful, spiritual meetings. God grant that the entire Methodist Episcopal Church, South, may be converted to the great cause of our foreign mission work. Mrs. Stuart and I respond to your call for Japan in last ADVOCATE. Enclosed find $2."

—Rev. J. A. Randolph writes from Holly Springs, Miss., August 9: "One of our oldest and most faithful members—Col. J. W. Fant—dropped dead in his yard, Tuesday, August 6, 'having served his generation by the will of God.'"

—Rev. W. D. Dominick writes from Rolling Fork: "Our outlook at present is favorable. We are having some accessions. We expect Bro. Joe Jones in the fall, when we expect to capture the town for Christ."

—Rev. C. McDonald, writing from Sam Jones Camp Meeting, August 12, says: "Our meeting begun on August 9. Rev. Jo. Jones reached here on Saturday morning, and is doing a liberal share of the preaching. His sermons are pointed, incisive, and with power. The prospects are favorable for a good meeting. About 1,200 heard the Word at eleven A. M. and three P. M. yesterday. We continue until next Sunday night. Pray for us."

To those brethren who have so much to say about "our beloved presiding elder" and his "magnetic preaching," we commend the following from a Baptist exchange in regard to the preaching of a Baptist D. D.:

As a preacher, he is not so brilliant as Henson, nor so eloquent as Ellis, nor so scholarly as J. B. Thomas, nor so magnetic as Broadus, nor so frigidly proper as Hoyt, nor so impetuous as Dixon, nor so metallically intense as McArthur, nor so pathetic as Peddie, nor so dashing as Gifford, but he is a man of decided and impressive ability. His sermon was clear-cut, rich in thought, and delivered with a calm and reserveful manner.

Don't fail to read Dr. Black's advertisement in another column.

EMORY & HENRY
COLLEGE.

THE 53D ANNUAL SESSION
WILL BEGIN
SEPTEMBER 5, 1889.

The last session was one of the best in the long and useful history of the College. The order and general behavior of students was excellent; moral and religious influences strong, and admirable progress generally was made in studies.

GYMNASIUM and WM. MORROW SCIENCE HALL are finished and beautiful additions to the already lovely grounds.

Work of rebuilding the burnt "BYARS HOUSE" is in progress, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

The new SOCIETY HALLS will be commodious and elegant.

In addition to subjects heretofore embraced in the courses, thorough practical instruction will be given in Analytical Chemistry, Determination of Minerals, Assaying, etc.

NO HEALTHIER OR MORE BEAUTIFUL PLACE. NO MALARIA.

No saloons, no occurrences to distract the minds of students, no safer place for boys and young men. Charges very moderate. Every possible arrangement for the encouragement of young men of limited means.

Mansfield Female College
Conservatory of Music and Art,
MANSFIELD, LA.

One of the most popular and flourishing institutions of the South. The Sixty-sixth Session opens September 11, 1889, and the Spring Term begins February 1, 1890, with an able and experienced faculty. Curriculum comprehensive. Instruction thorough. Advantages in Music unsurpassed, as in the best conservatories. The pianos are new and of the best make. The Technicon and the Technichone are used to facilitate the work in the music department, placing this department beyond competition. Departments of Fine Arts and Industrial Arts under specialists.

The location is unsurpassed for beauty and attractiveness, and the school is celebrated for the remarkable record for good health maintained. The climate is the best in which to educate, and the place is the safest for girls. The main building is of brick, massive and commodious, with a large and well-shaded campus. Rooms large, well furnished, warmed and ventilated. Ample provision for the table of the best the market affords. All necessary comfort secured. Expenses very low and the school very economical. A new building with a large audience hall is in contemplation, and extensive improvements are in progress to make this the grandest institution in the State.

NASHVILLE, TENN., June 22, 1889.

For four or five years I have every year spent, at least, one day in the class-room of Messrs. Wall and Mooney's School. I have questioned their classes, and heard them recite in English, Mathematics, German, Greek and Latin; and I do not hesitate to call their work excellent. Better trained pupils it would be hard to find. The moral culture is equally good.

Our Young People.

FOUND—PERPETUAL MOTION.

BY ELIZABETH M. CLARK.

A learned professor, out walking one day
Through the streets of a far-noted city,
Came across a small boy who was happy at play,
And on him the scholar took pity.

"Good morning, my son; do you not go to school,
Addition to learn—and sub raction?
Can you do every sum by the very best rule?
Do you know all the points of a fraction?"

The boy answered not, he was dumb with surprise,
But he gravely regarded the stranger
As if he would learn, through his questioning eyes,
Whether such conversation meant danger.

"If you think you'd learn something by listening to me,
You may, for I've taken the notion
To teach you regarding the earth and the sea,
And regarding perpetual motion."

"I would like," quoth the boy, with the calm of disdain
"To hear of the earth and the ocean:
But regarding the other you know naught, 'tis plain,
For I am perpetual motion.

"At least that's the name father gave me one day;
He said it belonged to me plainly."
"Ah, yes" said the sage, walking slowly away,
"He has found what we've sought for so vainly."

"Take Hold!"

"A boy in the well! A boy in the well! A boy in the well!"

This was the cry that rang through the solitary street of a roadside village one clear summer evening. The day's work was done. The sun had set in amber and gold. The busy laborers were resting after their toil in the harvest-field

Some one asked whose boy it was. Others inquired how he had fallen in. Another wished to know why the slab had been removed from the mouth of the well, or who could have left the well uncovered. But a young man, hastily stepping forward and stripping himself of his jacket, called a crowd of helpers around him with the words:

"Never mind who did the mischief. Let us see who can undo it. That is the question now."

"He is right," said a dozen voices; and the bucket was lowered, the windlass turned, and many eager faces bent towards the darkness. One voice after another shouted to the child. Some advised him to get into the bucket; some asked him if he were frightened; but to all the advice and questions there came no audible reply. Not a sound could be heard.

"It has been a dry season and there is little or no water in the well," somebody said.

"Dear me!" said the boy's mother; and it was only yesterday that I was grumbling about the water being scarce."

"Give us a lantern!" shouted the first man. A lantern was lighted and brought; but just at this moment the father of the child was seen elbowing his way to the front through the crowd. Immediately the neighbors made way for him to pass. He had been away on some business at an adjoining farmer's, and as he returned through the gloaming to his cottage what had been his surprise to see his own home deserted, the village street emptied and a crowd gathered at the well.

As he heard the story and saw his poor wife wringing her hands he became very pale. But calming himself as best he could, he said to the men who stood around him:

"Step back, mates! step back, will you? Leave the child to me."

Then, examining carefully the windlass and rope, he drew up the empty bucket, untied it, and weighted it with a couple of sacks rolled tightly together. Then he let it down again slowly till he felt sure it had touched the bottom.

"Don't speak," he said, looking around; and laying himself down on the ground, with his face to the well's mouth, he shouted, loudly and clearly: "Johnny, take hold of the rope!"

This time there was a slight quiver, which those holding it could plainly feel.

"Pull firmly," said the man. "Steady, mates, steady!"

And then once more putting his mouth to the well, he said, speaking into the darkness: "Hold on firm, my child."

All this time the windlass went on turning. The well was deep, and the pull seemed a long one.

At length one good, English, hearty cheer rent the air.

"All safe!" shouted the crowd.

"Here he is, and thank you, mates," said the father, as he lifted the child in his arms carrying him down the street.

The little boy was saved! The father's voice had reached him. He had been taught to obey; and when the voice he knew told him to hold the rope the child could understand, and he did it, too. The command was a wise one—it proved the child's salvation.

Our heavenly Father sent his "only begotten Son" down into this dark world. He has provided a way of safety. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." This is his command. If we obey it, we are saved.

"Let him take hold of my strength that he may make peace with me, and he shall make peace with me." O, what a glorious promise, true and plain! Will you do as Johnny did down in the dark well? Will you take hold of the rope to-day?"—Friendly Visitor.

DIDN'T KNOW HIS LESSONS.—In one of our public schools, recently, a teacher was examining a class of pupils.

"Tommy," she said, addressing herself to a little fellow who had not yet left off his "baby talk."

"Tommy, form a sentence with the word 'dozen' in it."

Tommy thought over it a moment and then replied, as his face brightened at the thought of his success—

"I doz'en know my lessons!"

Then the boys and girls all burst out laughing at him, and the teacher thought he was not far wrong after all, for it was evident he did not know his lessons.

MR. EDITOR: As you were so kind as to print my first letter, I thought I would try once more. In the ADVOCATE, of July 25, Miss I. I. Miller asks the question, Who was it that made iron swim? I will answer: Elisha. You will find it in II. Kings, vi, 6. I will close by asking the readers of the ADVOCATE two questions: How old was Seth when he died? and how many times is the word "wires" found in the Bible? Hoping this will not reach the waste-basket, I remain,

Your friend,

MELVILLE DYE.

OXFORD, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl seven years old, on a visit to my Grandpa Sharp in Donaldsonville. I came to see my grandma who is sick. Mr. Wimberly is the minister, and my uncle, Mr. Will Buford, is the superintendent. Aunt Clara Walter plays the organ at Sunday-school. My mamma has been in heaven four years. I have no brothers and sisters, but lots of cousins and a good papa. I live with my Grandma Binnings in Thibodeaux.

Your little friend.

CLARA I. BINNINGS.

The sensation of homesickness has been variously described, but never more graphically than by a little girl who, miles away from home and mamma, sat, heavy-eyed and silent, at a hotel table. "Aren't you hungry, dear?" asked her aunt, with whom she was traveling. "No'm." "Does your head ache?" "No'm." "What is the matter?" The child's lip quivered, and she said, in a tone to grieve the heart, "I'm so seasick for home."

The success of sainthood is the success attained by struggle and suffering and achieved by faith; a success of honor, of clean hands and pure heart, of service to man and glory to God.

Household.

Mothers.

A mother whose heart remains young is an incalculable blessing to her children; she can enter into their games and be a child with them, she is the playfellow of her girls; and as they grow older, is almost like their elder sister; and if she have sons, there is a camaraderie between her and them which makes home the most delightful place in the world, and "mother" the most charming of companions. It was thus with Goethe, the German poet, his mother's first-born son, who came to be her plaything and pleasure long before she was out of her teens. She was a genial, social, and withal a clever woman, and always maintained that the bond between herself and her boy owed its strength to the fact that "my Wolfgang and I were young together."

A mother's authority ought to be marked by a sweet reasonableness. The children when old enough to comprehend more than the bare duty of implicit obedience, should be convinced that all her rules and regulations are based on sound principles, and have their welfare for their aim and end. Thus a young girl of fifteen, invited to form one of a large party in a country house, where every one was older than herself, adhered to her mother's rule that she was always to go to bed at nine o'clock. No matter what fun was going on, what temptation was held out to induce her to stay ten minutes longer, she was gently inflexible, and would say, smiling, "Mother told me never to stay up after nine, it wouldn't be good for me."

Many remarkable men have had remarkable mothers. The first Napoleon never forgot his allegiance to his mother Lucrezia Bonaparte, who has been called the Cornelia of her day. She was a woman who practiced "plain living and high thinking," and, though her son's words bore two meanings, his tribute to her worth was heartfelt when he reiterated, with the deepest conviction, "France wants mothers!"

John Wesley, who was the twelfth of nineteen children, loved his mother so dearly that, when he was a young man at Oxford, he used to pray that he might never survive her. And many years afterwards, when word was brought him, at Bristol, that she was dying, he ordered his horse to be brought to the door of the chapel where he was preaching in Broadmead, and rode on all night, never drawing rein till he reached Moorfields. Some one made a remark to him about his haste and anxiety, and he answered, "Ah, I can never have another mother!"—Cassell's Family Magazine.

LOVE YOUR BOYS.—Do not work the boys too hard, or their natural love for nature and the open air will be turned to hate of you and their surroundings, which they will leave when advancing years give them the power of doing so. Many a little scraggy, knotty nature can be made to grow into fairness and vigor if planted in the soil of love, watered with tenderness and nourished in the air of freedom, instead of getting pinched and twisted beyond all future redemption. We should certainly make an effort to get the good-will of the boys in the neighborhood, especially if bad ones are inclined to rob us. Let us invite them into the garden to share any fruit or flowers we have to spare. The fruit is always appreciated, if not the flowers, and we most effectually get rid of our enemies by making them our friends.—American Gardener.

Our prayers are sometimes best answered when our desires are most opposed.—South.

Listen—a song of rejoicing.
Hearts that were heavy are glad,
Women, look up and be hopeful,
There's help and there's health to be had.
Take courage, O weak ones despondent,
And drive back the foe that you fear
With the weapon that never will fail you.
O, be of good cheer, for when you suffer from any of the weaknesses, "irregularities," and "functional derangements," peculiar to your sex, by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription you can put the enemy of ill-health and happiness to rout. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee of satisfaction in every case, or money refunded. See bottle-wrapper.

WHEN they find how rapidly health is restored by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The reason is that this preparation contains only the purest and most powerful alteratives and tonics. To thousands yearly it proves a veritable elixir of life.

"Mrs. Jos. Lake, Brockway Centre, Mich., writes: "Liver complaint and indigestion made my life a burden and came near ending my existence. For more than four years I suffered untold agony. I was reduced almost to a skeleton, and hardly had strength to drag myself about. All kinds of food distressed me, and only the most delicate could be digested at all. Within this time mentioned several physicians treated me without giving relief. Nothing that I took seemed to do any permanent good until I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which has produced wonderful results. Soon after commencing to take the Sarsaparilla I could see an in my condition, my appetite began to return and with it came the ability to digest all the food taken, my strength improved each day, and after a few months of faithful attention to your directions, I found myself a well woman, able to attend to all household duties. The medicine has given me a new lease of life, and I cannot thank you too much."

"We, the undersigned, citizens of Brockway Centre, Mich., hereby certify that the above statement, made by Mrs. Lake, is true in every particular and entitled to full credence."—O. P. Chamberlain, G. W. Waring, C. A. Wells, Druggist.

"My brother, in England, was, for a long time, unable to attend to his occupation, by reason of sores on his foot. I sent him Ayer's Almanac and the testimonials it contained induced him to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using it a little while, he was cured, and is now a well man, working in a sugar mill at Brisbane, Queensland, Australia."—A. Attewell, Sharbot Lake, Ontario.

MILLER—Died at the parsonage in Arcadia parish, July 22, 1889, Mrs. LUCINDA E. MILLER (nee Harris), mother of Rev. John A. Miller, of the Louisiana Annual Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Sister Miller was born in Pendleton district, S. C., April 9, 1808, and was, consequently, eighty-one years of age when she died. On October 22, 1829, she was married to Matthew Thompson Miller, who preceded her to the better world nearly twenty years. Grandma Miller was the mother of fourteen children, three of whom were lost, two killed and one died in the Civil War. She was converted in early life, and joined the Presbyterian Church. Her husband professed religion after their marriage, and united with the church of her choice. He was soon elected elder; but, as he could not conscientiously subscribe to all the doctrines of the church, he was not constituted. This led, finally, to the going of himself and wife to the Methodist Church, in whose communion they both died.

Mother Miller was a faithful, consistent follower of the Savior. All the relations of life—sister, wife, mother—had new luster shed on them by her fidelity and devotion. Seventeen years ago, by an accident and subsequent paralysis, she was disabled; and those willing feet, which had industriously trod the path of Christian duty for so many years, took their last step on earth. They now walk the golden streets with the elastic tread of perennial youth. The writer was honored with the distinguished privilege of an intimate association with her the last four years of her stay upon earth, during most of which time she was confined to her bed. Although she suffered almost constantly, and frequently intensely, he can truthfully say he never heard a single murmur escape her lips. Upon the contrary, she never failed to greet her physician and visiting friends with a gracious smile. She leaves four children to mourn her departure, but they are rich in the inestimable heritage of her good name, Christian virtues and hallowed influence. Her example is an ideal worthy their most ardent aspirations. Being unconscious some hours before her death, she left no dying testimony, but such a life needs none; it could but culminate in a triumphant end and an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom. May we follow her as she followed Christ, and find our loved and lost in that blissful clime whose inhabitants never say, "I am sick"—where the grim visage of the destroyer never enters! is the sincere prayer of her friend,

J. ATKINSON.

HOWELL—Bro. G. W. HOWELL was born in Rankin county, Miss., December 19, 1867, and died April 9, 1889, being twenty-one years, three months and twenty-one days old. He was converted and joined the church last summer, and at once entered into the service of the Lord. He attended prayer meetings and prayed in public from the time he joined the church. A short while after he joined the church he attended the Shiloh Camp Meeting, and was very happy; so expressed himself to the writer, and he was zealous for the cause of Christ, taking a good interest in the Sabbath-school and the financial interest of the church. At the close of the year he joined the church his church was a little behind with its quarterage, and he had already paid his part, but he offered to pay the balance before his church should fall behind, and would have done it but for his brethren coming to his assistance. George was a young man of large and liberal heart; very much loved by parents and brothers and sisters, and many friends. He came to his death by accident. He was loading a dummy car with saw logs, and the chain broke and a log crushed his brains out, and he died almost instantly. May God sustain his loved ones by his grace! is the prayer of their pastor. A. D. MILLER.

BECK—WILLIAMS WALTER BECK, on June 23, 1889, aged seven months and twenty-one days, was taken from earth to heaven to await, with three other little ones who have gone before, the arrival of their affectionate parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Beck, of Arcola, Miss. Many friends will sympathize with the bereaved, and pray God to extend his sustaining grace.

J. H. SHUMAKER.

MORTON—THOMAS WESLEY, son of L. Henry Morton and Katie D. Hartman, was born April 6, 1889, and died August 1, 1889. Sleep on, little Tommie; you are sadly missed by papa, mamma and grandmamma.

GRANDMA.

GRISSOM—CATHERINE GRISSOM, wife of William Grissom, born in Claiborne county, Mississippi, February 3, 1819, died at Hemphill, June 6, 1889:

Sister Grissom was converted and joined the Methodist Church more than fifty years ago, and since that time has been a bright and shining light along the shores of time, guiding others into the kingdom of God by her pure and holy example and earnest precept. For many weeks previous to her death she suffered intense physical pain, and during all this time her love grew stronger, and her faith firmer in him "who doeth all things well." Death was no unwelcome visitor to her, for truly she had a "desire to depart and be with Christ." After having bid an affectionate farewell to each of her children, she exacted a promise from them to meet her "where no storms ever beat on that glittering strand." The writer quoted to her that glorious promise, "My grace is sufficient for thee," and asked if it was even then "sufficient." She simply replied, "I am trusting, fully trusting." After which she fell asleep. C. MARCY LYONS, P. C.

BLANK—I write to tell you of the death of Bro. T. BLANK, who died July 10, after a long, not painful, illness, until about a week before he died of dropsy. I can say nothing to add to this exemplary man's Christian life, who worked all his life to uphold God's glorious plan of salvation. Even in the hour of his death he spoke of his Sunday-school and church and its continuation to lead souls to Christ that they, too, might be saved. I've often talked with him on the subject of his approaching death and failing health; heard him kneel in family prayer when he was so feeble, I sometimes doubted his concluding the supplication, but the blessed God of love gave him strength. After he was confined to bed but a week, or near a week, prayer were continually on his lips, and when we thought him unconscious he roused in prayer. It reminded us of the song, "The more I pray the happier I am; I love God, glory, hallelujah." He leaves a wife and three children and several grandchildren to mourn their loss; but, praise the Lord! to rejoice at his gain, for to see one freed with such evidences of a home in glory is such sweet consolation. E. A. E.

ANDERSON—BENNIE MARVIN ANDERSON was born October 31, 1876, and died July 10, 1889, in Canton, Miss., and was the son of C. B. and Julia Anderson. These dates are the boundary lines of a short life of less than thirteen years. Bennie, though so young, had known what suffering was; he was almost an invalid. He was a member of the church and an intelligent Christian. He had intelligent views of the doctrine and privilege of prayer. While sick, he was almost constant in prayer. He was a conscientious boy, and obedient to his mother. Yes, Bennie was a good boy. His disease was typhoid fever. He suffered much, but we all believe that our little friend is with his Lord. We commend his mother and brother and sister to the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ. His father passed over the river a year and a half before him, and doubtless, they are reunited on the other shore.

R. D. NORSWORTHY.

HOWELL—BREWER HOWELL, son of Rev. J. T. and Alena Howell, was born October 7, 1886, and died in the parsonage at Victoria, Miss., July 25, 1889. Brewer was a brilliant child, and seemed to be endowed with the elements necessary to make a great and good man. But the development of his character will be in heaven. Crimeless and fearless, with all the beauty and simplicity of innocent childhood fresh upon him, he has gone unto him who took little children in his arms, and said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." May the bereaved parents meet their precious boy in our Father's house above, where there shall be no more death!

Belgium, with a population of but little over five and a half millions, is said to have no fewer than 288 distilleries and 140,000 drink-shops. Belgium is suffering from hard times.

There Is no Use in Dodging.

There's no use in dodging, you can't avoid a plump issue; especially one that comes so straight at you as this. We say—Compound Oxygen is remodial and revitalizing; now observe what our patients say of us:

ST. PAUL, MINN., March 20, 1888.

"For giving the system permanent vitality and the elimination of disease I believe Compound Oxygen to be far in advance of all medicine or treatment. H. H. COOK.

WEATHERSFORD, TEXAS, April 1, 1888.

"You have my heartfelt gratitude for the good your Compound Oxygen has done me."

MRS. FRANKIE EDWARDS.

INDEPENDENCE, OREGON, Feb. 6, 1888.

"Compound Oxygen has done wonders for me. Where there is life it will act like a charm."

PROF. J. S. HENRY.

BROWN'S UNIVERSITY, PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 21, 1888.

"Unquestionably Compound Oxygen is a marvelous remedy. Innocent looking, mysterious in its action, but certainly effective."

P. F. JERNEGAN
MATHEWS, N. C.

"My health is now better than it has been in five years. I have about one week's supply of Compound Oxygen, and think I am about well. I owe a debt of lasting gratitude to you."

REV. J. A. LEE.

HUMANSVILLE, MO., Feb. 14, 1888.

"Compound Oxygen has been of incalculable benefit to me. I don't like to do without it."

H. A. MOORE,
Editor of Dawn.

We publish a brochure of 200 pages regarding the effect of Compound Oxygen on Invalids suffering from consumption, asthma, bronchitis, dyspepsia, catarrh, hay fever, headache, debility, rheumatism, neuralgia; all chronic and nervous disorders. It will be sent, free of charge, to any one addressing Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch St., Phila., Pa.; or 120 Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal.

The Sirocco.

Most of the hot winds of the Old World are modified forms of the simoon. The sirocco originates in the Sahara and travels northward to the Mediterranean and Southern Europe, but it is not so deadly as its prototype. It brings with it great quantities of the desert sand, and the air becomes so dense at times that the sun is obscured as if by a London fog. While it remains on the African mainland it is characterized by a marked dryness, as there are no extensive water surfaces to supply it with moisture. As soon, however, as it is launched over the Mediterranean it begins to take up copious draughts, so that when it reaches Malta, Sicily, and the southern shores of Europe as a wind from between southeast and southwest, it has undergone a change from a hot, dry wind to a hot, damp wind. The result of this alteration is that it becomes most enervating to the human constitution. Indeed, while it prevails, from one to several days at a time, life is scarcely worth living, so depressing and burdensome is the wind. It is the plumbeus Auster of Horace. Human energy is quite dissipated under its fatiguing influence, and with a temperature ranging between 95 and 110 degs., the streets of the town affected by it are deserted. According to the Italians a stupid book is put down as "era scritto in tempo del scirocco." To the Sicilians the oppressive wind is a perfect plague, for although naturally indolent, they can not stand the further loss of energy induced by it. During its prevalence iron rusts, clothes spoil with mildew, meat turnes putrid, grapes and green leaves wither, wine will not fine, and paint will not dry. Sicily experiences the sirocco about a dozen times a year, but it is not so frequently met with in other parts of Europe. There is no mistaking the origin of the wind, as the reddish sand is still present when it arrives on the northern shores of the Mediterranean and causes a misty atmosphere. In Turkey the sirocco is known as the Samiel or Sumyel, a name identical in meaning with simoon. It is supposed to have some connection with cattle disease in the south of Russia. On the Spanish Mediterranean coast the wind draws more to the east, and is known locally as the solano, a damp wind, sometimes accompanied by rain, causing feverishness, dizziness, and restlessness, and people are so "done up" under its debilitating influence that we must "ask no favor during the solano." According to the Spaniards, only a pig and an Englishman are insensible to this wretched breeze.—The Cornhill Magazine.

THE MODERN WASTE OF HEALTH.—Our elaborate code of by-laws for the suppression of holiday recreations can still be circumvented by the resources of opulence, and the well-known hopelessness of any other expedient has stimulated a race for wealth which does not hesitate to attain its object at any risk of social or sanitary consequences. The number of infants which the superstition of the Ammonites sacrificed to Moloch is a mere trifle compared with the multitude of children now devoted to a far more cruel fate by being literally drudged to death in crowded factories to enable a millionaire to save a few dimes on his weekly pay-roll and add a few per cent. to the exorbitant rate of his yearly profits. In times of general scarcity the market has been drained of its scant supplies by speculators trying to coin gain from the distress of their fellow-men, and risking, after all, to be foiled by the decay of their hoarded stores or their destruction by fire or flood. Quack nostrums, which not one intelligent man in a hundred would privately hesitate to pronounce infinitely worse than worthless, are sold by ship-loads and car-loads to disseminate disease and the seeds of the stimulant-vice, and the saints who contribute thousands to insure the theological soundness of the Quaggalla Hottentots do not care enough for the physical health of their own countrymen to whisper a word against the lawfulness of the infamous traffic.—Popular Science Monthly.

The confidence of people who have tried Hood's Sarsaparilla, in this preparation, is remarkable. It has cured many who have failed to derive any good whatever from other articles. For diseases caused by impure blood or low state of the system it is unsurpassed.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A syndicate of capitalists has been organized to develop a new canal scheme that will reclaim upwards of 5,000,000 acres of arid and now useless land in Dakota. The idea is to construct a canal from the Missouri river at Bismarck, 1,668 feet above the level of the sea, to Lake Traverse and Big Stone Lake, 900 feet above the level of the sea.

Great excitement prevails at Albany, Wisconsin, on the Sugar river, over the finding of pearls. They are found in clam shells between the membrane and shell, and are of all sizes, from a pin's head to a large size pea, and of all shades.

The geodetic survey party sent out by the United States government to finally determine and establish the Alaskan boundary are now at work.

While a passenger train on the Pittsburg and Western road was rounding a curve near Edensburg, Pa., on August 9, the air brake gave out and the whole train, with the exception of the engine, left the track and the cars turned over. Most of the passengers were more or less injured, but none seriously.

Experts estimate that the wheat crop in Minnesota and the Dakotas will reach 85,000,000 bushels and may go to 90,000,000 bushels.

The Educational Convention, at Ruston, La., completed its labors and adjourned on August 9, after a three days' session. The old officers of the association were re-elected.

The Louisiana Farmer's Alliance, which met in Alexandria, adjourned on August 10. The State was divided into four districts, and a lecturer is to be appointed for each.

About eighty capitalists left Boston, on August 10, for Sheffield, Ala., by special train. It is stated that the party intends to invest heavily in local enterprises at Sheffield, which is one of the iron centres of the South.

The Board of Control of the State Penitentiary, Mississippi, on August 10, paid $2,500 into the State treasury, it being the net earnings of the State convicts for the month of July.

Crop reports from Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama indicate a largely increased production of all the staples. Very few places have been heard from where the prospects are not encouraging.

In accordance with instructions from headquarters, the New York police were especially active in making arrests for violations of the excise law, on the eleventh, and reached a total of 108.

Thirty-five members of the Salvation Army, while holding a meeting in St. Paul, Minn., on August 11, were arrested by the police on order of Mayor Smith, to whom complaints had been made of the noise made by the Salvationists.

A conference was held in the Cotton Exchange, on August 12, between the commissioners of the Southern States and the special committee of the New York Cotton Exchange. The result was the appointment of a committee to draft resolutions, to be submitted to the Liverpool Cotton Exchange, favoring the use of cotton bagging in which to wrap cotton instead of jute.

The heirs of the brothers, William F. and George W. Norton, deceased millionaires of Louisville, have decided to give $60,000 to the building fund of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.

Remarkable results have been attained in experiments with the Brown-Sequard elixir. Successful tests have been made in various sections of the country.

FOREIGN.

The trial of Gen. Boulanger was begun on August 8 before the high court of the Senate. A body of military guarded the court.

Rich petroleum deposits have been discovered in Tabasco, Mexico.

The Mexican engineer battalion is excavating at Coyoacan one of Montezuma's palaces, seeking the Aztec king's hidden treasures.

The Japan Gazette says that about 100 persons were drowned, 12,000 houses washed away and 2,500 acres of cultivated land seriously damaged in four of the seven cantons which suffered most from the overflowing of the river Chikugo, in Fukuokaken, by the recent heavy rains.

Emperor William, when departing from Osborne, expressed to the queen his utmost pleasure with his reception in England. He also expressed the hope that the Queen, responding to his strong desire, would return his visit by coming to Berlin.

It is expected that the Czar will arrive in Berlin on the twenty-fourth, and remain several days. He will be accompanied by the Czarowich. During his stay the Czar will witness a parade of German troops. The Czar and the Emperor William and the Empress will afterward proceed to Kiel or Stettin to meet the Czarina.

Hawaiin half-breeds attempted the overthrow of King Kalakaua's government, but were speedily suppressed, with some loss, by the royal troops.

Among the fortunate fruits of England's attachment to the triple alliance are the cessation of the Servo-Bulgarian war preparations and the simultaneous suspension of the Cretan rising.

The Emperor William's impressions of England are enthusiastically appreciative. The Emperor's sojourn at Osborne has certainly tended to renew the friendships previously existing between the members of the two royal families.

President Carnot, on August 11, received deputations of American and English students studying in Paris, who presented him with expressions of sympathy as the head of the republic.

The Congo state will ask the Belgian government for an annual subsidy of £60,000 for ten years to insure the continuance of the whole Congo railway. The capital for the railway has been secured.

The itching of the scalp, falling of the hair, resulting in baldness, are often caused by dandruff, which may be cured by using Hall's Hair Renewer.

Industrial Items.

The revenue of Great Britain and Ireland for the year ending June 20, 1889, was $431,500,000—about seven-ninths of which came from customs, excise, stamps, income tax, postoffice and telegraph taxation.

An English correspondent states that during the first five months of 1889 the subscriptions of capital in that country for various enterprises exceeded $500,000,000—or $15,000,000 more than in the same period in 1888 and $140,000,000 more than in the corresponding period of 1887. Railway construction in various parts of the world, largely in North and South America, absorbed, it is claimed, $80,000,000 of the money invested.

The Shipping and Commercial List, of New York, which is standard authority on trade conditions, says: "An important factor with respect to the autumn trade is the absence of any accumulation of supplies in the hands of dealers and the conservatism which has characterized general trade during the past six months. This leaves a clear field for the active replenishing of stocks that is likely to be experienced during the next two months and affords scope for a healthy expansion of trade in all departments."

Rufus Hatch, an authority on financial events, remarks as follows: "This is the progressive country of the world, and is bound to flourish. It never was more healthy or prosperous. We are paying off our national debt, while other nations of the world are filling obligations which can only eventually result in repudiation and insolvency."

I, A. C. Haffelfinger, do say consumption can be cured by Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. My mother, years ago, contracting a terrible cough soon became unable to attend to her household duties. Prominent physicians pronounced it incurable consumption. We knew of Dr. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and commenced giving it to her. Before two bottles had been taken an improvement was noticed, and by the time one dozen bottles had been consumed she was well, and has never been troubled since. We have recommended it to many and always have it in the house. For coughs, colds, croup, whooping-cough, asthma, bronchitis, it is without a rival. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

CAMP MEETING NOTICES.

Andrew Chapel Camp Meeting will begin Friday night before the second Sunday in September. Conveyance for ministers will be at DeSoto on Saturday. We would be pleased to have the editor with us. N. M. CLARK.

New Prospect Camp Meeting will begin on Friday night, October 25, 1889, and will continue from day to day. It is situated near Vancleave, Jackson county, Miss., about twenty-one miles from Ocean Springs and fifteen miles from Belle Fontaine. All ministers of the gospel are invited to come. They will be cared for free. We are expecting a grand revival. All preachers who desire and will come, please notify me by letter, at Vancleave, Miss., when to meet them at Belle Fontaine. M. L. WHITE, P. C.

The public sleeping department at the Sam Jones Camp Ground will be in charge of the Ladies' Christian Aid Society, and will be under the management of Mrs. F. C. Huff and Mrs. Nannie McNeil.

BEECHAM'S PILLS act like magic on a weak stomach.

Hol for Niagara Falls and Toronto!

The popular Erie railway will run one of its personally conducted excursions from Cincinnati, O., to these points of interest at the very low rates of $5 for the Falls and $6 to Toronto from Cincinnati. Palace sleepers, chair cars and elegant day coaches will run through to the Falls. Do not miss this opportunity for a grand trip. Secure your sleepers early. Apply to H. C. Holabird, D. P. A. Gen'l Office, 99 4th St., Cincinnati. Train leaves Grand Central Depot, 12 noon, Thursday, August 22, 1889.

Summer Tours.

Nowhere can there be found more pleasant spots in which to enjoy health and recreation than in the mountains of Tennessee and Kentucky. With pure mountain air, excellent waters, fishing, boating, hunting, horseback rides through the mountain glens, delightful promenades, music, dancing, and all that go to make life enjoyable, is found at many points on line of the Queen and Crescent Route. For summer tours address

From Rev. Dr. McAnally, editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate.

"I have tried J. A. C. Maguire's Cundurango on myself and others, and it is my opinion that to produce a healthy and safe action on the Liver, Kidneys and secretions generally, there is not a better medicine known, and for persons of Bilious or Costive habits its action is most effective and salutary." D. R. MCANALLY.

HACKETT, Arkansas, Aug. 20, 1887.

Dr. A. T. SHALLENBERGER, Rochester, Pa.

Dear Sir: I wish you to send me a bottle of your Antidote for Malaria, which I see advertised in the Methodist Advocate, Chattanooga, Tenn., and which I can not get here. Fifteen years ago my mother had third day chills, and after trying the doctors and other medicines without relief, a friend recommended your Antidote; she tried it, and one dose effected a permanent cure. Truly yours,

J. S. EDWARDS,
Pastor M. E. Church.

The clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese of New York has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and The Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

East Tennessee, Virginia & Georgia R. R.

Well known as the Great Kennesaw Route, is now making twelve hours quicker time to Washington via New York and eastern points, with Pullman Buffet Sleepers from New Orleans to Washington without change. The mountain resorts of East Tennessee are reached in twenty-four hours, and Virginia resorts in thirty hours. For tickets, sleeping accommodation, circulars, schedule, etc., call at Kennesaw ticket office, 22 Carondelet street.

Iuka Normal Institute.

Summer School closed July 26. One hundred registered; the youngest sixteen, the oldest forty-seven—average age about twenty-seven. I still have a few male teachers, experienced. All hold from their county superintendent high first-grade certificates. Also a number of ladies, experienced teachers—scholarship from a second-grade certificate to a full college course. They can give references. Do you need an assistant? Write to H. A. DEAN, Iuka, Miss.

THE SIN OF OMISSION.

BY MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

It isn't the thing you do, dear,
It's the thing you leave undone,
Which gives you a bit of heartache
At the setting of the sun.
The tender word forgotten,
The letter you did not write,
The flower you might have sent, dear,
Are your haunting ghosts to-night.

The stone you might have lifted
Out of a brother's way,
The bit of heartsome counsel
You were hurried too much to say,
The loving touch of the hand, dear,
The gentle and winsome tone
That you had no time nor thought for,
With troubles enough for your own.

These little acts of kindness,
So easy out of mind,
These chances to be angels
Which even mortals find—
They come in night and silence,
Each chill, reproachful wraith,
When hope is faint and flagging,
And a blight has dropped on faith.

For life is all too short, dear,
And sorrow is all too great,
To suffer our slow compassion
That tarries until too late.
And it's not the thing you do, dear,
It's the thing you leave undone,
Which gives you the bitter heartache
At the setting of the sun.

Travels Abroad.

MR. EDITOR: Perhaps it is fitting that I should continue where I left off in my last letter, and report progress. Time flies, and, with endless engagements on one's hands, brief statements and short sentences will be in order.

We traversed for three long and beautiful days the handsome and interesting city of Paris. Daylight favored us until nine P. M. The drives through the boulevards and Bois de Bologne are superb. An open carriage, an agreeable conductor, and cheap fare, enables the sight-seer to accomplish wonders in a day. The streets of Paris are well paved and remarkably clean. The sidewalks along the principal streets and boulevards are very wide, enabling the cafes to place their small tables and fragile chairs in great numbers in front of their premises. Here the thirsty passerby can be seated and refreshed with pure, sweet milk, aerated waters or ices, at a trifling cost. Others, beguiled by the temptor, imbibe various concoctions, from lager beer to absinthe. None seem to be in a hurry, but deliberately sip and chat over their glass for an half-hour. How different from our hurried and panting American, who swallows the same quantity in a few gulps!

Apart from the magnificent Exposition, Paris possesses an infinite number of places and points of interest. The Pantheon, with its grand and beautiful dome; its walls, lined with wonderful paintings and statuary; its crypt, filled with the tombs of illustrious dead, and wonderful echo-sepulchral passage, where timid ones tremblingly listen while the guide illustrates its reiterating qualities. The Church de Notre Dame, of historic note, and interesting paintings and sculpture. The picture galleries of the Luxemburg Palace, where one is almost spellbound while gazing at those masterpieces of art. These are but a part of this cultured city's attractions. Paris has stopped at nothing in the purpose of making everything connected with the Exposition a brilliant and dazzling success. The illuminations are almost indescribably grand. Imagine the glitter produced by thousands of gas jets and electric lights from base to summit of that wonder of mechanics, the Eiffel Tower!

But we must bid Paris adieu. Our presence was desired in London, at the World's Sunday-school Convention. Here we were overwhelmed with the size of the gathering—over one thousand delegates, besides interested co-laborers in this inviting cause. The one little delegate from Louisiana obtained his certificate of membership, and an opportunity to quietly sit and listen to the statements of princes in the successful evolution of the Sunday-school work. From the array of distinguished names among its promoters and supporters, as well as clear and polished utterances, one could not help but be enthused with possibilities of unspeakable success attainable in this field of Christian labor. The harmony and desire for unanimity in methods in bringing the children—yes, and those of maturer years—to study the Word of God, and ultimately believers in the Christ it sets forth, was enthusiastically endorsed and vociferously applauded whenever a gifted speaker uttered a terse statement on this line. The battle cry of "Union in Christ for a world without Christ," was started with the peroration to the speech of a magnetic American pulpit orator. By those qualified to judge, the convention was pronounced a phenomenal success. English hospitality was unloosed of its barrier of titled rank, and hearty good-will prevailed. Nothing was left undone that might in any way aid towards the final result attained. The closing exercises in Exeter Hall were brimful of inspiring expressions to send the Sunday-school worker to his field of labor with fresh energy and renewed efforts to bring the young to Christ. It was a high and responsible privilege to be an integral part of such a convocation of Christian workers. The detailed work of the convention was published in the Sunday-School Chronicle, a copy of which was mailed to your address.

During our stay in London we visited, among other places of interest, Madame Tussand's Museum of Wax-Works and Art. Here we found exhibited in wax historical characters from William the Conqueror down to the present day. What a help to the student of history to catch a glimpse of the appearance of the various notable characters who, in the past, placed their impress upon a nation's thought, and molded its sentiment in the struggle towards civilization and freedom!

Our visit to London and its suburbs was completed when we had climbed the multiplicity of steps up the sides of Sydenham Hill, and walked the vast central arcade of Crystal Palace. Time and space would not permit now a description of the wonders contained in all its halls, courts and galleries. The exhibition of fireworks at night was colossal and complete.

Before embarking for the homeward trip across the broad and stormy Atlantic, we made a hasty visit by rail up through the heart of England into the mountainous regions of the home of Robbie Burns. Edinburgh was our ulterior point of interest, and we will never regret the privilege of our three days' stay in this attractive city. Our hotel faced a beautiful park, and was immediately opposite a magnificent colossal monument and statue of the author of "Ivanhoe." Hollyrood Palace and Abbey were but "a few steps" to the left, while the castle, built upon the lofty hill, was the same distance on our right. Our visit was completed there by a nine miles' drive out to the wonderful cantilever bridge across the Frith of Forth. To give you somewhat of an idea of its immensity, think of Brooklyn Suspension Bridge, with its span of 1,596 feet, and then consider this bridge, with two separate spans of 1,710 feet each. It is certainly a monument of man's scientific skill and indomitable perseverance in the accomplishment of a highway for rapid transit. The published account of this undertaking, from its incipiency to its completion, is thrillingly interesting.

On our return to Liverpool we were again placed under renewed obligations to kind friends for appreciated attentions. One method of communication between Liverpool and Birkenhead, on the opposite side of the river Mersey, is by means of an underground railway passing through a tunnel under the bed of this river. We made a trip across to Birkenhead by this underground way, and thence by rail to Brighton Beach, which is to Liverpool what Coney Island is to New York.

While in Europe we availed ourselves of the privileges of Christian worship on the Sabbath. Noted many things in the government and order of exercises, in the Wesleyan Methodist Churches that we thought novel and, perhaps, advantageous. In Sunday-school work they are confessedly "behind" us "Americans;" but they are anxious to learn and adopt some of our progressive methods.

The trip from Liverpool to New York was not as agreeable as that going. Fogs and head winds, coupled with a mutinous and inexperienced crew, caused a slow passage, and tedious towards its close. Once more on America's welcome shore, we felt as if dear ones at home were not so far away. What so many have written so entrancingly about already, it would be useless to attempt an addition thereto.

A daylight sail up the Hudson as far as Albany; a railway ride across the State of New York, through the Mohawk Valley, to Niagara Falls; a three days' inspection of these wondrous freaks of nature, and the three superb bridges of man's skill which cross the rapids below, were interwoven with a visit to a thriving Presbyterian Sunday-school of 300 scholars, and a church service attended by as many grown folks.

Three days in Milwaukee, and a drive out to the Soldiers' Home, and the beautiful cemetery near by, called the Forest Home, followed. Kinsfolk here again entertained us, and reluctantly suffered us to go.

Three days in the pushing and invincible city of Chicago is an admirable finale to any trip abroad.

Sincerely yours, E. P. MACKIE.

Rev. A. B. Stewart.

BY C. G. ANDREWS, D. D.

The Rev. Andrew Barton Stewart was born in Madison county, Miss., on March 8, 1843; was baptized in infancy by the Rev. Green M. Rogers. His father, the Rev. George W. Stewart, was for many years a useful local preacher, as well as a successful practitioner of medicine. His mother was remarkable for her piety and devotion to the church. Their children were trained from their birth to be religious. Andrew very early developed marked inclination to piety, which grew with his growth. While yet quite a child he led the devotions at the family altar, and prayed when called upon in the public congregation. His educational advantages were more than ordinary. His father secured for him the best country schools that could be obtained; then sent him to the University of Mississippi at Oxford, where he was graduated. He taught school for a few years, to the satisfaction of his patrons.

He was twice married: first to Miss Ellen A. Holloman, daughter of the Rev. J. B. Holloman, of Yazoo county, Miss. From this marriage he had three children, who survive him. His second marriage was to Miss Fannie Moss. She, with a little daughter, lives to deplore his loss.

Very early in life he realized that the Christian ministry was to be his life-work. He gave himself fully up to it by joining the Mississippi Conference in December, 1866, and by continuing in it until death released him. His appointments were Rocky Springs, North Warren, Yazoo, Madison, Raymond, Rolling Fork, Mt. Olivet, Enterprise, Silver Creek, and Clover Hill circuits. For some years he has been in the superannuated relation, owing to his mental condition.

He was a man of the deepest and most joyous piety. Prayer was his "vital breath." He could not be long in the company of a Christian friend without proposing to retire for a season of prayer together. In such moments he seemed to be talking with his Maker, just as a man would talk with his friend, telling of need, calling to mind the promises, and pleading for their fulfillment.

The church of his choice never had a truer friend; for her he regarded not sacrifices. His vow to "do that part of the work," and "at those times and places," which his superiors in office judged best, was made without reservation, and kept without violation. It was always a grief to him whenever he saw his brethren attempting to influence their appointment. It seemed to him insubordination to church authority and distrust of Providence. A place to work for the Master was what he craved, and he was willing to leave the selection of the place to the proper authorities. Long after his physical and mental condition plainly indicated to his brethren that he should be relieved of the care of souls, he would still entreat to be permitted to pursue his "loved employ."

Bro. Stewart sustained a very severe injury by being thrown from his buggy. He was taken up insensible, and was, with difficulty, restored to consciousness. This injury, with other causes, seriously impaired his mental faculties, at times causing the complete dethronement of his reason. Several times he had to be placed in the asylum. Upon his recovery conscience would always resume her control, and his life be characterized by the same enthusiastic love of the church, and by the same scrupulous consecration to duty.

As he advanced in years, these eclipses of reason became more frequent and more complete. After a period of intense mental agony, on June 17, 1889, his pious soul was liberated from its tormented prison-house by his own hand. In this particular his end was like that of the Rev. Dr. Samuel Butcher, the consecrated Bishop of Meath, and like that of Hugh Miller, the eminent geologist and no less eminent Christian. The mind, so long responsive to the straining demand upon it, reeled from its seat; the conscience, ever tender and true, drifted in darkness; and the poor hand, without reason to guide or motive to restrain, wrought their release.

I have rarely, if ever, known a Christian of more entire consecration than Andrew Stewart. To sing and to pray and to labor for the Master marked his life with devotion.

Now his labors are ended, his prayers have been turned to praise, and he sings the new song among "the church of the first-born which are written in heaven."

The Louisiana State Lottery!

MR. EDITOR: I notice that you are making a vigorous fight against the Louisiana State Lottery. I endorse that fight. I am aware that you fight it only from a moral standpoint. I desire to aid you in another direction. In past years, when the matter has been before the legislative bodies of this State, those who were fighting it have always been met by the argument that Louisiana was poor and so needy that, without the annual revenue derived from that source, she would farther involve her citizens in heavier taxation. This is the favorite argument used by Lottery advocates and friends. My aid to you in this fight will be by stating that it is true that Louisiana needs more money than is now being received in her treasury. It is also a well-known fact that the property valuation of this State is far below what it should be, and, therefore, the people are not acting in an upright manner with the State, or the resources of its treasury would not be so meagre.

Now, let the Lottery argument lose its potency by the people doing their full duty to the State, and no longer will its $40,000 be needed. This article will be claimed to have a political bearing, and should be excluded from your columns; but I assure you that its import is a main factor in the settlement of this question. It applies directly to everyone interested in this fight. Let the people increase the value of their assessable property, so that it will meet the needs of the State. Property is now only taxed, as an average, fifty per cent. of its value; increase it to seventy-five per cent., and no lottery money will be needed.

The Educational Convention, at its recent session at Ruston, demanded higher and better assessment. The Farmers' Alliance, at a recent session at Alexandria, demanded the same thing; but in each instance for the cause of education. The progressive element of the State demand it for the welfare of the State. Then let the moral and Christian element of this State demand it for the moral end of doing away with the Lottery. Can not the Christian world see their duty in this matter? Not as organized bodies, but as individuals who, to fight a monster, are willing to do their duty as citizens and as individuals.

Yours truly, JUSTICIA.

The Standards—Drs. Harrison and Dodd.

MR. EDITOR: I desire to state through the ADVOCATE that, to my mind, the real cause of so much controversy about the standards arises from a failure to recognize the fact that in 1784 three Conferences were held, viz: one in April, in Virginia; one in May, at Baltimore; and one at the same place in December. Two of these Conferences could not legislate for the Methodist Episcopal Church, for the simple reason that two of them adjourned before there was any such church. Only the "Christmas Conference" could legislate for the church; the other two could not. It does not matter (so far as the obligation of the church to follow the standards adopted by the April or May Conferences of 1784) what they were, unless the "Christmas Conference" or some subsequent one specifically endorsed the action of these previous Conferences. If the "Christmas Conference" adopted the legislation of either, or both of these former Conferences, then such action is binding on the members of the church to-day. Did the Conference of December 24 do this? At one of these prior Conferences the quarterly fasts were appointed. These were recognized afterwards, and have come down to us in the Discipline to the present day. At one of these Conferences standards of doctrine were established; but if the "Christmas Conference," or any other Conference since that, has recognized these standards, I can not find the evidence of it, and would like to have it furnished to me. The Conference of December 24, which organized the church, prepared a Book of Discipline, Articles of Faith, and reaffirmed the General Rules, and even went so far as to promise to recognize Mr. Wesley as the spiritual father (of the preachers, I suppose) as long as he lived. Hence Wesley, personally, as long as he might live, the Articles of Faith and Book of Discipline were the only standards named by the Conference.

The first restrictive rule—1808—could not recognize as standards without naming them, one by one, anything other than had been previously recognized by some Conference later than 1784. Hence the reference in that rule to "present existing and established standards of doctrine is, necessarily, to some such standards authoritatively adopted." I insist that the Discipline, including the Articles of Faith and the General Rules, is all that up to that time had been adopted by any Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church; and hence these are the "present and existing standards of doctrine" alluded to.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. W. E. Ballard writes from Natchez, Miss., August 12: "We observed the week of prayer and self-denial in Jefferson Street Church, Natchez, Miss. Public collection on Sunday, $35; contributed by the Sunday-school, over $15 on the same day. Did not have the daily collections. Outlook hopeful. Pray for us."

—Rev. J. P. Drake, writing from Shubuta, Miss., August 13, says: "On Sunday, August 11, we closed a meeting at this place, which was a season of refreshing to many members, and of quickening and awakening to many others. Bro. E. F. Edgar, of Waynesboro, did us faithful and efficient service for nearly five days. The good Spirit was with him, crowds came to the altar and several were made happy and shouted aloud the high praises of God. Full congregations and deep interest marked the whole meeting. To God be all the glory."

—Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, writing from Homer, La., August 14, says: "Since my last postal to you, we have had a very gracious meeting at Lisbon. Quite a number of conversions and thirteen accessions, and the church powerfully blessed and the community generally aroused. I have had thirty-three accessions and baptized twenty adults and eight children since the District Conference. We observed the week of prayer at Lisbon; but only partially, if at all, at the other places. I am still praying for the editors and school officials. God bless you and be with you till we meet again."

Rev. R. M. Roberts writes from Clinton, La.: "I have read Bishop Wilson's letter published in the ADVOCATE, of August 8, in regard to our missions in Japan, and your appeal to the patrons of the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE underneath the Bishop's letter. In response to the call, I send you one dollar, hoping and praying that you may soon receive the amount required, and that our missions, not only in Japan, but everywhere else, may be pushed forward until the glad tidings of the glorious gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ shall be proclaimed in every part of the habitable globe. I hope you will receive and appropriate the money where you think it will do the most good."

—Rev. J. D. Calhoun writes from Arizona, Plaquemine parish, La., August 12: "Our pastor, Bro. J. L. P. Sheppard, closed a glorious meeting at this place, July 28. The meeting lasted ten days, with increasing interest to the last service. Bro. Sheppard seemed to be filled with the spirit of the Master, laboring with us in prayer meetings, class meetings, experience meetings, praise meetings, singing, praying and preaching. His work was efficient, and his preaching clear and strong. A grand work was done in the church and out of it. Seventeen joined the church on profession of faith, and eternity alone will reveal the good which has been accomplished."

—Rev. John W. Chambers writes from Enterprise, Miss., August 12: "We have just closed a meeting at Heidelberg. The church much revived. A large part of our congregation testified to the witness of God's Spirit with theirs that they were the children of God. Our Woman's Missionary Society held a delightful service at Enterprise on the fourth Sunday in July. Two life members were made—the pastor and his wife. Spiritual condition of the Enterprise circuit ranges from good to better."

—Rev. H. R. Singleton, writing of the Crystal Springs Camp Meeting, says: "Rev. G. H. Stuart, of Centenary College, Cleveland, Tenn., has captured, not only the camp ground, but all this part of the country. It was the grandest, best and most successful meeting ever witnessed at Henuington Camp Ground; so all say. All of the church stirred from the deeps, all melted into love; fifty accessions; three or four hundred reconsecrated."

—Rev. H. S. Johns writes from Washington, La., August 17: "I have just closed another good meeting on my work. This time at Bethel Church in Bayou Boeuff; Bros. Isbell, of Opelousas, and Godfrey, of Big Cane, assisting. The latter came by accident, but we put him to work. We have had nearly twenty accessions this year. Praise God!"

—Rev. A. D. McVoy, Jr., writes from Natchitoches, La.: "I begin a meeting in Natchitoches, La., early in September. I want to request the prayers of the church for the descent of the Holy Ghost upon our town. As many as will promise to pray especially for us once a day, from September 1 to 20, inclusively, will please signify it by writing me a postal card."

SEEING THE PLEASANT THINGS OF LIFE.—If we were only as prompt to recognize the really pleasant and good things that can be found in the world around us, and which sometimes seem to be the relics of a better nature that has survived the fall, as we are to detect and exaggerate the little, the selfish, and the unworthy things we find, how much more should we illustrate the spirit of Christ, and how much brighter the same world would be for ourselves and others! But, probably as the result of the original sin that is still in us, we are very slow to do this thing; in fact, it is about the last thing we do—if we do it at all. Our neighbor may be a firm friend of the poor and the defenseless; he may prove his benevolence by innumerable kindly and liberal acts; he may be exemplary in private and in social life; yet all these qualities go for nothing, because we look at him through a microscope of a double-million magnifying power, with which we are able to detect a few flaws that we do not like. This hypercritical spirit is not that of our Lord, and is not the one that is to make the world brighter and better. That is to be done by love—the love that sympathizes with all forms of goodness; that is quick to recognize every kindly act, and that does not stint its praise, while it is sparing of its blame.—Evangelist.

THE DIVINE CALL.

BY GEORGE CUTTERELL.

To-day, to-morrow, evermore,
Through cheerless nights without a star,
Not asking whither or how far,
Rejoicing though the way be sore—
Take up thy cross
And follow me!

Though some there be who scorn thy choice,
And tempting voices bid thee stay
To-day while it is called to-day,
If thou will hearken to my voice,
Take up thy cross
And follow me!

I can not promise wealth or ease,
Fame, pleasure, length of days, esteem;
These things are vainer than they seem.
If thou canst turn from all of these,
Take up thy cross
And follow me!

I promise only perfect peace,
Sweet peace that lives through years of strife,
Immortal hope, immortal life,
And rest when all these wanderings cease:
Take up thy cross
And follow me!

My yoke is easy; put it on!
My burden very light to bear;
Who shareth this, my crown shall share—
On earth the cross, in heaven the crown!
Take up thy cross
And follow me!

—The Quiver.

Port Gibson Female College.

Several appreciative notices and reports of Port Gibson Female College have appeared in the ADVOCATE; but there were some features of our recent closing exercises that did not receive merited recognition, and, to supply this lack, I now write. I desire to make mention of the commencement sermon, which was preached Sunday, June 16, by Rev. W. E. Ballard, of Natchez, Miss. His text was Isaiah xxxiii, 6: "And wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of thy times, and strength of salvation;" and his theme was, "Religious Education."

Bro. Ballard was met by a very large congregation, many of whom, knowing him well as the pastor of the church in Port Gibson some years ago, expected nothing less than a fine sermon. The discussion of the subject was timely and able, and made a deep impression on those assembled. The worth of character, and especially religious character, was set forth in the strongest way. Evils that menace society and government alike were pointed out, and the only remedy for them was shown to be the training of the rising generation in the principles of our divine religion. It was a strong plea in behalf of education by our church schools. The sermon was eloquent, but, best of all, profoundly religious. All felt that the choice of a preacher for the occasion was a happy one.

At night the congregation was favored with a strong and convincing sermon on "Conscience," by Rev. Inman W. Cooper, of Edwards, Miss. This latter gentleman on Tuesday, June 18, made the annual address. In the first place, this commanded itself to all by being carefully prepared. It was the product of thought and proper labor, as becomes an address at such a time. The address had nothing in it commonplace, but was of a high order throughout, abounding in beautiful and noble passages. There was genuine eloquence both in matter and style, while in the delivery it was excellent. The picture of the true woman was appreciated by all, and the orator was easily master of the situation.

To both the gentlemen above mentioned we are greatly indebted for their presence, and for the work done by them during the closing exercises of the college. E. H. MOUNGER.

Salem, Oregon.

MR. EDITOR: As very few of your readers know much relative to this country, and among the thousands of readers of the ADVOCATE I have many friends in whom I have unbounded interest, and to redeem a promise, I indite this letter; and should it reach any reader who thinks of coming to the Northwest, where the sectional lines are obliterated, and where you can worship (if you choose) in a Southern Methodist Church, then I ask you to see the Willamette Valley, Oregon. This is one of the finest climates I have ever seen in all my travels. This valley is 50x150 miles, and the river heads up in the coast range of mountains and runs the whole length of the valley and empties into the Columbia river, about fifty miles from its mouth. The land is beautifully rolling, well watered and very fertile, as well as abounding in fine springs of pure, fresh water. There has never been a failure in crops in this country; so says the oldest Oregonian. Our staple productions are wheat, oats, rye, barley, grasses, hops, fruits and vegetables of every description. I do not think I have ever seen finer fruits or vegetables grow anywhere in the world.

It may be a query to many to know why our climate is so mild and at the same time so far north; but a moment's notice of the physical features of this country will soon convince one in error that the same agency which rescues England, Scotland and Wales from the fetters of perpetual winter rescues Oregon from the same barrier, namely: the great oceanic current which flows along our coast. In the month of March fruit trees were in full bloom and garden vegetables nearly ready for the table. Grass was from six to ten inches high in the field and along the roadsides, and stock was fat. On account, then, of these mild winters and cool summers, and the entire absence of blizzards and cyclones, it is indeed a delightful climate to live in. I hope in the near future to see some of the old readers of the ADVOCATE settle themselves here in this delightful valley. The good old ship has carried our gospel banner even to these ends of the earth, and you will find here in this land the church of your choice.

May God bless the good old ADVOCATE and all its readers! is the wish of its friend, G. W. MEEKS.

(We suppose that the country Bro. Meeks speaks of is a delightful country, but we hold firmly to the opinion that anyone going thither either from Mississippi or Louisiana makes a mistake. We have the best country—take it altogether—on this continent.—ED.)

A Preaching Tour.

By invitation of Rev. Henry S. Johns, of Washington, La., I met him at Palmetto Station, seventy-eight miles above, on the T. and P. railroad, on last Saturday evening (August 3), and eight miles away, that night, we held service at the Upper School-house, having a very good attendance. On Sunday morning he commenced his protracted meeting at the Lower School-house, six miles below, on Waxia Creek. At first our congregation was small; but the meetings gradually grew both in interest and numbers, though on Monday a rainy spell set in, and we had daily rains till we closed on Wednesday night.

I found that Bro. Johns had a live church at the Upper School-house (where he not long since held a series of meetings), and a fine Sunday-school with Sister Beard, a noble Christian woman, as superintendent. At the Lower School-house, where we held the protracted services, there were but four church-going persons. We secured one accession, and feel confident that the Lord has blessed our efforts in his work, and thus blessed us. Whenever the rain would slack up the frugal, but industrious settlers could be seen coming out of the woods along the Waxia Creek as by magic, and attended our services in goodly numbers, especially in such weather as we were having.

Sunday night we held services in the beautiful Methodist church in Washington to an appreciative and intelligent audience of about thirty persons. We enjoyed here the singing of a small but very fine choir, and the music of a fine performer on the organ.

The night, like the day, was excessively warm. We thought a short sermon would be best, and have since learned that all seemed to think that we were even too short. Better that than to have been tiresome, and hope that we will be excused on the plea that this was our third service on that very warm day, and we were quite fatigued. I could write much about my pleasant trip—long to be remembered, but modesty suggests not to say too much. Yet I can not help but return my sincere thanks to all the people of St. Landry parish whom I have met, and, as God has blessed them thus far, may he still bless them! W. W. BUFORD.

All the preachers to change at the end of six months.

Ques. 6. What numbers are there in society?

Ans.: New York, 222; Philadelphia, 204; Frederick, 175; Norfolk, 73; New Jersey, 257; Chester, 36; Baltimore, 738; Brunswick, 218; Kent, 150. Total, 2,073. Preachers, 17.

This Conference agreed to the following particulars:

1. Every preacher who is received into full connexion is to have the use and property of his horse, which any of the circuits may furnish him with.

2. Every preacher to be allowed six pounds, Pennsylvania currency, per quarter, and his travelling charges besides.

3. For every assistant to make a general collection at Easter in the circuits where they labour; to be applied to the sinking of the debts on the houses, and relieving the preachers in want.

4. Wherever Thomas Rankin spends his time, he is to be assisted by those circuits.

From the Work.

OLD BETHEL CHURCH.

MR. EDITOR: It was my privilege to attend a meeting at Bethel charge, on Centreville circuit, Woodville district, Mississippi Conference, the meeting beginning on Sunday, the fourth instant, and ending on Tuesday following. There are many who will be glad to know that Bethel Church still lives, and seems to have entered upon a new and vigorous career which bids fair to equal anything in her past history. At the beginning of this meeting the Lord was there in his convicting and saving power. The membership had covenanted together to pray and work for the success of the meeting. They came together, nothing doubting; and I am sure that I never witnessed a greater display of God's power to bless and save. The brethren were happy, and shouted. Their children were happy, and joined the church. The old father, grandfather, who never yielded to the voice of the Holy Spirit before, came forward all broken to pieces, accepted Christ as his Savior, joined the church; and it was a beautiful sight to see him with his wife and children rejoicing together. His wife for years has conducted family worship, asked the blessing at the table, and, doubtless, has believed that God would save her husband. Thank God for this! Another testimony that the prayer of the righteous availeth much.

At this old church I was brought up from infancy. To nearly forty years of age I worshiped here with loved ones and neighbors, most of whom have crossed over the river; and I rejoice that there is yet a James, McCranie and Richardsons spared to look after the church at this place, which has been rendered holy by the associations of such men as Drake, Wluans, J. G. Jones, and a host of other godly men and holy women.

At this place it was my privilege to conduct a prayer and class meeting and Sabbath-school seven years ago; and imagine my feelings during this meeting while the young mothers (who were my scholars once) and the old mothers told me that my labors had not been in vain; of the conversions in my class meetings, and of the influence for good in the Sabbath-school. I take courage, and by the help of God will gladly spend and be spent for the Master all the days of my life.

Bro. G. D. Anders is the happy pastor of this people. I say "happy," for he is the happiest man (except Bro. Hugh McCranie, perhaps) that I ever saw, and he is doing a good work, and his people love and honor him. And, Mr. Editor, the presiding elder got happy, too; in fact, the little children got happy. Several accessions and conversions, and the entire membership revived. And just here will say that the ADVOCATE has had a part in bringing about this state of things. This people take and read the ADVOCATE. Perhaps Bro. Anders will give you a better report. Very truly,

P. A. RICHARDSON.

JACKSON, Louisiana.

RED RIVER CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: Matters are very encouraging on my work. Summer protracted meetings have been entered upon, and while few statistical results have shown forth, still I can see improvements in other ways. The membership is being aroused. More interest in religion is being manifested.

On July 15 we moved into the new and cozy parsonage at Campo Bello. It had been previously furnished with funds kindly contributed over the work. One hundred dollars' worth of household furniture is already here; more has been ordered. As our stable is unfinished, one of our esteemed Baptist brethren, Dr. Allsou, takes care of my horse and "cart." The neighbors in our select little village are, indeed, kind to my wife and myself. Vegetables, milk, butter and eggs are sent to us constantly. On our entrance into the parsonage, Hon. H. C. Stringfellow, who recently united with this church, sent a handsome contribution in the way of supplies for the store-room. One of our other good neighbors, Mr. Jacob Allson, had a load of wood hauled for us.

Sunday-schools are in a very hopeful condition, considering that so many persons, leaders in that work, are away for the summer vacation. This is a great drawback. But we hope for renewed zeal next month.

One feature we notice on this river work that is encouraging and prophetic: prohibition of cursing and vulgarity in many of the principal stores. Still another peculiar indication of what the gospel has accomplished here is, that several of the largest stores devote what might be retained as drummers' board bills to the support of the ministry. A great many drummers travel through here, canvassing for different houses in New Orleans and elsewhere. As we have no hotels, when they stop at houses they observe no board is charged. But in a conspicuous place inside the store is seen a box, with "Contribution from Drummers for the Preacher" printed above. One merchant near here realized $50 thus in the course of a year, and contributed the whole of it to rebuilding Campo Bello Church. Thus both the commercial travelers and the merchants are liberal.

We have had four accessions to this church at Campo Bello, and three of these are male members. Heretofore the church has been wholly made up of ladies. And the rebuilt church and newly erected parsonage show what a church composed of a mere handful of ladies can do. Till now we had no material at this place for a steward; but at our last quarterly meeting Bro. Stringfellow was elected. We need workers badly among the men. There is good food for reflection in the fact that the two other accessions, young men of culture and promise, joined by transfer from where they had been attending college. Hence we see how important it is to have our young men attend schools where the influences will be religious. These young men united with the church while at a college or university in Virginia. There has been one accession also in the hills, at Bossier Point, and the membership there is much revived.

I am doing what I can by preaching, praying and otherwise, for this week of prayer and self-denial, and hope for good results. Copies of the ADVOCATE are taken in all four of the neighborhoods whom I preach, and more subscribers are expected.

G. E. GREENE.

CAMDEN, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: "The Lord hath done great things for us" at Camden, whereof we are glad. We have just closed a meeting, lasting eight days. The visible results to date are twelve conversions, four accessions, with more to follow, and the membership of the church much revived and stirred up to more thorough consecration and devotion to God. Every family here is pledged to expunge and keep from their home every kind of entertainment, amusement or literature that is calculated to lead off the minds of the young from the sublime interests of their souls. Bro. G. W. Bachman, of the North Mississippi Conference, was with us a few days. He did effective service, preaching, singing and praying; and, as ever, he was faithful to his mission as colporteur. He sold about forty dollars' worth of books. We were also most efficiently assisted by Bro. L. S. Jones, of Raymond circuit, Mississippi Conference. The pastor is fortunate who secures the services of Bro. L. S. ("Little Sam") Jones in his protracted meeting. May God abundantly bless those brethren!

Your brother in Christ,

IRA B. ROBERTSON.

HOLMESVILLE CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: My season of protracted meeting has begun. A two-day meeting at Waterholes resulted in a general upbuilding of the church, one accession and four conversions. A meeting of four days at Holmesville greatly revived our church and added two to its register. Bro. Bancroft was with us three days, and gained firm hold upon the hearts of all, and by his earnest preaching did great good. Bro. Cowan also did us valuable service during the latter part of the meeting.

On my return from Holmesville I was surprised to find that about half the tents on the camp ground had been burned by incendiaries, and the others only saved by the active labors of a brother and his family, who live close by, and now on either side of the tabernacle stand two rows of charred and blackened posts—the mournful monuments of a villain's crime; gloomy commentary upon the fathers of such sons! sad index to this country's future! "By their fruits ye shall know them;" and, judging thus, we find some human forms can fall where falling stops for lack of space. Then sprang the question, "What shall we do?" "Give up the meeting?"—and the answer came unanimously from the camp-meeting association, "No! rebuild, and have the meeting." I will say just here, the devil had better have kept that fire at home, for he has got some of our brethren stirred up enough to work for a good meeting; and we will have it, too.

Rev. Joe J. Jones will be with us, and we hear him pronounced the equal of his famous brother, Sam. We are anticipating the grandest meeting ever held here, and expect and desire a large attendance. Ample provision will be made for the accommodation of all who may attend.

My work elsewhere is progressing finely. New family altars are springing up, new members joining, great interest manifested in the meetings everywhere; and last, but not least, new subscriptions for the ADVOCATE being received. God bless the ADVOCATE! Pray for us.

H. M. ELLIS.

GRAND CHENIER CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: Our work in Cameron is progressing favorably. Our second quarterly meeting, under our worthy presiding elder, Rev. S. S. Keener, was deeply interesting, and left a marked impression upon this community. There has been increased attendance at the services throughout the circuit, and evidences of more serious interest in vital religion.

As Bro. Keener could not attend the recent quarterly meeting of July, the advent of Bro. Robert Harry, sent in his place, was singularly propitious. His series of sermons at Grand Chenier during the first week were received with awakening fervor, renewed interest, and strengthened our cause in that direction. The following week at this point we had preaching five successive evenings, and with similar impression unto a close, and a result that is exhilarating. Seven new converts, one immersed, five are seeking further grace, one transferred from another church, and one who will take the same step on next occasion. Twelve infants baptized.

On Friday, August 2, there was a picnic gotten up for the two Sabbath-schools of Leesburg and Seaview congregations, under charge of Bro. James Wakefield and Sister Mamie Suttle, respectively, united and participated in by a happy assemblage from the surrounding country. An address from Prof. A. B. Hoskyns, a kindly and well-worded expression of thanks to the teachers of the schools from our worthy brother, John M. McCall, and much of felicitous humor from Bro. Harry, enlivened the festivities.

We have good hope for our church in this parish. We have a very interesting work at Johnson's Settlement, Calcasieu parish, with a Sunday-school of thirty-five scholars. We are hopeful of carrying up a good report from this section. With prayers for the blessing of God upon the labors of brother ministers elsewhere, I remain,

Yours in Christ,

F. N. SWEENEY, P. C.

AMITE CITY, LA.

MR. EDITOR: Our people have recently been highly entertained and greatly profited by two lectures, which were delivered in the Methodist Church by Miss Belle Kearney, superintendent of Mississippi's Y. W. C. T. U.'s and juvenile societies. A special to the Picayune from this place, referring to the lectures, says: "Nothing could have exceeded the naive charm of manner and winning grace of delivery with which the temperance doctrine was handled by its seemingly inspired young apostle." Miss Kearney organized a Y. W. C. T. U., and also a Loyal Temperance Legion. Quite a number have enlisted in each society, and, with Miss Sallie Ellis as president, success is assured.

Last Sabbath I organized a Parsonage Society at Osyka. I now have one at each of my appointments. These societies are auxiliaries to the Woman's Department of Church Extension; and, though feeble yet, still they are accomplishing good.

The thanks of our church at Amite City are due and are hereby tendered Bro. J. H. Keller, of New Orleans, for the neat pulpit hymn book he presented Sister Blackbourne for our church.

Oh, how we will sing when we get our new hymn books, which we have been waiting for since we placed our order in May! Fraternally,

F. M. KEEN.

Periodicals.

—MISSIONARY REVIEW OF THE WORLD, for September, is already on our table. It would pay every preacher in our connection to read this superb missionary monthly. There are eight departments, and they cover all the ground. They are, Literature of Missions, General Missionary Intelligence, Correspondence from All Parts of the World, Monthly Concert, International Department, Editorial Notes on Current Topics, Organized Missionary Work, and Statistics and Monthly Bulletin on the progress of missions. Reading this Review will be helpful to anybody. Funk & Wagnalls, 18 and 20 Astor Place, New York. Price, $2.

—THE HOME MAKER, for August, has a good table of contents. Home Maker Company, New York. Price, twenty cents.

—A genuine midsummer number in the CENTURY, for August, with its opening article on The Stream of Pleasure—the River Thames, by the Pennells—husband and wife—who have written about and minutely pictured that gay and thronged resort of boats and boaters. Mrs. Foote's Afternoon at a Ranch, has also a mid-summer air; and all inland vacationists will find matter of interest in Dr. Weir Mitchell's profusely illustrated article on The Poison of Serpents—a line of inquiry in which he has made important discoveries. Remington, artist and writer, describes with pen and pencil his outing with the Cheyennes; and a group of well-known wood-engravers—Frenche, Kingsley, Closson and Davis—describe in their own language, and with drawings and engravings by each, a wood-engraver's camp on the Connecticut river, as well as the methods of the American school of wood-engraving. George W. Cable gives the true and extraordinary history of the Haunted House in Royal Street; Edward Bellamy, author of Looking Backward, has a short story called A Positive Romance; and in this number is begun a three part story, by Joel Chandler Harris (Uncle Remus) entitled The Old Bascom Place. The illustrations are by Kemble. The frontispiece of this number of the magazine is a portrait of Alfred Tennyson from one of Mrs. Cameron's celebrated photographs; and in connection with this portrait the Rev. Dr. Van Dyke gives the results of his study of Tennyson's use of the Bible under the title of The Bible in Tennyson. Dr. Van Dyke incidentally discusses the relation of the English Bible to English literature. There is an unusual number of poems in the midsummer CENTURY, including a long one by Robert Burns Wilson—Song of the Woodland Spirit; and shorter pieces by Harry Stillwell Edwards, Mrs. Moulton, Frank Dempster Sherman, Celia Thaxter and others. The Century Company, New York. Price, $4.

—OUR LITTLE ONES AND THE NURSERY, for August, will delight all the wee folks. Its table of contents will not fail to satisfy appetites whetted by its beautiful pictures. Russell Publishing Company, Boston. Price $1 50.

—The central attraction in August WIDE AWAKE is "Fishing in Tweed and Yarrow," by Andrew Lang. It is humorous and practical, with eight beautiful illustrations of famous scenes on those historic rivers. Margaret Sidney continues Five Little Peppers Further On. Harriet Spofford contributes a beautifully illustrated poem, "Sweet Home." Other papers make up an exceptionally fine number. D. Lothrop Company, Boston. Price $2 40.

—THE METHODIST MAGAZINE AND FAMILY REPOSITORY. Shaw & Sons, Chicago. Price, $1 50.

—THE SIDEREAL MESSENGER is conducted by Prof. W. W. Payne, Northfield, Minn. Price, $2.

—THE HOMILETIC MAGAZINE, for July, is "good to the use of edifying." E. B. Treat, New York. Price, $3.

—GOOD HOUSEKEEPING is the best fortnightly periodical we know. C. W. Bryant & Co., Springfield, Mass. Price, $2 50.

—THE MISSIONARY REPORTER, for August, has a good table of contents and all our people ought to read it. Nashville, Tenn. Price, fifty cents.

—MEDICAL CLASSICS is a valuable monthly. 38 Murray street, New York. Price, ten cents; fifty cents a year.

—THE MUSICAL HERALD is a bright and spicy and tuneful periodical, well worth reading. Franklin Square, Boston. Price, ten cents; $1 a year. E. Tourjee is managing editor.

—HOMILETIC MAGAZINE, for August, has much valuable matter in the line of commentary, exposition sermon and homiletics. E. B. Treat, New York. Price, $3.

—THE BOOK BUYER, for August, is replete with news and notes about books, new and old, and their authors. Charles Scribners' Sons, New York. Price, $1.

PAMPHLETS.

—THE UNEMPLOYED. This is a very interesting pamphlet on a very serious subject, by the senior editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate. These articles were first published in that paper, and attracted a good share of attention. They are now put forth in a handsome pamphlet, and will be read with interest by all classes of people.

—The Seventh Annual Report of the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1889, has just come to hand. It is a valuable document, and shows that our church, under the leadership of Dr. Morton, is making a fine record in church extension work. Send and get it, and study up this very important branch of our work.

—The Catalogue of Mansfield Female College has been received. It is a neat document, printed at the Caligraph Book and Job Office at Ruston, La. President McVoy had a prosperous session last year, and the promise for the coming year is very encouraging.

—We have received the Minutes of the Seventh Annual Convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Louisiana, held at Alexandria, La., April last. This is an interesting document, giving an account of an interesting work that is being done in the temperance cause by the women of Louisiana. Woman's Temperance Publication Association, Chicago. Price, ten cents.

LESSON IX.—September 1.

DAVID AND GOLIATH.

I. Sam. xvii, 32-51.

GOLDEN TEXT.—If God be for us, who can be against us?—Rom. viii, 31.

TIME.—B. C. 1063.

PLACE.—Shocboh (branches, hedge). Ephes-dammim (boundary of blood), now Damun. The valley of Elah, or of the terebinth.

32. Let no man's heart fail—When in the presence of Saul, David said, Let no man's heart (that is, courage) fall on his account (on account of the Philistine, about whom they had been speaking). With this Philistine—Though as the champion of the Philistines he is called one, Dr. Porter thinks he was not a Philistine by descent. His name implies that he was "a stranger." All the aboriginal inhabitants of Palestine, both east and west of Jordan, appear to have been giants. They had a settlement near Jerusalem, and gave their name to the "valley of Rephaim," and from them, in all probability, descended Goliath, Sippai and Lahmi. This gigantic race was extirpated at an early period on the east of Jordan, the last of them being killed in the invasion of Moses; but in the west they continued long to terrify the Hebrews, having found a home among the Philistines.

34. A lion, and a bear—The Arabs are not afraid of lions, but if armed with a good stick will pursue them and kill them if they can catch them.

35. Caught him by his beard—Put here for his throat or under jaw; what corresponds to the chin in a man.

36. Shall be as one of them—He is but a savage animal to me, and I have slain two of the fiercest of the tribe, and will now try to deliver another lamb—Israel. He hath defied—He expresses his confident conviction that he will likewise slay the Philistine. But at the same time he grounds (seeing that) this conviction and certainty of victory on Goliath's wickedness, his defiance of the ranks of the living God, wherein we again see David's strong and clear consciousness of the theocratic significance of this battle between the Philistines and the Israelites, whose covenant God is contemned in his people and their army, and who, therefore, can not abandon his people's cause, which is his own.

38. With his armor—Saul then desired for him the help of the Lord in carrying out his resolution, and bade him put on his own armor-clothes; and gird on his armor (his clothes) ingnities probably a peculiar kind of clothes which were worn under the armor, a kind of armor-coat to which the sword was fastened. Coat of mail—Literally, A coat of scales. A defensive armor for the body, consisting of plates of brass overlapping each other, like the scales on a fish, or shingles on roof. The Hebrew word is rendered habergeon in II. Chronicles xxvi, 14, and Nehemiah iv, 16.

39. His sword—The sword was a straight-bladed, rather broad, and not very long instrument, what we call a dagger, and used rather to thrust than to slash. It was slung in a sheath by a leathern girdle. He assayed to go—When he was thus equipped with brazen helmet, coat of mail and sword, David began to walk, but soon found that he could do nothing with these. He had not proved it—The word them should stand in place of it. He had never before worn such armor and weapons, felt them to be an incumbrance, and wisely did not venture to the combat in them. I can not go with these—He desired to go forth to the battle in the lightest possible armor; strong in the Lord, not in himself; armed not with steel, but with faith.

40. Took his staff—His shepherd's rod. Chose him—Selected those that were fit, would not tempt God by taking at random. Five smooth stones—The sides and bed of the trench (on both sides of which the armies were encamped) are strewn with rounded and water-worn pebbles, which would have been well fitted for David's sling. Five, for one or two might fail. In a scrip—The scrip was a bag of leather thrown over the shoulder, and used by shepherds and travelers to carry provisions. It is still used by Eastern shepherds, and is made of the skin of a kid stripped off whole and tanned. This is the only passage in the Old Testament where it is mentioned, but reference is made to it in several places in the New Testament. His sling The sling of the ancient Egyptians, which probably was of the same sort as that of David, was a thong of leather or sling plaited, broad at the middle, and having a loop at one end, by which it was fixed upon and firmly held by the hand; the other extremity terminated in a lash, which escaped from the fingers when the stone was thrown. David was evidently an expert marksman; and his sling gave him greatly the advantage over Goliath; an advantage of which the giant does not seem to have been aware. So far, therefore, as weapons were concerned, the advantage was clearly on David's side, provided only he could preserve his precision of aim and steadiness of hand. David was like one armed with a rifle, while his enemy had only a spear and sword; and if only he could take sure aim, the result was absolutely certain. In the exercise of his shepherd's calling he may have become so skilled in the use of the sling that, like the Benjamites mentioned in Judges xx, 16, he could sling at a hair's-breadth and not miss.

41. The man that bare the shield—The archers, whether fighting on foot or in chariots, were accompanied by shield-bearers, whose office it was to protect them from the shafts of the enemy. The king was always attended in his wars by this officer; and even in peace one of his eunuchs usually carried a circular shield for his use. This shield-bearer was probably a person of high rank, as in Egypt. The shield carried before him was large enough to cover him crouching.

42. Looked about—Looking high, as if he did not see his diminutive antagonist until he had looked around. Deeming it an insult that he should be called upon to fight with such an enemy.

43. Am I a dog ... with staves—A common proverb. The Oriental dog is a foul, cowardly, skulking animal; the lowest thing to be compared to. Or with "sticks." The plural is used in contemptuous exaggeration of the armor of David, which appeared so thoroughly unfit for the occasion. By this it is probable that David had a staff in one hand, and that, not discerning the sling in his other hand, Goliath conceived that this was the intended weapon of conflict. In the single combats of the East, even those preceding and bringing on general actions, the opposed champions are still wont thus to kindle each other's wrath by mutual abuse, and the reader of Homer will recollect many examples of the same practice. These often extended to long addresses, and each party waits as patiently as he can till the other has done, without allowing himself to be provoked to cut short the harangue by force of arms. ... In the present case we seem to have only an abstract of Goliath's harangue, for it is not stated in what terms he cursed the son of Jesse by his gods. Cursed—Champions, like Goliath, in their public challenges, were wont to curse and ridicule, in the bitterest words, the foe, their race, and their gods, to force acceptance of the defiance thus insolently given. His gods—Here is shown the innermost contrast which comes into play in the battle between Israelites and Philistines; the contrast between the living God and his people on the one hand, and the idolatrous, anti-theocratic world on the other.

44. Come to me—Such defiances by single combatants are still usual in the wars of the Bedouins.

46. That all the earth may know—The other nations will learn that God does not suffer himself to be mocked in his people, but as their covenant-God helpfully and mightily espouses their cause.

47. All this assembly shall know—There was a moment's parley. All eyes in both armies were anxiously watching. All must know that David fought for Jehovah.

48. Ran toward the army—David's unbroken courage is made more evident by the remark that he went "toward the line" to meet the Philistine.

49. Smote ... in his forehead—The narrative does not explain how his forehead came to be exposed; whether his helmet was off at the time, or whether the stone pierced the helmet, or whether it went in at some point which the helmet did not cover. Either of these ways is conceivable.

51. Cut off his head—As David had predicted (verse 46), when as yet he had no sword in his possession.

Each of us has his own giant to fight, and with only God to help and make victory certain. It may be pride, or bad temper, or covetousness, or indolence, or appetite, or some other sin.

Letter from Mexico.

MR. EDITOR: I am now well, and, though a cripple still, have a happy, grateful heart. I had the pleasure of attending service last Sunday for the first time since my long illness. The street car runs almost the entire way from my door to the "Temple of Messiah," our little Spanish Church; so I had only a few steps to take. When I reached the church the joy of the Mexicans was displayed so touchingly, each telling how happy they were, and how grateful to God; while our dear Sister Watkins, who had nursed me nearly six months, wept for joy. The dear little children gathered around me and thanked the Lord for restoring my health. My smiles were almost swallowed up in tears.

During my illness our congregation has greatly increased. Sunday we had a good congregation, and also at night. Bro. Watkins is an enthusiastic worker; watches every newcomer, and talks to every stranger who comes inside the door. He is taking in members all along; received five on Sunday, and recently took in a colonel, who is making a good member. He has received over forty this year. I wish we had other churches doing as well. The prayer meetings are largely attended and are very interesting. To-morrow night he begins a regular old-fashioned class meeting, which I think will prove a great blessing to us all. This bald-headed American (as a Mexican called Bro. Watkins the day we arrived in the city) is a hard-working preacher, and is gathering in sheaves for the Master.

The school in which the New Orleans ladies are interested is doing finely. So many bright, intelligent-looking children attend, and the native teacher, Miss Rodan, is a lovely young Spanish lady, dignified, gentle, and a splendid teacher. It was my privilege to sit near her, Sunday, in church, and enjoy the fine voice as she led the singing. She is very pretty and attractive, and we are indeed fortunate to have secured her services.

Mr. Weems is now engaged with his English class. They come three nights in the week. He thus attaches the young men to him, and it helps him with his Spanish. They have such memories that they can learn anything while we are turning it over in our minds once. They make me feel awfully stupid. But, as the Mexicans say, poco a poco (little by little) we are learning the language. It is slow and tedious work; easy to learn to read and translate, but hard to learn to speak it.

We miss the dear old ADVOCATE, which has been a regular visitor in my home since I can remember. The fault is in the mails, we are assured. We get no paper save one sent occasionally by some friend, with a stamp on it. Our letters are our greatest pleasure. I had one from a little girl in Alabama, saying she almost envied me my work among the Mexicans. She is one of a little band of missionary workers. She said they never forgot to pray for me. I wish more of the children would pray for us. We all need consecration, and in a mission field it is indeed essential. Please pray for us.

S. G. WEEMS.

Temperance.

A TERRIBLE WARNING.—The German spelling of "beer" is "bier." In English a "bier" is a frame or carriage for conveying dead bodies to the grave. The step from beer to the grave is very short. For some years a decided inclination has been apparent all over the country to give up the use of whisky and other strong alcoholics, using as a substitute beer and other compounds. This is evidently founded on the idea that beer is not harmful and contains a large amount of nutriment; also that bitters may have some medical quality which will neutralize the alcohol which it conceals, etc. These theories are without confirmation in the observation of physicians. The use of beer is found to produce a species of degeneration of all the organs; profound and deceptive fatty deposits, diminished circulation, conditions of congestion and perversion of functional activities; local inflammations of both the liver and the kidneys, are constantly present. In appearance, the beer drinker may be the picture of health, but in reality he is most incapable of resisting disease. A slight injury, a severe cold, or a shock of the body or mind, will commonly provoke an acute disease ending fatally. Compared with inebriates, who use different kinds of alcohol, he is more incurable and more generally diseased. The constant use of beer every day gives the system no recuperation, but steadily lowers the vital forces.—Scientific American.

Briefs.

A manifestation of appreciation of the merits of other people will surely win the appreciation of our own merits from other people.

An article in the Manufacturers' Record shows that the South is progressing rapidly and satisfactorily in the development of the cotton industry. In regard to cotton mills the comparison made between the years 1880 and 1889 reveals the fact that the increase in the number of mills has been 204, and increase in number of spindles, 1,365,414, and increase in looms, 30,678. There are now in the South in successful operation 365 mills, running 45,001 looms, and 2,305,268 spindles!

The Brown-Sequard elixir of life is attracting the attention of physicians all over the country. Experiments have been made upon many persons, old and young, sick and well. In some instances beneficial results have been obtained, and in others the effect has been harmful. Some of the ablest of the faculty are doubtful as to the therapeutic value of the elixir, and one declares that his microscope revealed the presence of millions of bacteria. The only real result obtained is the knowledge that the elixir is a powerful stimulant, and quickens the pulse in a remarkable manner. None of the doctors are yet satisfied as to its value.

"Lo! the poor Indian." He is compelled again to retire. The great Sioux Nation, which has been occupying a reservation on the west bank of the Missouri river, as large as the State of Indiana, has surrendered to the growing cupidity of the "pale face," and its autonomy is gone. Eleven millions of acres of land will soon be thrown open to white settlers. The Indians stood out against this dismemberment of their territory until the conviction was forced upon them that if they did not yield gracefully, they would be driven out. They have accepted fourteen millions of dollars for their eleven millions of acres of land. There is said to be room in the public domain thus acquired for seventy thousand families. It is a country rich in grain and cattle and minerals!

Senator Ingalls, of Kansas, in the August Forum, bears this testimony to the workings of prohibition in Kansas:

Kansas has abolished the saloon. The open dramshop traffic is as extinct as the sale of indulgences. A drunkard is a phenomenon. The barkeeper has joined the troubadour, the crusader and the mound-builder. The brewery, the distillery and the bonded warehouse are known only to the archæologist. It seems incredible that among a population of 1,700,000 people, extending from the Missouri river to Colorado, and from Nebraska to Oklahoma, there is not a place which the thirsty or hilarious wayfarer can enter, and, laying down a coin, demand his glass of beer. This does not imply that absolute drought prevails everywhere, or that "social irrigation" has entirely disappeared. But the habit of drinking is dying out. Temptation being removed from the young and the infirm, they have been fortified and redeemed. The liquor seller, being proscribed, is an outlaw, and his vocation disreputable. Drinking, being stigmatized, is out of fashion, and the consumption of intoxicants has enormously decreased. Intelligent and conservative observers estimate the reduction at ninety per cent.; it can not be less than seventy-five.

Alexandria District Conference.

This body of ministers and laymen convened in Bunkie, August 8. The editor arrived on the evening of the same day, and was thus fortunate enough to witness all the proceedings, and to hear all the reports except those of the first morning's session. This Conference is under the leadership of that veteran presiding elder of the Louisiana Conference, Rev. B. F. Alexander, who seems, by some means, to have renewed the mental energies and spiritual power and the tact of leadership which characterized him in former years! Nearly all the pastors were present, and quite a large number of laymen. Many of the preachers in this district are young men, who are doing vigorous work in the Master's vineyard. They are growing men, and are expending their growing energies, and diligently using their expanding minds to push on the victories of the church. Under their management, and by the hearty co-operation of consecrated laymen and women, the cause has advanced considerably during the past year; and from the invitations given by preachers to their brethren to help in protracted and camp meetings, we conclude that a regular campaign has been planned for the fall work.

The reports of the preachers, while not embracing some matters of great importance which ought to have been brought forward and discussed, showed advancement in some departments of church work. Preaching is done in very many places that were not included in the plans of last year, some of the preachers having as many as twelve preaching-places; and one young brother's circuit being as much as sixty miles long and twenty-five miles broad! This same brother two years ago traveled 300 miles and preached 20 sermons every month, from February to December! That sounds like it might have been written fifty years ago! The spiritual condition of the charges is evidently on the increase. The missionary idea, which is the real foundation upon which the Christian religion rests, is becoming more prevalent, and is taking firmer hold upon the conscience of the church. This is one of the best evidences of an increased spirituality. Some attention has been paid to church buildings and parsonages, and some neat temples have been reared for the worship of God, and some comfortable dwellings for the shelter of his servants and their families. The finances are in as good condition, relatively, as in any district which we have visited. Altogether, we think the prospect is hopeful of larger success in the Alexandria district than ever before. The citizens of Bunkie and vicinity took a great interest in the proceedings of the Conference, which interest was clearly and unmistakably manifested by "a packed house at every service." The heartiness of the hospitality dispensed was very marked. The people appreciated the presence of the Conference, and manifested their appreciation with great cordiality.

The preaching, morning and night, was earnest and spiritual, and was listened to with undivided attention. Bro. Whatley, the preacher in charge, had succeeded, with the help of a willing people, in erecting a beautiful church in Bunkie, and Sunday was the day appointed for its dedication. The crowd was so great that, in order to supply all the people with the gospel, a service was conducted in the town hall by Rev. A. D. McVoy, president of Mansfield Female College. The editor preached the dedicatory sermon, the presiding elder took a collection to pay off a small indebtedness, and the house was solemnly set apart for religious services. The preacher and people rejoice together at this happy conclusion of their work, and the prospect of future success in Bunkie is large and growing.

The schools of the church were well represented at this Conference. President Fitzhugh, of Whitworth; President McVoy, of Mansfield, and Mrs. Hays, of Opelousas—all being present. Centenary College was represented in a small statistical speech by the writer. In company with Bros. Pipes, McVoy and Dr. Ward, of Big Cane, we were entertained by Mr. Kimbrough and his wife, and we enjoyed their elegant hospitality to the full. We left Monday morning, but left a good and serious and blessed meeting in full blast.

Thus endeth the fourteenth District Conference which has been attended by the editor and publisher of this paper.

Dedicating a Negro Church.—A Generous Benefaction.

MR. EDITOR: By special invitation of my old friend, Bro. Peter James, I had the pleasure of dedicating a negro church yesterday on his Bee Lake Plantation. His interest in the religious and educational welfare of the negroes is well known to your readers. This church—a handsome frame building, about 35x50 feet, nicely ceiled and furnished—he had erected at his own cost of one thousand dollars; and on yesterday formally tendered it to the congregation with solemn dedicatory ceremonies. The people were happy; and in the closing prayer the colored pastor, with great pathos and power, invoked the divine blessing upon the generous benefactor and his family. No wonder our dear brother was affected to tears! He was richly repaid for his benefaction in the simple delight of the congregation, and their earnest prayers for his salvation and all his house. The occasion was one of peculiar pleasure to me. The people gave helpful heed to the Word preached, and every indication of genuine appreciation of the large-hearted devotion to their elevation by Bro. James. I hope this will stimulate the wealthy planters of the South to do larger and better things for the negroes. With more commodious and tasteful churches, accompanied by a more personal interest in the religious culture of these people, we will see a higher type of Christianity among them.

It is the purpose of Bro. James to have a school conducted in this building, the expense of which he expects to meet. A white teacher, full of faith and the missionary spirit, is preferred. Anyone who feels ready to consecrate himself to such a work can communicate with Bro. James, at Bee Lake, or myself, at Jackson, Miss. A competent, well-recommended colored teacher will be accepted.

In this connection I exhort our preachers everywhere to take more active and personal interest in work among the negroes. They need your help, and will gladly accept it. Preach to them often, and visit their Sunday-schools as opportunity offers. In the larger towns you might organize the colored preachers into a class, and give them lectures on pastoral theology on Monday mornings. The late Dr. Landrum, of the Coliseum Baptist Church, in New Orleans, had such a class to meet him every Monday morning, and did a work that will bless the generations to come. The pulpits of these people are open to us everywhere. In addition to this, we need special missionaries among them under appointment of our Annual Conferences, as provided for by the last General Conference. In other days our missionaries to the people of color made a history which the General Conference of 1858 pronounced the "crowning glory" of the Southern Methodist Church. Our responsibility has not ceased.

Having spent a delightful time with the dear friends at Bee Lake—preaching to the colored people in the morning and dedicating the new church, giving the white congregation a sermon in the afternoon, and exhorting to another colored church at night—I returned home on Monday afternoon.

Truly and fraternally,

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

"The Poor Prisoner of the Vatican."

Since the triumph of Victor Emmanuel and constitutional liberty in Italy the Pope has been posing as a poor prisoner. He thereby appeals to the sympathy of "the faithful," and keeps warm their loyal blood. Church assemblies pass resolutions of condolence, and demand the restoration of his temporal power. For every such expression he exchanges an apostolic blessing. But just how spacious and gorgeous is his prison-house, and how ample is his income, the ignorant poor of the church have not the faintest conception. The Vatican, the official, palatial residence of God's vicegerent, has twenty courts and eleven thousand halls, saloons and apartments. And the following figures, covering income and expenditures for 1888, will give an idea of the prisoner's financial condition:

PAPAL INCOME FOR THE YEAR.

From St. Peter's Pence	$1,500,000
Interest on capital invested	500,000
Alms and other sources	106,000
Received during the Jubilee	400,000
Total income	$2,506,000

PAPAL EXPENDITURES FOR THE YEAR.

Alms bestowed	$ 60,000
Subsidies in Rome	10,000
Other subsidies	65,000
For the Propaganda	100,000
For the diplomatic service	100,000
For missions	200,000
Administrative expenses	200,000
Apostolic palaces	100,000
Public monuments	50,000
Pay of Cardinals	400,000
Maintenance of seminaries	450,000
Sundry expenses	500,000
Total expenditures	$1,236,000
Excess of income over expenditures	270,000
	$2,506,000

And yet the cry of poverty will continue, and the ignorant, priest-ridden "faithful" will give the last dollar for "Peter's Pence" to keep the wolf from the Holy Father's door. It is well for Protestants in the United States to study those figures. Better take warning of them now than suffer on account of them after awhile. That "poor prisoner" in Rome is the most potential single political influence in America to-day. As he speaks through his American Cardinal, so a half-million men will vote. The Roman Catholic voter will subordinate the tariff, internal revenue, the demonetization of silver, pensions, and every other party question, to the interests of the church. He stays with the party that the church favors at the time, and changes as the Cardinal counsels. This Romish question is destined to be an issue in American politics. It behooves every Christian and patriot to give it careful study.

A Question for Answer.

Is the following a correct canon of Scripture interpretation, viz: Whenever God is represented as doing something which, in its nature, is phenomenal—that is, something which a visible person might be supposed to do, if he had sufficient power—it must be done in figurative and not literal terms?

Now, Mr. Editor, will you, and also some of your intelligent correspondents, tell me if the above rule of construing Scripture is correct? I make the inquiry in good faith and for a practical purpose. If it is not correct, please let the defects be stated. ENQUIRER.

Gov. Lowry vs. Sullivan.

Many of the secular papers and some of our religious exchanges some time ago were disposed to twit Gov. Lowry, because in face of his proclamation the fight between Sullivan and Kilrain actually came off on Mississippi soil, and the "sluggers" and their abettors and sympathizers got away before the law could reach the case. Some went so far as to laugh at the Governor's "blustering proclamation" and his "manifest impotency." The scale has turned; rather, the "scales have fallen" from somebody's eyes. The Governor pursued his policy firmly and intelligently, and his agents co-operated with him with resolute will. The result was, Mr. Sullivan was apprehended in New York and brought back to Mississippi; and almost in sight of the place where his contempt for Mississippi law and the Governor's proclamation had been so valiantly manifested he was indicted by a Mississippi grand jury, tried by a jury of Mississippi citizens, before a Mississippi judge, and convicted of a misdemeanor against Mississippi law, and sentenced by the same judge to twelve months' imprisonment in the county jail. A petition to the court for clemency to the prisoner, and a request that the punishment be inflicted by fine only, were disregarded by Judge Terrel. After the sentence, an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court, which allows the condemned Sullivan a few months' respite, and then, unless he "takes leg bail" and leaves his sureties in the lurch, the Hon. John L. Sullivan will try the board and lodging in a county jail in Mississippi. Well done, Gov. Lowry and the judge and officers of the court!

That College Again.

Even Natchez is astir on this all-important question. The Democrat, of recent date, has a column and a quarter leader urging the many advantages, and calling upon the citizens of Natchez, irrespective of denomination, to do all in their power to secure the location there of the college. The Democrat is owned by a Roman Catholic, and edited by a Presbyterian. Significant! Now, what are the Methodists of Natchez doing towards the endowment fund? No place need bid for the location of the college which does not subscribe liberally to the endowment fund. So far, Wesson heads the list in subscription to the endowment fund; and Wesson will give lands and money to secure the location of the college. How much better will Natchez do? T. L. MELLEN.

Another Missionary to Japan.

Our fund to send another missionary to Japan is growing gradually. Why should it not grow faster? Have you sent your $10? Can't you spare that much to help the Lord's cause on this line? Won't you send it right away? Who next? The following have contributed up to going to press:

It is well always to remember that it is not the "light" of our "much speaking" or "loud professions" that we are to "let shine," but the light of our "good works." "If ye love me, keep my commandments," said our Lord; and we have come to look upon any religion other than one of obedience to God as utterly unsulted to save a sinner.

Notes.

The British Wesleyans at their late session elected Rev. C. H. Kelley president of the Conference, and in a day or two elected him book-steward by an overwhelming majority.

The Northern Presbyterian Church statistics for the year just ended show that there are 753,148 communicants, and that $12,600,818 were contributed for the support of the institutions of the church. This includes every species of giving.

A writer in Zion's Herald, speaking of Jonathan Edwards, says: "He never spent his time gadding about, making promiscuous calls under the delusion that he was doing pastoral work. He thought the days too valuable to be thus employed."

The Society of Friends, taking advantage of the Shah of Persia's presence in England, presented him with a copy of the New Testament in Persian, and assured him that in the acceptance of its teachings they find true happiness and blessing. The Shah assured the deputation that he would read the book as he desired to know its contents. Good for the Quakers!

Mrs. Rev. B. F. Alexander, assisted by Mrs. Rev. B. F. White, during the session of the Alexandria District Conference, at Bunkie, organized a Woman's Missionary Society. Quite a number of ladies enrolled their names, and several gentlemen became honorary members. So the missionary idea is taking deep hold upon the conscience of the church, and missionary work is extending in many directions.

Rev. Dr. D. Dorchester, the superintendent of Indian schools, by appointment of President Harrison, has appointed his wife as a special agent. She receives $6 per day and her transportation. There has been some criticism of the appointment, and Secretary Noble hesitated for awhile to confirm it, but thought "it was not good that the man should be alone," and hence created him an official companion. For skill in turning an honest penny the Yankee has no equal.

The Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church have issued an address to the class leaders of their church. In this document, prepared by them at the request of their last General Conference, they set forth fully the nature of the class leader's office, and close with practical suggestions to pastors as well as class leaders. It is an address that is calculated to do much good in that field of church work. They have also published a "Course of Reading for Class Leaders." That is a very fine suggestion, we think.

We are glad to read in the Alabama Advocate of the generous beneficence of the Methodists of Eufaula, Ala., toward the family of Dr. R. B. Crawford, their deceased pastor. Says the Advocate:

The Methodist people at Eufaula, Ala., will never be forgotten on account of their noble treatment of the wife and children of the dead pastor. They pay the full year's salary, let Sister Crawford occupy the parsonage until Conference, and, better still, the young men of the church have purchased and given to Sister Crawford a fifteen-hundred-dollar residence. Brethren, if we serve the church faithfully, God will see to it that our loved ones are taken care of.

That is an example worthy of commendation and imitation.

During a discussion on a brother's orthodoxy in the Wesleyan Conference, Rev. F. W. McDonald said: "Brethren must remember they were passing through a period of transition in regard to the phraseology they used in theology." He entreated those who had a keen love for theological controversy to remember this and keep a gentle mastery over themselves, and not hew in pieces before the Lord, with needless philosophic ferocity, those who differed from them in the use of their theological shibboleths. This is a good exhortation to some of our own writers.

When Judge Tourjee, in discussing a probable race conflict in the South, said, "A box of matches is equal to a hundred Winchester rifles," he evidently intended to express a wish as well as announce a fact. Alas! for the negro that he has such a champion. The very suggestion of arson is a horror. How it could have found place in the thoughts of a philanthropist (?) we know not. Heaven deliver the country, and especially the negro, from such leadership. The so-called negro question can never be solved by such writing. It requires long patience, lofty patriotism and much prayer. The church and school-house—the Bible and spelling-book—must do the work. All suggestions of violence are to be deplored. Men of calm, catholic spirit and broad, unprejudiced minds are alone competent to discuss this momentous question. The little purblind partisan ought to be denied access to the pages of so dignified a journal as the Forum.

Personal and Otherwise.

The postoffice address of Rev. James Healy, recently transforred from the Mississippi Conference, is San Diego, Cal.—P. O. Box 1199.

We are indebted to Rev. J. S. Oakley, of Columbus, Miss., for a stirring pamphlet on "The Apostolical Succession." We presume, as it is by "Presbyter," that the author is a Church of England man; it also bears the imprint of a London publisher. It is certainly a heavy blow to all such Popish pretentions as the tactual succession from the apostles.

The one-dollar bills are coming in beautifully in answer to Bishop Wilson's call for means to send another missionary to Japan. The readers of the ADVOCATE supplied the money last year to send Bro. Newton, and this year they are going to supply the means to send another brother. Some can send "tens," but all can send "ones." Send them on, brethren and sisters.

We are indebted to Hon. Thomas F. Pettus, U. S. Consul at Ningpo, China, for a copy of the Hong Kong Daily Press, dated Hong Kong, July 4.

Bishop Wilson seems to have recovered from the injuries received in the railroad disaster. We see by the papers that he is again zealously at work.

We read with great interest Dr. Potter's appeal for girls, an address delivered at the Piedmont Chautauqua, not long since. The Doctor made a strong case, and ended with an intimible picture, which must have carried conviction to all minds.

Rev. S. H. Babcock, presiding elder of Fort Smith district, Arkansas Conference, has been elected president of Galloway Female College, at Searcy, Ark. The appointment is a good one, as Bro. Babcock has had experience and success as an educater. Bishop Galloway endorses him as "capable and in every way worthy of the position."

Two Bishops were in our office last week: Bishop Keener, who is looking much better than in the early summer, and Bishop Galloway, on his way to the seashore to rest for a few days and recuperate among the breezes that blow over the hillows of the Mississippi Sound.

Rev. J. W. Hill, presiding elder of the Clarksville district, Tennessee Conference, died recently of typho-malarial fever. The Nashville Advocate says: "A better man is not left among us."

Rev. J. S. Oakley, the pastor of our church in Columbus, Miss., during his late visit to England, laid before some Wesleyan preachers the importance of sending a representative to our next General Conference, and now Bro. Oakley informs us that his request has been granted, and that the secretary of the Wesleyan Conference, Rev. David J. Waller, has been appointed fraternal delegate to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The Denver Conference elected the first delegates to the next General Conference: Rev. J. D. Bush, clerical, and J. W. Widderfield, lay.

Dr. J. H. Bayliss, editor of the Western Christian Advocate, Cincinnati, died August 10, from the effects of a carbuncle. Dr. Bayliss was a prominent man among the Methodists of the North.

Several days ago two of our preachers, Bros. Wimberly and Henry, came near being poisoned to death. Stopping with a friend in Thibodeaux, they ate sardines for supper, and in the night both were attacked with severe vomiting, from which they were relieved only after streuuous efforts of the physician. It is supposed that the acid and solder somehow got mixed with the little fishes. Moral: Preachers need not eat sardines for supper.

Jake Kilrain is said to be very much disgusted at the result of the proceedings against John L. Sullivan.

Notice.

Information wanted as to present whereabouts of William Thomas, blacksmith by trade, who moved from Albany, N. Y., in 1836, to Texas. In 1852 he was at Quintana (now Velasco), Brazoria county, where he continued to reside until 1858, when his wife died, and he, with his two daughters, removed to Wallisville, Chambers county; from thence he has been traced to Liberty, Liberty county, but is not there now. His present address, if alive, or that of his daughters, will be acceptable to his relatives in this State. Address Mrs. J. H. Owen, Perry, Wyoming county, N. Y.

WILL BEGIN
SEPTEMBER 5, 1889.

The last session was one of the best in the long and useful history of the College. The order and general behavior of students was excellent; moral and religious influences strong, and admirable progress generally was made in studies.

GYMNASIUM and WM. MORROW SCIENCE HALL are finished and beautiful additions to the already lovely grounds.

Work of rebuilding the burnt "BYARS HOUSE" is in progress, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

The new SOCIETY HALLS will be commodious and elegant.

In addition to subjects heretofore embraced in the courses, thorough practical instruction will be given in Analytical Chemistry, Determination of Minerals, Assaying, etc.

NO HEALTHIER OR MORE BEAUTIFUL PLACE. NO MALARIA.

No saloons, no occurrences to distract the minds of students, no safer place for boys and young men. Charges very moderate. Every possible arrangement for the encouragement of young men of limited means.

For catalogues and special information apply to

Mansfield Female College
Conservatory of Music and Art.
MANSFIELD, LA.

One of the most popular and flourishing institutions of the South. The Sixty-sixth Session opens September 11, 1889, and the Spring Term begins February 1, 1890, with an able and experienced faculty. Curriculum comprehensive, instruction thorough. Advantages in Music unsurpassed, as in the best conservatories. The pianos are new and of the best make. The Technicon and the Technichone are used to facilitate the work in the music department, placing this department beyond competition. Departments of Fine Arts and Industrial Arts under specialists.

The location is unsurpassed for beauty and attractiveness, and the school is celebrated for the remarkable record for good health maintained. The climate is the best in which to educate, and the place is the safest for girls. The main building is of brick, massive and commodious, with a large and well-shaded campus. Rooms large, well furnished, warmed and ventilated. Ample provision for the table of the best the market affords. All necessary comfort secured. Expenses very low and the school very economical. A new building with a large audience-hall is in contemplation, and extensive improvements are in progress to make this the grandest institution in the State.

From the Professor of English in Vanderbilt University:

NASHVILLE, TENN., June 22, 1889.

For four or five years I have every year spent, at least, one day in the class-room of Messrs. Wall and Mooney's School. I have questioned their classes, and heard them recite in English, Mathematics, German, Greek and Latin; and I do not hesitate to call their work excellent. Better trained pupils it would be hard to find. The moral culture is equally good.

Our Young People.

A DUTCH LULLABY.

BY EUGENE FIELD.

Wynken, Blynken and Nod one night
Sailed off in a wooden shoe—
Sailed on a river of misty light
Into a sea of dew.
"Where are you going and what do you wish?"
The old moon asked the three.
"We have come to fish for the herring-fish
That live in this beautiful sea;
Nets of silver and gold have we,"
Said Wynken,
Blynken,
And Nod.

The old moon laughed and sung a song
As they rocked in the wooden shoe,
And the wind that sped them all night long,
Ruffled the waves of dew;
The little stars were the herring-fish
That lived in the beautiful sea.
"Now cast your nets wherever you wish,
But never afraid are we,"
So cried the stars to the fishermen three,
Wynken,
Blynken,
And Nod.

All night long their nets they threw
For the fish in the twinkling foam.
Then down from the sky came the wooden shoe,
Bringing the fishermen home.
'Twas all so pretty, a sail it seemed
As if it could not be;
And some folks thought 'twas a dream they dreamed
Of sailing that beautiful sea.
But I shall name you the fishermen three:
Wynken,
Blynken,
And Nod.

Wynken and Blynken are two little eyes,
And Nod is a little head,
And the wooden shoe that sailed the skies
Is a wee one's trundle bed;
So shut your eyes while mother sings
Of wonderful sights that be,
And you shall see the beautiful things
As you rock on the misty sea
Where the old shoe rocked the fishermen three,
Wynken,
Blynken,
And Nod.

The Heathen Boy.

Not many years ago, as a lady was sitting in the veranda of her house in Burma, a jungle boy came through the opening in the hedge which served as a gateway, and approaching her, inquired with eagerness:

"Does Jesus Christ live here?"

He was a boy about twelve years of age, his hair matted in filth and bristling in every direction, like the quills of a porcupine, and a dirty cloth of cotton was wrapped in a most slovenly manner about his person. "Does Jesus Christ live here?" he asked, as he hastened up the steps of the veranda.

"What do you want with Jesus Christ?" asked the lady.

"I want to see him and confess to him."

"Why, what have you been doing that you want to confess?"

"Does he live here?" he continued, with great emphasis: "I want to know that. Doing? Why, I tell lies, I steal, I do everything bad. I am afraid of going to hell, and I want to see Jesus Christ, for I heard one of the Loogyees (missionaries) say that he can save us from hell. Does he live here? Tell me where I can find him."

"But he does not save people from hell if they continue to do wickedly."

"I want to stop doing wickedly," said the boy, "but I can't. I don't know how to stop. The evil thoughts are in me, and the bad deeds come of evil thoughts. What can I do?"

"Nothing but come to Christ, poor boy, like the rest of us," the lady softly replied; but she spoke this last in English, so the boy only raised his head with a vacant look.

"You can not see Jesus Christ now," she added, and was answered by a sharp, quick cry of disappointment. "But I am his friend and follower," said the lady, at which the face of the little listener brightened, and continued: "He has told me in his word to teach all those who wish to escape from hell how to do so."

The joyful eagerness depicted in the boy's countenance was beyond description. "Tell me, oh tell me! Only ask your Master to save me, and I will be your servant for life. Do not be angry. I want to be saved. Save me from hell!"

The next day the little boy was introduced to the little bamboo school-house in the character of "the wild Karen boy," and such a greedy seeker after truth and holiness has been seldom seen. Every day he came to the white teachers to learn something more concerning the Lord Jesus and the way of salvation; and every day his eagerness increased, and his face gradually lost its indescribable look of stupidity. He was at length baptized, and commemorated the love of that Savior he had so earnestly sought. He lived awhile to testify his sincerity, and then died in joyful hope. He had "confessed," and had found a deliverer from those sins from which he could not free himself. The lady has also since died, and she and the wild Karen boy have met in the presence of their common Redeemer.—Herald and Presbyter.

A Little Girl's Talk.

A few Sundays ago I heard a little girl's talk over her pocket-book before church time. Her brother said to her:

"Where's your money? There will be a contribution to-day."

She went to get her pocket-book.

"I have two silver ten-cents and a paper one."

Her brother said: "A tenth of that is three cents."

"But three cents is such a stingy little to give. I shall give this ten cents. You see I would have had more here, only I spent some for myself last week; it would not be fair to take a tenth of what is left after I have used all I wanted."

"Why don't you give the paper ten-cents? The silver ones are prettier to keep."

"So they are prettier to give. Paper ten-cents look so dirty and shabby. No; I'll give good things."

So she had put one ten-cents in her pocket, when some one said:

"I hope we can raise that $300 for home-missions to-day."

"O, this is home-mission day! Then that other silver ten-cents has to go, too." And she went to get it, with another doleful groan.

I said: "If you feel so distressed about it, why do you give it?"

"O, because I made up my mind to always give twice as much to home missions as anything else, and I shall just stick to what I made up my mind to!"

Now this little affair set me to thinking:

1. We should deal honestly with God in giving. "It is not fair," said the little girl, "to count your tenth after you have used all that you want."

2. We should deal liberally in giving. If the fair tenth is a petty sum, let us go beyond it, and give more.

3. Let us give our best things. That which is the nicest to keep is also the nicest to give.

4. Let us give until we feel it.

ANNIE BAKER, of Milwaukee, Wis., suffered with Asthma for years. Finally she was induced to try Peruna. Her paroxysms were immediately relieved and a permanent cure finally effected. Read her case in Dr. Hartman's "Ills of Life." Peruna is sold by all druggists—$1 a bottle.

DIVIDING THE CAMELS.—A very pretty arithmetical puzzle is given in the form of an anecdote, which may be new to some of our readers.

A Persian died, leaving seventeen camels to be divided among his three sons in the following proportions: the eldest to have half, the second a third, and the youngest a ninth. Of course, camels can not be divided into fractions, so, in despair, the brothers submitted their difficulty to Mohammed Ali.

"Nothing easier!" said the wise Ali; "I'll lend you another camel to make eighteen, and now divide them yourselves."

The result was that the eldest brother received nine camels, the second six, and the third two; while Ali received his own camel back again.

Household.

Rigid Housekeeping.

"Yes," said Mrs. Benson, sinking into a chair, and fanning herself with slow movements of the palm-leaf, as if too tired for even that small exertion. "Yes, I never neglect my duties on account of the weather. I sweep this room every Friday, winter and summer, and I do it thoroughly, too; take all the furniture out, dust behind the pictures, wipe the windows. When I've finished the room is clean!"

"But," pleaded her visitor, "the grass comes to the front door, you stand far in from the road, there are no children to make a litter, and you keep the doors closed most of the time; the room can not need sweeping so regularly."

"It is my rule," said the inflexible housewife. "I don't believe in saving myself and neglecting my home. Nobody can ever accuse me of that sin."

"Yet you are worth something to your home, and you lessen that value, when you are worn out soul and body, when you have only the remnants of your strength left for those whom you love most dearly, and when you grow old twice as fast as you ought. I believe in cleanliness, but not to the extent of worshiping it as if it were a graven image."

"My mother always swept the whole house every week, and I intend to do the same," persisted the little woman, quite unmoved by all the argument. To plead with her was a manifest waste of nervous force. Belonging to the school of rigid housekeepers, she preferred martyrdom to comfort, and from a lofty height surveyed less "thorough" fellow-creatures.

One's heart aches, though, at the absurdity of sacrifice so needless, at the sorrow of vitality so uselessly expended. When there is so much to do and so much to enjoy, when the life we have to do and enjoy in is so very brief, why fritter it away on sweeping rooms that are already clean?—Christian Intelligencer.

Girls of the Period.

For my part, I never join in the censorious estimates of the girls of to-day, as compared with the girls of the past. I believe that the girls of America in this year 1889 are healthier and happier, and better looking, too, than they ever were before. They know more; can do more; they have the opportunity of being more. No one can doubt that.

If they wish to go through college, they can do so, and no one sneers at them. If they desire a profession, they have opportunities to secure one, as their brothers have. They can be business women if they like, and yet shock no one; and they can be as purely domestic and gentle and feminine as the dreams of poets make them, if they prefer that line. They dress beautifully and sensibly.

Their music and drawing, and all their accomplishments, are of a higher grade than they were two generations ago. More girls can now make their own dresses—in good style—than ever before.

The art of cooking is better understood. The necessity of exercise and perfect neatness of person is understood not only by every fashionable belle, but by every farmer's daughter in the land; and these farmers' daughters are not mere household drudges, but intelligent girls who could carry on the farm if it was necessary for them to do so.

The Girl of the Period knows how to take care of herself from every point of view, and she does it. She does not need as much "protection" as girls of other generations used to need, but she gets it when she wants it, all the same.

She is, in fact, a very nice creature, and I am proud of her; and it is only those who do not know her who decry her, for she is an immense improvement on the Girl of the Past.—Woman's Work.

The most potent remedies for the cure of disease have been discovered by accident. The first dose of Dr. Shallenberger's Antidote for Malaria was given, as an experiment, to an old lady almost dying from the effects of Malaria on whom Quinine acted as a poison. One dose cured her; and a single dose has cured thousands since. It is the only known Antidote for the poison of Malaria. Sold by Druggists.

MO(U)RNING REVERIE.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

Is the "ideal" Hair-dressing. It restores the color to gray hair; promotes a fresh and vigorous growth; prevents the formation of dandruff; makes the hair soft and silken; and imparts a delicate but lasting perfume.

"Several months ago my hair commenced falling out, and in a few weeks my head was almost bald. I tried many remedies, but they did no good. I finally bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and, after using only a part of the contents, my head was covered with a heavy growth of hair. I recommend your preparation as the best in the world."—T. Munday, Sharon Grove, Ky.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for a number of years, and it has always given me satisfaction. It is an excellent dressing, prevents the hair from turning gray, insures its vigorous growth, and keeps the scalp white and clean."—Mary A. Jackson, Salem, Mass.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for promoting the growth of the hair, and think it unequaled. For restoring the hair to its original color, and for a dressing, it cannot be surpassed."—Mrs. Geo. La Fever, Eaton Rapids, Mich.

"Ayer's Hair Vigor is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair and makes it glossy and soft. The Vigor is also a cure for dandruff."—J. W. Bowen, Editor "Enquirer," McArthur, Ohio.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the past two years, and found it all it is represented to be. It restores the natural color to gray hair, causes the hair to grow freely, and keeps it soft and pliant."—Mrs. M. V. Day, Cohoes, N. Y.

"My father, at about the age of fifty, lost all the hair from the top of his head. After one month's trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor the hair began coming, and, in three months, he had a fine growth of hair of the natural color."—P. J. Cullen, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

STOFFORD—J. M. STOFFORD, of the firm of Morgan & Stofford, Greenville, Texas, who was visiting friends at Hattiesburg, Miss., died of malarial fever, at Hattiesburg, July 14, 1889. He was sick about ten days. His attending physicians, Watkins and Moore, seemed to have the disease under control, and he was thought to be rapidly improving, when from some cause he suddenly grew worse, and died in twenty-four hours after relapsing. Bro. Stofford was a young man of promise, about twenty-eight or thirty years of age. He was a member of the Methodist Church. I talked to him about death and his future prospects, and he told me he had made the necessary preparation to meet God in peace. A number of friends were kind and attentive, and among others was his old and tried friend, Mr. W. C. Hawkins. But, in spite of all that physicians and kind friends could do, he passed over the river to rest under the shade. We laid his body away in the Hattiesburg Cemetery to await the resurrection morn. Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord!

JOHNSON—Sister ELIZABETH JOHNSON was born in Laurence district, S. C., December 15, 1835, and died, at her residence, Sylvarena, Smith county, Miss., August 7, 1889, aged fifty-four years and three months. She married Bro. A Johnson, February 15, 1853, and both joined the Baptist Church the same year, and continued their membership in said church till uniting with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1877. She moved with her family to Alabama in 1859, and from thence to Mississippi in 1865, where they remain to the present date. Her maiden name was Garrett. She leaves six children and her husband to mourn her departure. She was a faithful mother and wife. She taught her children to pray and read God's Word. They read our religious papers, and are all members of our church. Her last words to me were that she would meet me in heaven. She gave testimony to her friends that she was both willing and ready to die. Her work is ended, and she rests under the shade of the trees.

A. C. FLOWERS.

BEESOM—THOMAS JEFFERSON BEESOM was born December 29, 1851, and died May 27, 1889, after an illness of thirty-four days. His suffering was intense, but he bore it with Christian fortitude. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and one of its most efficient stewards. His place in the church will be hard to fill. He was also an active member of the Farmers' Alliance. Though the grim monster came as a thief in the night, it found him watching and ready. In answer to his friend in regard to the future, he said all was well, death had no terror for him, that he had been preparing for it. He was an affectionate son and brother, a true friend. His motto was to do right, and he used his influence to get others to do the same. We bow in humble submission to the will of him who doeth all things well, feeling confident that our loss is his eternal gain. He leaves an aged father and mother and several brothers and sisters. May the Lord help them so to live that they may all meet in the sweet by-and-by?

K. COWART.

COURTRIGHT—WILLIE B., youngest child of James H. and Clementina Courtright, was born at Rolling Fork, Miss., February 29, 1888, and died July 16, 1889. Our Willie was a bright, lovely and sprightly babe; and fondly did the parents cherish the beautiful little life. But it faded away from earth, to bloom and unfold the more beautifully in heaven. We shall miss Willie here, for there is a vacant little chair; but it is a sweet and precious thought to know that it is our own dear Willie safe in the arms of Jesus, where he is waiting and watching for the coming of loved ones. Weep not dear parents, for your precious Willie; but patiently wait and trust him who will guide you through life and comfort and bless you in this sad hour of bereavement. Let your trust be stayed on him who is able to succor. A tender and touching funeral service was conducted at the home by our pastor, and Willie was laid away in the ground to come forth again on the beautiful morn of the resurrection.

ANNIE ROBERTS.

SEXON—Miss PEARL, daughter of C. S. and L. O. Sexon, was born in Barlow county, Ga., January 7, 1867; professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when fourteen years old. Miss Pearl lived a consistent member until her death, which took place in Laurel, Jones county, Miss., August 5, 1889. This writer visited her in her sickness, and prayed with her. She was willing to die, and a few hours before her death she prayed that her suffering might hasten to an end. She leaves a devoted mother, two sisters, one brother and many friends to mourn her loss. May God bless her loved ones, and may they become an unbroken family in heaven!

J. N. WARE.

BRADFORD—Mrs. EMMA E. BRADFORD, wife of Rev. David P. Bradford, of the Mississippi Conference, died in Jackson, La., July 15, 1889.

The daughter of Z. G. and Mary B. Norwood, she was born in St. Helena parish, La., October 21, 1848. She was married April 4, 1866. Numerous friends in Mississippi and Louisiana will read with sad interest of her death. Until the beginning of her last illness, June 13, she had been in almost perfect health since moving to Jackson, La., two years ago. She leaves seven children—three having preceded her to heaven—an aged mother in Florida, and other relatives to mourn her death.

Sister Bradford was like herself. She possessed, in marked degree, strength of mind, force of character, vivacity of spirit. She was true; she was unhidden. Disposed to piety from childhood, she joined the church at the Greensburg Camp Ground in 1860. She was converted at the old Darlington Church, under the ministry of Rev. W. E. Ballard, September 27, 1865. Accustomed to the comforts of life, it was no small struggle, in her young married life, to give up home, with its pleasant surroundings, and adopt the life of an itinerant, to which her husband was called. Grace, combined with good sense, triumphed in this struggle. And once decided, her strong character was evinced to the end in determined adherence to the chosen life. In all these years, with a growing family, with frequent disappointments and discomforts and the straitened financial conditions incident to the itinerant preacher's life Sister Bradford would never entertain the thought of her husband locating. Her husband touchingly writes: "Since I was nineteen, and she seventeen, we have walked together. Oftentimes, when I have been discouraged, she has cheered me on by her self-sacrificing nature and her faith in Divine Providence, saying, 'God will open the way for us.'"

Sister Bradford was devoted to the church, loved her husband's work and was ambitious for his success. The responsibilities of home were felt by her. For the last few years she held family prayers in the absence of her husband. With heartiness she devoted her son to the ministry, when he decided he was called to this work—Rev. J. Watson Bradford, now in charge of his first circuit at Liberty, Texas.

When told the physicians thought she would die, Sister Bradford indicated no fears. Devotion to her family would stay to serve them, but she was resigned to God's will, and gave wifely, motherly counsel to husband and children. The day before her death (it was Sunday morning), beginning with the baby, she put her arms around each of the six children at home, kissed each good-bye, sent good-bye to her boy in Texas, and said: "All is right! all is right! I'll soon be in heaven." Then, turning to her husband, she said: "A truer, nobler, more faithful husband never lived."

With numerous friends, we extend to our beloved Bro. Bradford and his children the assurance of sympathy, while we invoke for them divine blessing and guidance.

JOHN A. ELLIS.

HAMMETT—FRANCES VIRGINIA, infant daughter of Enoch E. Hammett and Pollie Jones, was born December 25, 1887, and died June 13, 1889, in Natchitoches parish, near Campte, La. Dear little Virgie was sick several weeks with whooping cough and fever. The Lord lent her to them a little while. She was a blessing to them in her loving little ways and sweet baby prattle. "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away." May he comfort the parents and brothers and sisters, and help them to be resigned to his will!

JOHNSON—On August 7, 1889, the home of August Johnson, in Calcasieu parish, La., was caused to mourn the departure of their little WALTER BENJAMIN. After a brief illness of a few days, he took his departure to him who said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me." May the Lord bless, comfort and strengthen the bereaved parents to say: "I can not bring him back to me, but I can go to him. The Lord hath given, the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord!" F. N. SWEENEY.

Cases in Point.

With most decided emphasis we say, Compound Oxygen is good—but, as a rule, people are dililent in accepting the good at hand, for no particular reason unless it is the fear of knavery.

But when this fear is removed by others, more venturesome than ourselves through anxiety and affliction, there is no further reasons for doubt.

You have not to leap in the dark, for they are many beacons along the way. Here are a number.

PENFIELD, PA., Feb. 2, 1888.

"Thanks to the Lord and Compound Oxygen I believe I am well."

A. H. ROSENKRANS.

FRAZIER, PA., May 28, 1888.

"My recovery is perfectly marvelous. I feel as if I would like every sick person to try Compound Oxygen; it has done so much for me."

MISS A. M. ROHR.

DANVILLE, N. Y., July 21, 1886.

"I feel truly Compound Oxygen saved my life, and nearly four years have passed since I came to you in such a distressing condition, and to-day I can truly say I am entirely well and free from asthma and every symptom that pertains to it."

MARY Y. HEDGES.

WEATHERFORD, Texas, April 1, 1888.

"You have my heartfelt gratitude for the good your Compound Oxygen has done me."

MRS. FRANKIE EDWARDS.

We publish a brochure of 200 pages regarding the effect of Compound Oxygen on invalids, suffering from consumption, asthma, bronchitis, dyspepsia, catarrh, hay fever, headache, debility, rheumatism, neuralgia; all chronic and nervous disorders. It will be sent, free of charge, to any one addressing Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch St., Phila., Pa.; or 120 Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal.

Sources of Beautiful Colors.

The American Druggist has formulated a list of the choicest colors used in the arts, as follows:

The cochineal insects furnish a great many of the very fine colors. Among them are the gorgeous carmine, the crimson, scarlet carmine and purple lake. The cuttlefish gives the sepia. It is the inky fluid which the fish discharges in order to render the water opaque when attacked. Indian yellow comes from the camel. Ivory chips produce the ivory black and bone black. The exquisite Prussian blue is made by fusing horses' hoofs and other refuse animal matter with impure potassium carbonate. This color was discovered accidentally. Various lakes are derived from roots, barks and gums. Blue black comes from the charcoal of the vine stalk. Lamp black is soot from certain resinous substances. Turkey red is made from the madder plant, which grows in Hindostan. The yellow sap of a tree of Siam produces gamboge; the natives catch the sap in cocoanut-shells. Raw sienna is the natural earth from the neighborhood of Sienna, Italy. Raw umber is also an earth found near Umbria and burnt. India ink is made from burnt camphor. The Chinese are the only manufacturers of this ink, and they will not reveal the secret of its manufacture. Mastic is made from the gum of the mastic-tree, which grows in the Grecian Archipelago. Bister is the soot of wood ashes. Very little real ultramarine is found in the market. It is obtained from the precious lapis lazuli, and commands a fabulous price. Chinese white is zinc, scarlet is iodide of mercury, and native vermilion is from the quicksilver ore called cinnabar.

"FACIAL PERCEPTION."—Mr. W. H. Levy, who is blind, says in his book, "Blindness and the Blind," that he can tell when he is opposite an object, and can perceive whether it is tall or short, slender or bulky. He can also determine whether it be a solitary object or a continuous fence; whether a close fence or an open one, and sometimes whether a wooden fence, a stone wall, or a hedge. None of the five senses has anything to do with this perceptive power, but the impressions are made on the skin of his face, and by it transmitted to the brain. He, therefore, names this unrecognized sense facial perception. The presence of a fog interferes with facial perception, and makes the impressions faint and untrustworthy; but darkness is no impediment. A noise which distracts the attention interferes with the impressions. In passing along the street he can distinguish stores from private houses, and doors from windows, if the windows consist of a number of panes, and not of a single sheet of glass. A remarkable fact, bearing on the subject of an unrecognized sense, is mentioned by Mr. Levy. A naturalist extracted the eyes of several bats and covered the empty sockets with leather. In this condition the bats flew about the room, avoiding the sides and flying out of the door without touching the door-case. In flying through a sewer which made a right angle, they turned at the proper point. They flew through threads suspended from the ceiling without touching them, though they were only far enough apart to admit the passage of the bats' extended wings.—Youth's Companion.

INTERNAL HEAT OF THE EARTH.—A remarkable instance of the increase of the temperature in the earth towards the center has been presented at Pesth, where the deepest artesian well in the world is that now being bored for the purpose of supplying the public baths and other establishments with hot water. A depth of 8,140 feet has already been reached, and it furnishes 176,000 gallons daily at a temperature of 158 degrees Fahr. The municipality have recently voted a large subvention in order that the boring may be continued to a greater depth, not only to obtain a larger volume of water, but a temperature of 176 degrees Fahr. It is suggested that it is within the bounds of probability that a time may come when a brewer will obtain his water supply from a well of sufficient depth to yield "liquor" at the mashing temperature.—The Methodist Protestant.

If a man does not make new acquaintances as he advances in life, he will soon find himself alone. A man should keep his friendship in constant repair.—Johnson.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The appointment of a high ecclesiastical tribunal by the Pope for the Roman Catholic Church in the United States is believed to have already been consummated, although inquiry failed to develop the existence of official notification. The information obtained is to the effect that the tribunal of the church will have referred to it all cases in which the church in the United States is concerned for adjudication.

The Brazilian mail steamship Alliance, with the three commissioners who have been sent as delegates to represent Brazil at the International Congress of American nations, arrived at New York, August 16.

The constitutional convention decided upon Bismarck as the capital of North Dakota.

A serious conflict took place between contending political factions in Fort Bend county, Texas, on August 16. Richmond, the county seat, was in the hands of a mob. A deputy sheriff and another man were killed and many wounded.

It is estimated by careful officials at the G. A. R. encampment headquarters that there will be 40,000 veterans in attendance at the encampment in Milwaukee.

The latest statement concerning the extra session is that Congress will be called together about October 20.

The Board of Directors of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, on August 17, issued a call for a convention of all American exchanges, to meet in this city, on September 11, to take some joint action on the bagging problem.

Several buildings belonging to the Chautauqua Assembly, N. Y., were destroyed by fire on August 17. The total damage will not exceed $15,000.

Eighteen persons were injured in an accident on the Burlington and Missouri railroad, near Lincoln, Neb., on August 18.

At a meeting of a socialist organization, in New York City, several of the speakers said that the present mode of agitation by the socialists was of little use, as it was not adopted to American life and historical development. He advised his hearers to dissolve the present political organization, and suggested a movement having in view the dissemination of socialistic ideas among American workingmen.

A New York tenement-house restaurant was destroyed by fire on August 19. The building was occupied by thirteen families. Nine of the occupants lost their lives.

Mormon missionaries are being whipped and driven out of Warren county, Ga., where they had gone to make converts.

The Centennial of the Roman Catholic Hierarchy will be held in Baltimore, beginning November 10.

Incendiary publications in a negro paper of Selma, Ala., have stirred up the white population. Affidavits have been made against the offenders.

Ground was broken last Saturday, with an imposing demonstration, at Huntsville, Ala., for the line of the Cincinnati, Alabama and Atlantic Railroad, which is to run from Cincinnati, due south to Huntsville, and thence direct to Birmingham, or Savannah.

FOREIGN.

General Boulanger has been found guilty by the French Senate Court of embezzling public funds. Count Dillon and Henri Rochefort were convicted of conspiring with Boulanger in a felonious attempt against the safety of the State. The court sentenced Boulanger, Count Dillon and Rochefort to be deported to a fortified place.

A manifesto signed by General Boulanger, Count Dillon and Henri Rochefort is published. It calls the action of the Senate Court an orgie of arbitrary rule, calumny and mendacity, and declares that in spite of fresh coups d'etat preparing in the dark, the signers have continued confidence in the electorate of France.

The Russian government has given orders for the construction of two more ironclads and several torpedo vessels.

Count Kalnoky will revisit Prince Bismarck at Vasrein in six weeks, and Premier Crispi will shortly visit Vienna to confer with Count Kalnoky. These facts are regarded as indicating a strengthening of the triple alliance.

Signor Crispi, encouraged from Berlin, has sent the officials of the Vatican private hints that the Italian government would not permit the papal treasure or the Vatican art objects to leave Rome. It could not prevent the Pope's personal departure, but the contents of the Vatican must remain.

A hurricane swept over the southern part of Spain on August 7. Several churches and other buildings were wrecked. A portion of the dome of the Church of St. Felippe was blown down.

A reception in honor of John G. Carlisle was given by the Joint Permanent Committee of Congress, in the City of Mexico, last week. He was presented to President Diaz, and expressions of mutual good-will followed.

Rioters in the Fohlen province of China attacked the Chin-Chu villages and slaughtered four or five hundred inhabitants, including women and children.

President Carnot delivered an address at a banquet given to 13,000 mayors and communal delegates, in Paris. He said, among other things, that the demonstration, proved the national solidarity.

A fire broke out on the Brazilian steamer Alliance, while about 250 miles from the coast of Brazil, and she had a narrow escape. Her Yankee officers and crew did noble work and succeeded in saving her.

A special envoy of King Humbert of Italy in Paris, on August 19, presented Thomas A. Edison, the famous American electrician, with the insignia of a grand officer of the crown of Italy. Mr. Edison thus becomes a count and his wife a countess.

Fret not your life away because your hair is gray, while young, as you can stop all grayness and can beautify the hair with Hall's Hair Renewer and be happy.

Weather-Crop Bulletin of the Louisiana Weather Service,

In Co-operation with the U. S. Signal Service. For Week Ending Saturday, Aug. 17, 1889.

An average temperature, excessive amount of sunshine and deficient precipitation characterized the weather conditions in the Northern Section of Louisiana during the past seven days. In the Southern Section a nearly normal temperature and percentage of sunshine, with a slight excess in the amount of rainfall is noted. The average rainfall for the week in the cotton-growing portion of the State was but .47 of an inch; in the sugar and rice region an average of 1.58 inches fell.

The prospects for cotton are very good in spite of the numerous worms. The wholesale poisoning is keeping planters busy, they realizing the fact that a splendid crop will be obtained if the caterpillars are destroyed. Thus far no material damage is reported, although slight damage has ensued.

In Catahoula there is no report of worms, and the forecast is ventured that three weeks of fair weather will insure a good crop in that parish.

Picking of cotton will be general in about eight days in the central portion of the State.

In the Feliciana parishes, the weather being favorable, worms have appeared and are being poisoned; it is feared that damage may be done to the cotton later in the season by the pest. Washington parish reports cotton in very good condition, no worms, and bright prospects. In the northern portion of the sugar region the weather was very favorable to the rice and sugar, but cane is not receiving enough rain or sunshine to grow as rapidly as it should at this season farther south. The conditions as regard the rice crop are not as favorable as they might be; more sunshine and less of the showery weather would be beneficial. Generally, favorable reports are received as to the present condition of all crops.

Asthma can't be cured? Oh! yes it can. Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar will do it. I know it because it gave me relief. Every winter I was troubled with asthma, especially if the weather was damp, suffering severely. I took about six bottles of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and am completely cured. It is the remedy for asthma. CHAS. HEINKE, 500½ Chippewa Street, New Orleans, La.
Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar is a sure and speedy cure for coughs, colds, catarrh, bronchitis and consumption, and gives immediate relief in cases of croup and whooping-cough. Try it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

CAMP MEETING NOTICE.

The Davis Springs Camp Meeting, on Wesley circuit, will commence on Friday before the second Sunday in September. Preachers invited, and will be provided for.

The clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.
The Episcopal Diocese of New York has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and The Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the Insurance to these worthy people.
A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

East Tennessee, Virginia & Georgia R. R.

Well known as the Great Kennesaw Route, is now making twelve hours quicker time to Washington via New York and eastern points, with Pullman Buffet Sleepers from New Orleans to Washington without change. The mountain resorts of East Tennessee are reached in twenty-four hours, and Virginia resorts in thirty hours. For tickets, sleeping accommodation, circulars, schedule, etc., call at Kennesaw ticket office, 22 Carondelet street.

A MODEL SERMON.

It should be brief: if lengthy, it will steep
Our hearts in apathy, our eyes in sleep,
The dull will yawn, the chapel-lounger doze,
Attention flag, and memory's portals close.

It should be warm: a living altar-coal,
To melt the icy heart and warm the soul;
A sapless, dull harangue, however read,
Will never rouse the soul, nor wake the dead.

It should be simple, practical and clear,
No fine-spun theory to please the ear,
No curious lay to tickle littered pride,
And leave the poor and plain unedified.

It should be manly, just and rational,
Wisely conceived and well expressed withal,
Not stuffed with silly notions, such as stain
A sacred desk and show a muddy brain.

It should be mixed with many an ardent prayer,
To reach the heart and fix and fasten there.
When God and man are mutually addressed,
God grants a blessing—man is truly blessed.

From the West.

MR. EDITOR: I was loath to leave Manitou, with its cool winds fresh from the eternal snow-banks on the mountain-tops, freighted with the perfumes of ten thousand flowers, and the music of the whispering pines and spruce and shivering aspen; for the dusty streets of a city, with all its noisy industries, can never call up the sacred world-wide thought that comes to one here in this Arcadian valley, encircled by an empurpled bulwark of mountains. Nature ever stirs the heart and inspires the mind as nothing else can, and here we have nature frowning in her wildest moods, or singing and laughing in her lightest; but summer tourists, like the "wandering Jew," must obey the unalterable fiat, "Move on!" So one morning we again responded to the "all-aboard" cry of the conductor, and sped onward to Denver. It is only three hours' run from Manitou, over plains which have been recovered from their arid barrenness by irrigation. The ditches meander all through the plains, ready to let loose their life-giving floods as they are bidden, and the waving, full-headed grain fields, the fragrant alfalfa meadows, the profitable orchards and gardens, testify to the richness of the soil where there is water. Denver is rightly called the "Queen City of the Plains." For a city so young, she certainly has a wonderful start in the race for commercial supremacy. In 1858 the first log cabin was built, around which has grown this city of 125,000 people, where every occupation under the sun is open to all who wish employment. She is beautifully situated on the plains at the foot of the Rocky Mountains, and has an elevation of 5,196 feet above the sea level. The climate is dry and fine, and the sunshine and equable temperature woos hither many unfortunates with the sickly hue and hollow cough. The scenery can not be excelled; the citizens of Denver every day have an unbroken view of 300 miles of the Rocky Mountain range, with Long's Peak on the north and Pike's Peak on the south, which do, indeed,

> * * * "Like giants stand,
> To sentinel enchanted land."

For on these verdant plains, thirty years ago, the buffaloes roamed and nipped the grass; and where this teeming city, with its smoking chimneys and roaring bellows, now stands, the Indians hunted at will. In this latter day the skill of man is like enchantment.

> "Through the ages one increasing purpose runs,
> And the thoughts of men are widened with the process of the suns."

We spent many pleasant and profitable days in Denver. Its smelting industries were new and interesting to us; but they are very particular about whom they admit, as they have secret processes of treating refractory ores. They asked if my husband was engaged in that line of business, and when I assured them that he was hunting gold and silver over another route, we were admitted, and enjoyed it very much; but I fear a detailed account would be tiresome. Another peculiarity of Denver is that she has not a single paved street; yet all are as smooth and hard as asphalt.

From this point we went over the D. and R. G. R. R. to Salt Lake City. The route runs through that country which is justly called the "Switzerland of America." Some one has said: "Know most of the rooms of thy native country before thou goest over the threshold thereof." It is good advice. If one loves nature unadorned, let him pierce the heart of the Rocky Mountains, dive into its wild and rugged canons "that slope through darkness up to God," climb its mountain passes,

> "Fronting heaven's splendor, > Strong and full and clear;"

explore the homes of the cliff dwellers on the Columbia river, who were old when the Coliseum was built—and he will feel that there is nothing more to see; or, failing that, he will exclaim:

> "I'll look no more;
> Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight
> Topple down headlong."

And so we sped onward on an observation car through the Royal Gorge. It is seven miles long, and consists of the most awful scenery in the world; black bare cliffs that wall us in, giving us only a little peep of blue at the very top, while the Arkansas river roars and surges at our side the whole length of the canon, in such monstrous fury as to almost drown the puffing of the engine. It is awful! grand! sublime! I am unequal to a further description of it. Then we climbed up Marshall Pass. The summit is eleven thousand feet above the sea, and the train drawn by two engines traverses a tortuous road to attain it; and almost every step of the way the old wagon-trail of the pioneers follows us, which, I think, made it easier for the engineers. "Honor to whom honor is due." So many go over the pass with no thought to those wayfarers and their groaning wagons. How much endurance and patient toil that old roadbed represents! (This digression, I hope, will be pardoned.) Up we toiled, until we were among the clouds where the Continental Divide is reached, where all the streams part, half singing, gliding down the mountain-side until lost in the calm bosom of the broad Pacific; the other plunging, rushing down to mingle its roar with the stormy Atlantic's. On the apex we stand—a chaos of rocks and mountains beneath us—almost touching the skies, breathing the heavenly airs; and, while we gaze awestruck about us, our souls expand, and,

> "Mounting beyond our love and hate,
> We reverently whisper, 'God is great.'"

We begin the descent; one engine going in front of us as an advance courier or safety guard. The Black Canon was the next point of interest. No spot could be more grand. The cliffs rise two thousand feet heavenward. In the midst is Currecanti Needle, towering high above its surroundings like the shaft over a giant's grave. Then the wild splashing of water falls upon our ears, and, turning, we see Chippeta Falls dashing in a foamy torrent, from the top of the dizzy cliffs, into the raging river below.

On Sunday morning we reached Salt Lake City, and at two o'clock we attended services in the Mormon Tabernacle. It is said to be the largest building of the kind in America, and was built by the voluntary contributions of the Mormon people. It is 250 feet long, 150 feet wide, and 80 feet in height. The acoustics are perfect, and by actual experiment I learned that you can hear a whisper or a pin fall from one end of the tabernacle to the other. There were three pulpits, one above the other, for the different degrees of dignitaries. The singing was superb; 150 voices, accompanied by the grand organ, two violins and two cornets. The people joined in the singing, except at the anthem. There were six thousand people in the house. They say that twelve thousand can be comfortably seated there. I heard a rousing sermon, urging the Latter Day Saints to hold fast to the faith, etc. They administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. The elements used were chunks of light bread handed around in silver cake baskets, and water in silver pitchers, and a peculiar kind of dipper going along for convenience. It was the most horrible mockery I ever witnessed. We went through the still unfinished temple. It is built of white granite, and, when completed, will be a magnificent structure. Brigham Young claimed that the site was located by an angel which appeared to him on Ensign Peak. Assembly Hall was interesting to us. Here all their religious rites are administered; such as baptisms, sealings, orders of the priesthood, etc. The paintings on the walls represented the early scenes and traditions of Mormonism: Moroni pointing out to Joseph Smith where the Book of Mormon was concealed in the hill Cumorah; John the Baptist descending from heaven to confer the order of priesthood on Joseph Smith and Oliver Some-thing-or-other; the pioneers crossing the plains, etc.

We drove to Prospect Hill, and had a fine view of the city and valley, with the mountains in the distance, and the silver gleam of the quiet lake, while the river Jordan gayly rippled across the fertile valley. It was superlatively fine. We also drove to the mouth of Emigration Canon, from which the pioneers poured into the valley. "Their story runneth thus:" Brigham Young lay sick upon his bed in his dust-covered wagon, when they emerged from this barren, rocky defile into the valley, well watered and green as emerald. They lifted him that he might feel the soft breezes and breathe the gentle perfumes. He caught sight of the happy valley, and exclaimed: "This is the spot I have seen in my vision;" so down went the tent stakes and up went the "Deseret" motto, and on every hand are evidences of their thrift and industry. ("Deseret" is a word taken from the Book of Mormon, and means "the working bee.")

We went to the Bee House, the Tithing House, the Lion House, Amelia Palace, etc. I also met the beloved Amelia face to face. She is a ladylike person, and claims to be second cousin to Mrs. Cleveland. Her name was Amelia Folsom. Brigham Young's grave is a lonely spot for the last resting-place of so great a prophet. The Mormons placed a seven-ton stone upon his lifeless breast, lest his body should be stolen. Five of his wives are buried in this enclosure; but I wept not for them. I have

> "The laws of marriage chartered in gold
> Upon the blanched tablets of my heart;"

and I had no sympathetic tears for these. Brigham Young left nineteen widows and sixty-three children to mourn his departure; hence imagine the weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth when he was gathered to his fathers.

Salt Lake City claims 30,000 people. She is full of enterprise and industry. Her streets are 132 feet wide, with ten acres in each block. One has elbow room here; but when we tired of it all we ran down to the Great Salt Lake, eighteen miles away, and dipped into her briny depths. I was so surprised to find the lake a bright, beautiful sheet of water, with clear blue waves dancing in transparent clearness, instead of the dull, lifeless pool I'd read of. The water supports no life; and, if it covered the ancient sites of Sodom and Gomorrah, it could not taste or smell more horribly. Go there any hour you will, and there are hundreds of bathers sporting with the waves. No stingarees to fear, no breakers to buffet; just step into the water, and swim you must. The only care to be taken is to keep the water out of eyes and mouth. I was told that five buckets of this water evaporated leaves one bucket of salt.

A trip that was full of interest and novelty was a cruise around the lake to Antelope Island. This island has four springs of fresh water upon it, and is inhabited. It is green and pleasant to look at, and they have selected it as the site for a fine hotel, to be built in the near future.

And now our holiday is over, and we turn our faces homeward, looking regretfully upon

> "This calm enchanted sea—
> The Great Salt Lake enwrapped in mystery;
> And as it slumbers 'neath the setting sun,
> We sigh to think our wond'rous journey done."

Yours truly, SHREVEPORT.

Washington Springs, Va.

MR. EDITOR: You said to me on leaving, "Write us a letter." Well, as it is a blazing morning, the thermometer at fifty-seven degrees, and a fire burning in our room, I think it an opportune time to write.

We came smoothly through from New Orleans in twenty-eight hours. One of the most interesting features of the scenery on our line of travel was the cornfields. Mr. Clay once said in a speech in New Orleans, speaking on behalf of starving Ireland, during the great potato blight: "That Indian corn was one of the gifts of a gracious Providence, for which we had never been half thankful enough." An ever true confession. The corn in these fields, clothed in dark green, proudly plumed and adorned with silken ornaments, stood in serried ranks of countless thousands, and our passage by them seemed like a grand review of a thousand armies. How beautiful the words of the Psalmist: "The valleys also are covered over with corn; they shout for joy, they also sing!" These thousands of fruitful fields remind us of another utterance as sublime as it is beneficent, "Thou openest thine hand and satisfiest the desire of every living thing."

To a man from the Gulf level, how interesting and inspiring is the view of "the little hills rejoicing on every side!" Above these rise the mountains in towering heights, where thousands of hoary winters have sat throned on ice, crowned and robed in habiliments of purest snow. These vast and solid structures, these "everlasting mountains" that have for so many centuries defied the touch of time and change, look like sublime emblems and monuments of the immutability of God.

The "Washington," where we for the nonce are housed, is situated on high ground. "Walker's Mountain," on whose sides the hotel is located, is some 2,850 feet above the level of the sea. The grounds immediately about the hotel are picturesque and bold. The view in front of us is vast, varied and sublime. It would be difficult to find a more magnificent or grandly beautiful scene. The air is cool, crisp and tonic. Most people who come here with the starch and twist taken out of them by the relaxing air of the Gulf level, realize a most cheering and invigorating change. Mineral waters abound of high repute for their curative powers; but for better, I opine, is the aerial ocean of pure, life-giving air forever rolling its healthful waves around and above us. The clouds floating in the vast expanse, towering above and stretching out on all sides, look like islands of silver on the deep blue sky.

The forests are rich in the variety of the trees, and gorgeous in the luxuriance of the countless shades of green. I see near us the ash, cucumber, cedar, chestnut, dogwood, beech, elm, locust, tulip, poplar, various species of pine, osage-orange, maple, and various oaks. The frequent showers have given a vivid gloss to the leaves, surpassing the exquisite varnish of the Japanese. All the scene seems instinct with God, and my reason and my heart exclaim: "Oh, Lord, how manifold are thy works: in wisdom thou hast made them all; and the earth is full of thy riches!" How God has lavished himself in boundless life, and in innumerable forms and colors of beauty!

But somebody will say, "What of the men and women?" Well, those that I have met have been pleasant specimens of the genus homo, from Texas, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, and last; but not least, Virginia. The major part of them Baptists, Presbyterians, Methodists, with a sprinkling of Catholics and Episcopalians. We live like the various passengers on board the ark—in great harmony. We don't believe we are to get to heaven by quarreling. There is one name, neither is there any other by which we may be saved; but the Jerusalem above has four sides, and twelve gates through which believers may enter into rest eternal; and the people of all nations, tribes, and tongues shall sing, Allelula! the Lord God omnipotent reigneth, unto the Lamb who redeemed us, and washed us in his blood, be praise, salvation and dominion.

Our bodies are well sustained on an abundance of edible, blood-making food, served up in the satisfactory old Virginia style. All these favorable conditions promote our amiability, and increase our affability and cheerfulness. The house is full.

There is a Sunday-school on the hotel ground, mainly gotten up and sustained by the zeal and energy of Mrs. Longley, the estimable wife of the host, Mr. Selden Longley. She is also raising funds to rear a church edifice, and the work will be accomplished.

There is no one resident here at this date to preach to us. This is to be deplored. Three doctors, the presiding elder, the stewards, and a host of friends all said: "Don't preach; let nobody persuade you." I am sorry for this, for I love, above all things, to tell "the old, old story of Jesus and his love." Todd says he supposes the Lord let Paul go to prison occasionally to rest him, and save him longer for the church. So I must submit. Love to all that remember Joseph.

J. H. WALKER.

The Wesleyan Conference.

The Wesleyan Methodists began their one hundred and forty-sixth annual session in the town of Sheffield, England. Having been kindly furnished with a ticket for the pastoral session by Rev. Joseph Bush, the president, I was present at the opening exercises and during its sittings for two weeks.

The Conference sits with closed doors; hence all are admitted by ticket. The proceedings commenced with singing that good old Methodist hymn, "And are we yet alive," after which the secretary, Rev. D. J. Waller, read the 103rd Psalm, and Revs. A. McAulay and Wallace McMullen offered prayer. The roll of the Legal Hundred was called by the secretary. Several were absent; two vacancies had been caused by death, and three by superannuation. The first vacancy was filled on the ground of seniority, the second by nomination. There was about eight hundred ministers present. Revs. G. Abbott and W. T. Davison, M. A., were elected to fill the vacancies. The vote for the president was then taken; only ministers of ten years' standing and upwards being entitled to vote. Rev. C. H. Kelly was elected by 230 votes, and Rev. D. J. Waller elected secretary by 357 votes.

The Rev. Joseph Bush then asked the newly-elected president to come to the chair. As Mr. Kelly passed on to the platform, and during the time Mr. Bush spoke the few words of welcome, the whole Conference stood. The ex-president expressed the great pleasure he felt in asking him to take his position. He was sure that he (Mr. Kelly) would find the burdens of the office lightened by the courtesy of the people. He wished him joy in his work, and life-long memories which would cheer him. He then delivered up the keys, seal and pocket Bible, saying, "I have not found the keys and seal of much use, but John Wesley's Bible is of peculiar value, as the president in the multitude of his duties has not much time for reading, and is a man of one book." The newly-elected president said that he regarded the vote of that day as expressing the approval of the Conference of service rendered, especially in two departments. During eleven years of his earlier ministry he had been appointed to labor for the spiritual benefit of the army and navy; and now for fourteen years he had been identified with connectional Sunday-school work. He greatly valued the opportunities afforded by the pastoral session of the Conference. They met as brothers in a common ministry. They made no priestly or sacerdotal pretensions; but they were ministers, and they were closely united. He reminded his brethren that while they did not meet to discuss abstract questions, it behooved them not to be recluses, but to be what in America they called live men, ever keeping their attention to the questions of the hour, and remembering that they had to deal with varying forms of skepticism and immorality and vice. He urged the duty of regarding other churches with the utmost charity, and at the same time keeping alive devotion to Methodism. He thought that, in the providence of God, denominationalism had been a great power for good in this land. Certainly they had reason to be thankful for the wonderful development of Methodism since the death of Wesley, not only in their own country, but throughout the world."

At the open session of the Conference, which takes the shape of a great public meeting, representatives from the Irish, French and South African Conferences were severally introduced, and addressed the meeting. It was good to be there, and it would have done both Bro. Parvin and yourself good to have heard those full-throated Yorkshiremen sing the soul-inspiring hymn:

> "See how great a flame aspires,
> Kindled by a spark of grace;
> Jesus' love the nations fires,
> Sets the kingdoms on a blaze."

The Conference will be in session for three weeks; hence many subjects of vital importance to Methodism will be discussed and acted on.

An appointment of considerable interest was made the other day. The secretary of the Conference was selected to represent the Wesleyan Methodist Conference to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which will be held in May, 1890. This is the first occasion that the Wesleyan Conference has sent a delegate to our church. And I can assure you, you will be delighted that a minister of such high distinction has been chosen for this honorable function as the Rev. D. J. Waller, the connectional secretary.

The next Conference will be held at Bristol, July, 1890.

Sanctification.

It has been understood for years that Rev. Josephus Anderson, D. D., the editor of the Florida Christian Advocate, is a "professor of sanctification." In a recent number of his paper, Dr. Anderson gives some paragraphs on the subject of sanctification which we reproduce for the benefit of our readers:

It is a delusion to consider religion as a mere state of experience. Some imagine that if they ever went through certain emotional changes and felt in a particular way, that constitutes them Christians. One class regard themselves as converted, because they once had such and such feelings; and another class claim to be entirely sanctified, by reason of having once received a precious experience, and some of these profess those blessed changes while they get mad and do other ugly things.

Profession without possession is hypocrisy. A man can not be in a converted state when his heart is a powder magazine that blows up whenever a spark of provocation falls into it; and it is absurd to claim entire sanctification when bitter words and a covetous spirit and selfishness are manifest in the life. Prejudice and neglect to pay debts and bad temper are not the fruits of sanctification.

Great harm is done by some, who go about professing holiness when it is known that they are uncharitable, selfish, jealous of others, backbiters, or will not pay what they owe or make an earnest effort to do it. This sort of thing injures the cause of holiness more than anything else. It disgusts many, has a repelling influence, and reacts dreadfully upon a precious doctrine.

True holiness people are modest, unassuming, gentle, meek, loving, humble, unselfish, ready to serve others, and full of trust in Christ. They are winning in their manner, attractive in their conversation, brightly hopeful in their outlook, tenderly sympathetic and charitable toward others, and timid about putting themselves forward. Such are to be found here and there, living under the shadow of the cross, keeping close to Jesus in daily companionship, and they are God's saints indeed, the truly sanctified.

Conversion and sanctification are just what the words indicate. Conversion means turning altogether from a sinful life to a holy life. The thoughts turn; the controlling power of the soul turns; the will turns; the hands and feet and eyes and tongue turn—all turn to God and Christ and duty. Sanctification means setting apart, consecration, giving self and all we have to God under the influence of the Holy Spirit; and it goes on deeper and further and to greater realization that we are the Lord's until self is lost in God and we no longer see in the light of self-interest, but look at everything in the light of God's glory. And sanctification begins in conversion. Then we set out to be the Lord's. O for grace to be wholly the Lord's!

We commend to our preachers this gem from the Southwestern Methodist:

The love of the truth as taught in the Word, is the support of the preacher. If he study effect, his work will be superficial, his own life superficial, and his zeal as a minister will decay with his youth, or be measured only by the apparent appreciation of his hearers. But one who finds in truth the reward of his toil and the food of his soul, will ever esteem it the highest privilege to be permitted to follow his holy calling. His faith will always be strong and his soul will always be young.

THE FLIGHT OF SHADOWS.

BY HANNAH MORE KOHAUS.

Oh, pilgrim! your back from the sunshine,
Not cast your eyes on the ground,
For thus you will only be noting
The shadows that lie all around;
But upward your brave heart lift toward heaven,
Gaze out o'er the day's rosy light;
While reveling in its warm brightness,
The shadows, low, creep, take flight.

What though overhead clouds are hovering,
Conceal a night's hath odors seem:
The stars are all there in their splendor,
Pierce through the veil veiling between;
We know what God's love sweetness,
The hard, bitter cold may retain.
Yet wait with a sweet calm patience,
It's ripe on the rich sunshine and rain.

How many a trial has proven
A blessing instead of a curse;
And never has anything happened
But possibly might have been worse.
Then heed not misleading appearance,
Give substance less shadows no room;
With eyes firmly fixed on the brightness
You'll never perceive there is gloom.

Jackson—Before and After Taking.

Persons who know Jackson before and after taking the visit of Sam Jones, in June last, agree, with one accord, that the "after taking," compared with the "before taking," is truly wonderful.

"Before taking," it was a common thing to see men of character and standing, in the community violating the Sabbath in various ways. They sometimes were seen going into whisky shops; they often profaned the holy name of God, and their every-day lives were not calculated to lead the young in the path of virtue and rectitude. Their example were not good, but bad, and only bad. A great many of our so-called Christians did not practice Christianity to a very noticeable degree. It is true, it has long been fashionable to attend church on the Sabbath, but very unfashionable to be seen at prayer meeting on Wednesday night. In fact, the "crowd" did not attend prayer meeting at all, but were constant attendants at the theatres and ball-rooms. And but few, if any, of these so-called Christians were in favor of prohibition, but were such strong advocates of "personal liberty" that their teaching, influence and example now cause our necks to be writhing under the iron heel of the saloon. Thirty-five Christians (?) voted for whisky last February, thereby turning the scales against us; and this Jackson must hang her head in shame, and writhe in agony under this blighting curse for the next two years. God save the boys!—they are in danger.

But Sam Jones came: and his foot-prints are left behind. Men who neglected to keep the Sabbath—men who visited whisky shops, and who profaned God's holy name, now do so no more. They now attend upon Sunday morning and Sunday night preaching. They are now seen crowding to the prayer meetings on Wednesday night, and they associate with the better classes and those who are trying to lead Christian lives. In our prayer meeting "before taking" we had an attendance that could almost be counted on the fingers; now we have more than two hundred every Wednesday night. Old backsliders, who have spent all their earnings in riotous living around whisky shops for years and years, living on husks, have returned, like the prodigal son, to their Father's house, and every service finds them in the temple of God, clothed, and their right minds. On last Sabbath I saw among those at the communion table an ex-barroom tender. He looked out of place, but he has the prayers and sympathies of the people of God, and we hope to make a man out of him yet. Capt. W. W. Stone, the able auditor of public accounts, with all of his assistants, are members of some one of the Christian Churches, and not one of them is ever seen in a whisky shop. The governor, secretary of State, treasurer and attorney general, together with the commissioner of immigration, and nearly all of their employees, are members of the church, and do not visit places of this character. Among the prominent men in Jackson, those who visit whisky shops are few and far between: and when we have another prohibition election, nearly two years hence, the doom of the open saloon will be sealed—it will be a thing of the past. At Raymond, in the Second District of Hinds county (where whisky is not sold, because of inability to get up a petition to do so at the term of the circuit court in July last) the court was in session but three days, and there was not a single case, either civil or criminal, tried—all owing to the absence of the whisky shop. Is it not wonderful?

A line is fast being drawn between those who are trying to heed the advice of Sam Jones and be Christians, and those who follow on the other road. We have persons here, some in prominent positions, who "before taking" declared that they would rather take their families to a circus or an Indian dance than to hear the sacrilegious rantings of Sam Jones. Now these same persons are his warmest admirers and most devout followers, and are trying to be Christians.

All of our churches have first-class pastors, who know their duties and perform them, too. Their membership has largely increased within the last sixty days, and we feel safe in asserting that there never has been a time when the future of Jackson Christianity was so bright as now. Our own Dr. Black is an able preacher, a faithful pastor, and much beloved by his congregation. He is doing his whole duty, and his labors are bearing good fruit. His sermon last night, from the text, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian," was perfectly grand, and well received by his large congregation.

But, lest I digress too far from the subject, "Jackson—Before and After Taking," and also fearing that you will tire out, I close.

AITCH. AITCH. AITCH.

JACKSON, Mississippi.

Louisiana Mission Fields.

I would say, The gospel ought to be preached to them. Is this not done? I answer, Only to a very limited extent. Part of Louisiana—and, in fact, all of it east of the Mississippi river, except the cities of Baton Rouge and New Orleans—belongs to the Mississippi Conference. The balance belongs to Louisiana Conference; hence the only way to occupy this important field will be for the two Conferences to unite their forces and put a live man in the field to work it up and organize. Let the man be one whose whole being is fired with love and zeal for the Master's cause, irrespective of denominational lines—one who, though a full-blooded Methodist from the ground up, and who proposes to die a Methodist till he dies;" still one, whose only and burning desire is, to spend and be spent in the service of the Master; one who will throw himself into and amongst the people, and who has the heart to submit to a great many privations and inconveniences for the sake of doing good; and it would not be a great while ere there would be a Methodist Church organized in every neighborhood. The doctrines of the Methodist Church are so much in accord with the Word of God that we could receive members from any and all other churches without forcing them to renounce any part of their creed. Even Catholics, who had been converted to Christ, we believe could be received into the Methodist Church without being compelled to abrogate any part of their creed. What we are after is, to get Christ in the heart—the hope of glory; and a man can believe in the virtue of the confessional, mass, purgatory, intercession of saints (even the infallibility of the Pope, if it does him any good), or even he may believe in the doctrine of election, or the final perseverance of the saints, or he may believe that immersion alone is baptism and go as deep in the water as he pleases, if it does him any good; and still he may belong to the Methodist Church without stultifying his own conscience or doing the church any harm.

Thank God for a church whose creed is as broad as the moral universe, as high as heaven and as deep as hell; and takes in the whole fallen race of man on this condition only—that they have a "desire to flee from the wrath to come, and be saved from their sins." This is my plan: There are a few Protestants of every name scattered about, with which a nucleus can be formed, all, or most, of whom would be glad to get a minister to preach among them. This I know to be true. Let a man be found who will suit the work, and who will be suited by the work, and let him act as he thinks best, with an implicit trust in God's promise; and I would venture the assertion that in less than five years there would not be room for one of the emissaries of Rome outside of the large towns and cities. Then we could make a move on them from all round. As to the question of support, let the good Christians of these two Conferences save up only one-half of their tobacco, pipe and snuff money (I say "snuff," as that takes in the sisters), and I will guarantee a good support for, at least, two such men. Then let the powers that be say he shall have a support, and the man is ready to go. But as there might be a few of the good brethren and sisters who would not consent to a little self-denial in order that their dying fellow-men might be saved, we will supplement the poor man's salary by what could be raised among his congregations, and also by giving him the permission to sell our literature for our Publishing House at Nashville.

There are thousands of people who never heard a Methodist sermon, or read a Methodist paper or book, who will be astonished to find out who we are. The plan, pursued as indicated, will save thousands of dying men and women in this State who are now perishing for the want of the gospel. God grant it success! Is my prayer.

LOCAL ITINERANT.

Colportage.

I am impressed with the belief that this subject is not receiving either the amount or the kind of attention that it deserves. We have no colportage system, and, consequently, we are doing little or nothing in this line of evangelical industry. I am persuaded there are among us a considerable number of old men and young men who would engage in this business if they had suitable encouragement, and, secondly, that such encouragement would result favorably to both the church and the Publishing House.

It is useless to talk about the preachers selling books. They are not going to do it: nor are they going to attend to the newspaper agency that the Advocates require. Their pastoral duties fill their hands. None of the Advocates have half the circulation they would have if they had a more efficient agency in the field. By this I mean merely that the preacher-agency can be greatly augmented by an efficient colportage system.

What is now called colportage is nothing more than this: that anyone who may choose to do so may buy books of the Publishing House at the regular wholesale prices, and sell them again if he chooses to do so. This offers no inducement to persons to engage in the colportage business, and, consequently, nobody does so, except here and there one; whereas it is believed that special encouragement can be given to colporteurs that will also benefit the House. I see no better way than the following:

Let the Book Agent set apart a certain line of books, pamphlets and tracts most suitable to this particular trade of the cheaper sort (say a hundred or so, to begin with), and, as the enterprise may seem to warrant, let this list be added to from time to time. It would seem best to let them be designated on the first page of cover, by suitable print, so that they will be readily distinguished. And this line of literature to be sold to colporteurs at cost.

This would probably be better than to make a general deduction on all books, for then anyone might claim to be a colporteur, and it would in the end amount to little else than a general reduction of profits. But this special list can be enlarged or restricted so as not to interfere with the general catalogue. Of course, the colporteur will also handle these books, as he may contract with the Agent.

For this advantage over other purchasers the colporteur will be required to do any agency for the House that may be required, in the way of distributing catalogues and other advertisements, collecting accounts, etc. The bare fact of a wide sale of his own cheap literature would give the business of the House a wider advertisement than it now has. He will also get orders for books and do newspaper agency at very cheap rates.

This advantage will bring colporteurs into the field; and a little army of colporteurs can not fail in a short time to increase the sale of books to double the present line of trade. The House needs advertisement, and if anyone can suggest a better or cheaper mode than this, or a better method of distributing religious literature in the back regions of either town or country, it is high time he should bring it forward. I would like to assist him in making it favorably known. Most assuredly we ought to be doing something in this line. Can't our business men give us some counsel?

In the last Nashville Advocate a Memphis writer makes some sound and very important remarks on the Louisiana Lottery, and says: "Let the Book Editor and Book Agent provide sound and strong literature in popular form, and so assist in the extermination of a plague which spreads over the land."

That is all very well; but this strong literature to do any good needs something besides being provided. The great question is not the providing, but the circulation. Will this Memphis writer tell us how these tracts are to be distributed over the country? We ought to circulate millions of tracts on these three things—Lottery, Whisky and Popery. We are in position to lead in these great matters. No other church is so well prepared for this. With our facilities we can stir public sentiment on these and kindred subjects as it has not been stirred before. But it needs the performance of the doing of it.

Henington Camp Meeting.

The eighteenth annual camp meeting of Henington Camp Ground closed on the fourteenth instant. There has been no report from this camp ground, through your columns, for the last three years; no doubt, from the fact that not much was seemingly accomplished during that time—at least, no great visible results were accomplished. Our last, however, we rejoice to report, was a glorious victory; one of the best, if not the best, we have ever had. During the time of preparation for this camp meeting, it was anything but flattering, and many were predicting we were on the eve of a final and complete defeat. It seemed we were going to have very few ministers, and not many tenters. There were some, however, praying God to give us a good and refreshing season. Bros. W. B. Lewis; H. R. Singleton and L. M. Barton were with us in nearly every meeting of the Executive Committee, and, after writing to many ministers, none promised positively they would be with us except Prof. George R. Stuart, of Centenary Female College, Tenn., and Bro. T. B. Holloman, of our own Conference. The time arrived, the eighth instant, to begin with those who had promised to be with us promptly on hand, and the brethren mentioned who had aided us in making preparation for the meeting, with more tenters than we expected. We knew little of Bro. Stuart more than Rev. Sam Jones had said of him: that he was a better preacher than himself, and that when he heard Bro. Stuart preach, he did not feel himself fit to say grace. We make no comparison between them, but would say this: the first sermon Bro. Stuart preached on the camp ground, we were satisfied we had the right man in the right place; that we had a preacher, a polished scholar, an orator, a man imbued with the Holy Spirit, of deep consecration, with powers of persuasion and earnestness almost irresistible; not afraid to preach the gospel and make its application. Other brethren—Watkins, Bell, Nicolson—also arrived during the meeting, and did good service.

Rev. Sam Jones had preached several weeks ago at Jackson and Wesson, on both sides of us, many having heard him. He had left a deep impression on some of our worst sinners, and also on many of the church—both classes. Many of them were on the ground talking religion. Paul had planted; it needed an Apollos to water, and God would give the increase. The harvest was ripe for the sickle. Bro. Stuart watered and applied the sickle. We are gathering up the sheaves. Glorious results: rich, ripe fruit; conversions and happy Christians. Bro. Stuart preached twice a day most of the time, and, not in an exceptional case, all his sermons were of the best, imbued with the Holy Spirit, and attended with results. The meeting grew in interest from the beginning to the close. "There was not an hour or day with its needed time." We have not seen a member of the church of any denomination who has not expressed himself as having been strengthened and refreshed. The last night was the climax of all meetings we ever saw. Oh, what a time of rejoicing, though not of a loud, boisterous demonstration; yet four or five hundred giving their hands quietly to Bro. Stuart in solemn pledge that they intended to live a better and holier life, and do more for the cause of God! Time will never be able to estimate the glorious results. We can say, of a truth, in our own hearts, Hallelujah! There were over fifty conversions known, forty-six accessions, and since the close we have heard of more conversions, of more who are going to unite with the church, and a number of family altars being erected. The day after closing two young men's prayer meetings were organized. We are under many obligations to Miss Minnie Van Hook, of Jackson, and Bro. Enoch Carruth, and many others, for the good, timely music during the meeting. We have never had better at any camp meeting.

To another point: There have been several camp meetings this year, being held at the same time. Many there are who would like to attend more than one of these. The time of beginning Henington Camp Meeting was established sixteen years ago. That is, on the Thursday before the full moon of August each year. We hope the brethren of other camp meetings will waive the right of that time to ours, as we first adopted it.

From the Work.

NESHOBA CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I closed last night at Union one of the best meetings, in many respects, that this part of the country has ever known. The meeting lasted eight days with the following results: Forty accessions, and thirty of them by profession of faith, and the others by letter. The exact results can not be known. Some have already joined other churches, and more to follow. The power of God came down with mighty power to the salvation of nearly the entire congregation: only a few that failed to accept Jesus as their personal Savior, and these were powerfully wrought upon by the Holy Spirit, and promised to continue seeking until they found peace to their souls. Among the number that joined the church were some very aged persons. What a scene to see the small youth, the middle-aged and the old all stand up in one class and take upon them the vows of the church! Eternity alone can tell the results of this meeting.

This is the fifth meeting that we have held on this circuit this year, resulting in a hundred and fifteen accessions, and over a hundred conversions. The exact number of conversions is not known, but the number has reached somewhere between 125 and 150: backsliders reclaimed, the church wonderfully built up, old difficulties settled, and many family altars erected. We have been moving up all along the line. We expect to bring up a full report at Conference, if not ahead our all the assessments ordered by the Conference. All my ministerial help has come from the local preachers. Thank God for local preachers that will work any and everywhere! To God be all the glory. Brethren, pray for us.

JAS. G. CAMMACK, P. C.

HAZLEHURST, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Our church is in a growing and prosperous condition at this place. Every assessment has been paid in full for the past three years. The indications are that we will raise two or three thousand dollars above all regular assessments. This is the fourth year of my pastorate here.

Our fifteen-hundred-dollar parsonage is nearly completed. It is built on a late plan, is located in the center of the town, and will be a model preacher's home.

Our official members are successful business men, and carry their practical business energy into their church work.

God is blessing us spiritually. We have not yet held our annual protracted meeting; yet members are being received monthly and almost weekly.

The service of yesterday will long be held in grateful remembrance by the large congregation present, on account of the gracious time of refreshing had from the presence of the Lord. Two mature men united with the church, one of whom is the head of a family of six or seven.

My congregation has unanimously voted me a month's vacation. This opportunity for rest and change has come none too soon, and I am sincerely thankful to our people for their kindness.

The presiding elder's and preacher's salaries are paid in full to date. May God continue to bless these good people!

I shall leave on this evening's train, to be absent for several weeks.

BOOKS.

CELESTIAL SCENES. By Franz Ludwig Nagler. Part First. Printed for the author by Cranston & Stowe, Cincinnati. Price, 90 cents.

This author has given a readable little book of verse. His imagination is quite fervid, and his descriptive powers good. He has produced some pretty pictures to look upon and think about; but he has the hobby of compound words. These, we believe, have gone out of fashion with the best writers.

A HIGHER HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES, FOR SCHOOLS AND ACADEMIES. By Henry E. Chambers. F. F. Hansell & Bro., New Orleans.

This is a text-book gotten up by a school-man of New Orleans. The author, we believe, is a native of this city. It is printed by L. Graham & Son, electrotyped by T. A. Slattery & Bro., and published by F. F. Hansell & Bro.—all of this city. It is, then, a New Orleans book out-and-out; and in its material make-up will not suffer by comparison with the school books issued by the great house of A. S. Barnes & Co. The illustrations and maps, of which there are many, are especially good, and reflect great credit upon the publishers. The author has been happy in his arrangement of chapters, being careful that they should not be too long. Questions accompany each chapter; topical and review outlines are frequently introduced to aid the memory of the pupil, and blackboard forms showing how the analysis of any period may be made. There are also "preparatory notes" and "parallel readings," which are of great value. The author divides the history into five periods; The Period of Discovery, Colonization, Colonial Development, Revolution, and Independence. It is brought down to the present time. Many side notes are introduced, which contain matters of interest to all students of history. We think the author has done a good work for the schools of the present in producing this book.

INFIDELITY REFITTED BY INFIDELS. By Samuel P. Sprecher, D. D. 12 mo, 92 pp., paper, 25 cents. New York: Funk & Wagnalls.

As implied in the title, the object of this treatise is to array infidels against each other, and, in their fruitless effort to demolish Christianity, observe how they demolish themselves. Dr. Sprecher takes up the old theories of Imposture, Self-deception, Rationalism, Myth and Legend, and shows how they were successively exploded by skeptics who had some fancied improvement to offer. He then shows that modern infidelity, as represented by Robert Elsmere, is an unsatisfactory relush of an old attempt to give Christ a good character, while denying his divine nature, his miraculous power, and his resurrection-life. Finally, he gathers some glowing infidel testimony in commendation of the person of Jesus and the benefit of his religion, and shows that this admitted fact is the Gibraltar of Christian evidences.

HISTORY OF THE REVISIONS OF THE DISCIPLINE OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH. By P. A. Peterson, D. D. Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Nashville, Tenn. Price, 25 cts.

Dr. Peterson has done a good work for the church in compiling this book. It is really what its name implies—a history of the revisions of our book of Discipline. It gives the date of every revision, and the words in which the revision is made, and what the original was. It is really a history of the growth of the Discipline, showing how it grew, and in what direction. The Appendix contains many valuable items of information, and the Index is invaluable. This little book will be an important part of a presiding elder's equipment, and we do not see how a preacher in charge can well do without it; and it will be a book of great interest to the thousands of our thoughtful laymen.

PERIODICALS.

—THE QUIVER, for September. Most of us know something about Chinese men and women, but few of us know anything about Chinese girls. We can learn a good deal, however, from an article on that subject which opens The Quiver, for September. The author of How To Be Happy, Though Married, has a paper in this number on Right and Wrong Ambition, which is followed by What Is Myrrh?—a question that is answered by the author of the article. The Art of Self-Defense, which follows, does not relate to the manly (?) art, but to that of Christians. Home Nursing is the title of a valuable little paper, and is followed by a sketch, with pen and pencil, of A Quaker Mission in Madagascar. Children of Light is a paper of Sunday reading especially; Living Peaceably is not of quite so theological a nature; nor is A Glimpse of Some Sightless Folk of that class at all. Slaughters in Italy, by Prof. W. G. Blaikie, is the fifth chapter in the new book of martyrs. Stories and poems, and a big bundle of "short arrows" bring the number to a close. Cassell & Co., fifteen cents a number; $1 50 a year, in advance.

—PROCEEDINGS OF 28TH INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION OF YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Published by the International Committee, New York. Price, twenty-five cents. This is an interesting document, showing the progress made by the young men of the country in pushing forward the Master's kingdom.

—FASHION AND FANCY, for September, is on our table. The contents are varied, but the general trend is in accord with the name of the magazine. St. Louis, Mo.: 610 Olive street. Price, $3.

Three Notable Things.

MISSIONARY UNBELIEF.

The Christian that does not believe in foreign missions does not believe in the great commission. Repeat it and see.

The Christian that does not believe in foreign missions does not believe in the Apostles' Creed. Repeat it and see.

The Christian that does not believe in foreign missions does not believe in the Lord's Prayer. Repeat it and see.

The Christian that does not believe in foreign missions does not believe in the doxology in long meter. Repeat it and see.

The Christian that does not believe in foreign missions in this generation believes that three hundred more millions of the heathen world ought to die before we try to tell them of Jesus Christ.

How long is this unbelief to go on? How many more millions must die before the Church of God is ready? "If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth."

MISSIONARY LOGIC.

The Premise. There is no distinction between Jew and Greek. For the same Lord is Lord of all. And is rich unto all that call upon him.

The Promise. Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.

The Irresistible Sequence. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed?

How shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard?

How shall they hear without a preacher?

How shall they preach except they be sent?

MISSIONARY SUCCESS.

It is fixed. "I will declare the decree."

It is definite. "I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance."

It is ever expanding. The waters of prophetic vision: "to the ankles," "to the knees," "to the loins," "waters to swim in," that "can not be passed over."

It is to be universal. Go and "disciple all the nations." A whole world full of believing sons and daughters.

It is irresistible. "All power is given unto me in heaven and on earth. Go ye therefore."

It is with Christ's presence. "Lo, I am with you all the days."

It is inspiring. When duty's brow is knit with hope the feet and heart like wings.—Dr. Herrick Johnson, in The Mission Field.

The Telugu (India) Mission is spoken of as having a success that is not only marvelous, but as scarce having a parallel even among the wonderful successes that are attending missionary work in such countries as Japan, South Sea Islands, Madagascar, etc. Concerning it the Baptist Missionary says:

From the least interesting and encouraging, it had advanced, in less than 25 years, to the most marvelously successful mission on the face of the earth. The history of Christianity in all ages and countries shows nothing which surpasses the later years of the mission in spontaneous extension, in rapidity of progress, in genuineness of conversions, in stability of results, or in promise for the future. The missionary marvels of the South Sea Islands can not parallel it. Only in the tragic and romantic annals of Madagascar can we find anything to compare with it, and in the missions of to-day, when the amount of efforts put forth, and the reality of personal experience is taken into consideration, not even the wonderful progress of Christianity in Japan can be placed beside it.

NOTES.

"Some ten years ago," says the Missionary Review, "Mr. Gladstone translated into beautiful Italian the hymn, Rock of Ages. This suggested to Signor Enggero Bonghi, the Gladstone of the Italian Parliament, the idea of using his pen in diffusing and defending the truth. Among other productions he has written Vita di Gesu, The Life of Christ, a work based on the Evangelists, of warm Christian spirit, and heartily endorsed by those who have examined it as far as published. Each number consists of eight superbly printed pages, costing but two cents. On the Corso, the most fashionable street of Rome, are seen in large words, 'Vita di Gesu, Vita di Gesu.' Near by stands a splendid illustration from the book, Christ talking with the woman of Samaria. It is worth while stating that there will be seventy parts, containing in all 86 fine illustrations by the best artists in the kingdom. Such an occurrence has never before taken place in Italy. Mr. Bonghi appears daily in the Senate, and loses nothing of his influence by having written this scholarly and manly life of Christ. The parts, as they come from the press, are eagerly sought for, and read with avidity by thousands who are now waiting for the first time history of the Holy Child."

The Moravians have one foreign missionary for every fifty communicants at home, and have two and a half times as many souls under care of their missions as are in their home churches.

If the other denominations in the United States gave as much per capita for foreign missions as the Moravians do, they would give $37,500,000 instead of $3,000,000 annually.

Sunday-School Lesson.

(Hurlburt and Simpson's Lesson Commentary, Phillips & Hunt, New York.)

LESSON X.—September 8.

DAVID AND JONATHAN.

1 Sam. xx, 1-13.

GOLDEN TEXT.—There is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.—Prov. xviii, 24.

TIME.—B. C. 1062.

PLACE.—Naioth (Habitations). Clustered huts is strictly the meaning.

1. David fled—In fear of Saul. While Saul was under the constraining influence of the spirit of prophecy, David escaped from Naioth, and, probably by Samuel's advice, returned to Saul's court to commune with Jonathan. What have I done ... mine iniquity ... my sin—David's threefold question as to his fault is a threefold denial of it, since it involves as many assertions of his innocence.

2. He will show it me—Literally, uncover my ear—tell it in a whisper, confidentially. Figure borrowed from lifting up of the turban to tell a secret. It is not so—Jonathan's unwillingness to believe evil of his father is one of the many admirable traits in his character.

3. David sware, moreover—Rather, yet again. He met Jonathan's denial by repeating his statement and confirming it with an oath. Lest he be grieved—Note admirable delicacy of David's reply to this.... To avoid giving pain to Jonathan he avoids implying or expressing that his father had any mistrust of him, and gives it quite another turn, as if Saul concealed his designs upon David from his son only to spare his feelings. But a step—Whatever steps I take may land me there.

4. Then said Jonathan—Wonderful friendship! By helping David he would lose his crown. Whatsoever—Knowing the character of David he could safely promise.

5. New moon—This request implies that Saul gave a feast at the new moon, and, therefore, that the new moon was not merely a religious festival, according to the law, but that it was kept as a civil festival also, and in the latter character for two days; as we may infer both from the fact that David reckoned to the third evening, that is, the evening of the third day from the day then present, and, therefore, proposed to hide himself on the new moon's day and the day following, and also still more clearly from verses 12, 27 and 34, when Saul is said to have expected David at table on the day after the new moon. I should not fail to sit—That is, as a matter of course, according to custom, he would be expected by Saul to take part in the meal.

6. Then say—We see from these words that David did not look upon prevarication as a sin. Bethlehem—This ground of excuse shows that families and households were accustomed to keep united sacrificial feasts once a year.... At this time, when the central sanctuary had fallen into disuse, they were held in different places, wherever there were altars of Jehovah—as, for example, at Bethlehem.

8. Thou hast brought thy servant—This indicates the initiative, which in the concluding of the covenant was on the side of Jonathan, xviii, 1-3.

9. Far be it from thee—Here the use of the pronoun—(from thee) rather indicates the meaning to be, Far be it from thee to think of such a thing as that I should either kill thee or betray thee to my father. If I knew certainly—He does not like to believe ill of his father.

10. Who shall tell me? or what if—The sense is "no one will tell me," namely, the evil determined by Saul. This question, with its negative sense, is the answer spoken with excited feeling, to Jonathan's word, "I will tell thee the evil determined on," and the tender, thoughtful form in which he clothes the decided, "Thou canst not tell me." The second question refers to Saul's anger (verse 7), whence Jonathan's purposed learning that Saul's evil plan against David was completed.

11. Come, and let us go out into the field—Jonathan takes David into the field—that is, into some sequestered wady, at some distance from the town, where they would be sure to enjoy complete solitude; and there they enter into a solemn covenant. There to fix some signal by which David might learn the result of Jonathan's interview with his father.

12. O Lord God of Israel—Rather, the Lord God of Israel is witness, or knows that. About to-morrow any time, or the third day—Render—at this time to-morrow, or the day after.

13. And the Lord be with thee, as he hath been with my father—In this wish there is expressed the presentiment that David would one day occupy that place in Israel which Saul occupied then—that is, the throne.

The Protestant Church of Spain numbers at present 112 chapels and school-houses, 111 parochial schools with 61 male and 78 female teachers, 3,515 boys and 2,095 girls. There are 80 Sunday-schools with 183 helpers, and 3,231 scholars. The churches are ministered unto by 56 pastors and 35 evangelists; the number of regular attendants of divine service is 9,164; of communicants, 3,412. Pastor F. Fliedner reports steady progress on all sides.

Truth is as impossible to be soiled by any outward touch as the sunbeam.—Milton.

RALEIGH, N. C., Feb. 20th, 1888.

Dr. A. T. SHALLENBERGER, Rochester, Pa.

Dear Sir: I wish to say a word in behalf of your wonderful Chill and Fever Pills. Some months ago a friend, who knew that my wife had been afflicted for months, sent me a package of your pills. I gave them to her and they cured her at once. A neighbor, Mr. Perry, had suffered with chills for more than a year, and had taken Quinine until his hearing was greatly injured. Seeing the cure wrought in my wife's case, he procured a bottle of pills and was speedily restored to perfect health. I feel that this is due to you.

Very truly, REV. J. D. DAVIS.

Temperance.

A Mother's Influence.

In a railway car a man about sixty years old came to sit beside me. He had heard me lecture the evening before on temperance. "I am master of a ship," said he, "sailing out of New York, and have just returned from my fifteenth voyage across the Atlantic. About thirty years ago I was a sot, shipped while dead drunk, and was carried on board like a log. When I came to, the captain asked me, 'Do you remember your mother?' I told him she died before I could remember. 'Well,' said he, 'I am a Vermont man. When I was young I was crazy to go to sea. At last my mother consented. I should seek my fortune. 'My boy,' she said, 'I don't know anything about ships, and I never saw the sea, but they tell me they make thousands of drunkards. Now promise me you'll never drink a drop of liquor.' He said: 'I laid my hand in hers and promised, as I looked into her eyes for the last time. She died soon after. I've been on every sea, seen the worst kind of life and men—they laughed at me as a milksop, and wanted to know if I was a coward. But when they offered me liquor, I saw my mother's pleading face, and I never drank a drop. It has been my sheet-anchor and I owe it all to that. Would you like to take that pledge?' said he." My companion took it, and he added, "It has saved me. I have a fine ship, wife and children at home, and I have helped others."

That earnest mother saved two men to virtue and usefulness; how many more, he who sees all can alone tell.—Selected.

NOTES.

Miss Adiri Gordon, author of "Marching Songs for Young Crusaders," which has been so popular in Loyal Temperance Legion work, is now preparing a song book for the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union. It is promised for the national convention in November.

Mrs. L. A. Ford, a leading Wisconsin white ribboner, received high and well-deserved honor at the Monona Lake Chautauqua assembly. On Recognition day, at the hands of Mr. Joseph Cook, with the accompaniment of enthusiastic applause and the waving of hundreds of handkerchiefs, she received a diploma with seventeen seals, the largest number ever won by a western member of the Circle.

Mrs. Josephine R. Nichols, who has charge of the W. C. T. U. exhibit at the Paris Exposition, gave an address on Social Purity, at the Paris Women's Congress. It was said that her brave and earnest explanation of the work of the W. C. T. U. in this urgent line of reform had much to do with the success of the resolution, passed unanimously by this congress, asking for the repeal of the law legalizing prostitution.

A temperance society of more than one hundred and fifty members was recently organized among the men in the military prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, by Mrs. Julia A. Chase, an active worker among soldiers and sailors, who on this occasion delivered an address of such power that seventy-five men who had never signed the pledge before unhesitatingly gave their names and affirmed their purpose to lead sober lives.

Alfred H. Love, president of the Universal Peace Union, urges the W. C. T. U. to establish a national annual "Mothers' Peace Day," and admirably says in connection with this suggestion: "Ours is a work of *pro*volution, for I am not satisfied with revolution, rolling backward, nor with evolution, a rolling out of; I must coin a word that means rolling forward and upward." To help hasten this great *pro*volution of universal reform the "Mothers' Peace Day" is warmly advocated.

A Mohammedan guide, while conducting a party of white and blue ribboners up the Egyptian pyramids, said: "You climb well for English. English people drink wine; Mohammedans not drink; they are stronger." One of the ladies, pointing to her white ribbon and her husband's blue one, said: "All English people do not drink wine. We never touch it. You watch, and whenever you see this ribbon you will know that those who wear it are like you—they do not take wine." The guide was delighted, and is now on the lookout for other good climbers who wear temperance badges.

Faith evermore overlooks the difficulty of the way, and bends her eyes only to the end.—Bishop Hall.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

Rev. C. W. CARTER, D. D., Editor.

CORRESPONDING EDITORS:
REV. J. D. CAMERON, D. D.
REV. R. CARRADINE, D. D.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT, D. D.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 29, 1889.

Briefs.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean, in a recent article, maintains that the "South still remains poor, ignorant and retrogressive."

Some people persist in being troubled to find out how God exists and what is his essential character; but the existence of electricity, and what it is, gives them no trouble at all!

A presiding elder of inquiring turn of mind, in holding a Quarterly Conference, found out that out of thirteen stewards on the work three were in the habit of daily private prayer! Who put that unpraying ten as leaders in church affairs?

Since the war the twelve Southern States have expended $125,000,000 on their public schools. They have expended for the education of their colored population about $40,000,000; more than twice as much as has been expended for this cause from any and all other sources. So says President Candler, of Emory College, Ga.

A brother in the Wesleyan Conference, when the "Conversation on the Work of God" was going on, spoke a truth that we have sought to emphasize in these columns. He said that one principle he had endeavored to advocate was, that every saved man must save another man—must bring others to the fount of regeneration.

The Methodist Times, in reporting President Kelly's Conference sermon, has this: "The president, who conducted the whole of the service, took for his text the words of St. Paul to Jude: 'Ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints.' The opening sentence is this: 'The Epistle to Jude (he said) was written because of the pressing circumstances of the time in which St. Paul wrote.' That reminds us of some 'reporting' of sermons that is sometimes done in our city! St. Paul's Epistle to Jude! Well! well!

Of the Sullivan trial and conviction the Standard (Baptist), of Chicago, says:

The really creditable thing in this whole business is the persistency of Gov. Lowry in following up the participants in the brutal scene at Richburg. It is gratifying to know that there is one governor of a State in this "great country" who in a case of this kind "means business."

Since the above was written intelligence is received that Sullivan was found guilty, and is sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment—the first time, so far as we know, that either in this country or any other anything like punishment has been proposed for the repeated violations of law in this particular.

The Tokio Advocate says of a religious movement in which the Methodist Churches of the world are deeply interested:

The Methodist Church in Japan has formulated a "Basis of Union," and on Saturday, June 15, presented the same to a called meeting at Aoyama of the representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The general opinion is, that it will be adopted, with, perhaps, some modification at one or two points. The name of the proposed new church in Japanese will, doubtless, be "Nippon Mesojisuto Kyo-kwai." Dr. Sutherland's address before the union meeting was remarkably frank and clear. He has, under God, done much toward solving the difficult "Union Question." To him the "Shinri no Kagami" offers most cordial welcome to these shores.

(We don't understand the reference to our church.—ED.)

A Remarkable Document.

The most remarkable paper we have seen in many a day is the final report made by the grand jury of this parish to Judge Baker of the Criminal District Court. It seems to be a document addressed to the Legislature. It arraigns as "superannuated" the very foundations of our jurisprudence and civilization. The grand jury system is "wholly at variance with the great American idea of fair-play, and should be thoroughly overhauled and put on a common-sense basis, or summarily abolished;" "the dignity and intelligence of the Criminal District Courts" are "insulted by too much trial by petit juries;" "the workings of the Bureau of Jury Commissioners is a nuisance, and ought to be abolished;" "the Sunday Law is the grandest farce of the age, and as it can not be equitably enforced, it should be promptly abolished;" "gambling is an irrepressible vice, and will endure as long as the human race does, and can not be suppressed"—therefore, "bridle it with the strictest police surveillance, and saddle it with the heaviest tax it can possibly stand;" a law should be passed making prize-fighting and miscegenation a felony; the law for the suppression of obscene literature should be "re-enacted and made so severe as to bring this species of villiany to a summary end;" the law concerning concealed weapons "should be made stringent enough to suppress it or be abrogated, and every man allowed to arm as he pleases;" "street processions should not be allowed, except under permit from the mayor, and under no circumstances should they be allowed to obstruct street cars." There is a reference to the Parish Prison as an "old rattle-trap which is a disgrace to civilization, and ought to be abandoned." There is a commendation of the House of the Good Shepherd, Boys' House of Refuge, Shakespeare Alms House, and the Charity Hospital.

Altogether, this is a most extraordinary document! In reading the sweeping charges against the jury system we could but wonder if this grand jury knew anything about the history of that system. While under our working it may be defective, yet it stands as the monument of the victory of civil liberty over the tryanny of aristocracy, and is our only hope in the fight against any and every monopoly. We think not many people will agree with our grand jury that the Sunday Law is "the grandest farce of the age." It has brought Louisiana into line with every State in the Union; and if it is not enforced, that is no fault of the statute. No law of man is self-enforcing. If the police are inefficient, why complain at the law? Lay the blame where it belongs. Excepting these unnecessary and unwise recommendations in regard to juries and the Sunday Law and gambling, we think the suggestions of the grand jury should have the attention of our lawmakers.

Faith vs. Authority.

BY F. M. GRACE, D. D.

"It makes no difference whether the appeal is to numbers or to one. The faith that stands on authority is not faith. The reliance on authority measures the decline of religion, the withdrawal of the soul."

These noble words of Emerson were never spoken more appropriately than now. Men are now in a sort of revolt against authority, and the friends of truth think to bring them back by pronouncing the shibboleth of the ancient faith rather than by inspiring them with a new faith and trust in the truth itself. They say if we can have it put upon record that so and so is the truth, men will then believe it. But the nature of man is such (his true nature) that he can not accept a thing which he does not believe; and the more external authority is brought to bear upon his will, the more does he revolt against it.

Every age, and every man in the age to which he belongs, has to have a restatement of the truth which shall adapt itself to his own consciousness; and from this he evolves a faith which is superior to all authority, for it is a demonstration of the truth itself. The statement may be made on the highest authority that the three angles of a triangle are equal to two right angles, but it goes for nothing till the mind makes or learns it from a demonstration—that is, from actual proof. So it may be said by those who firmly believe it, that Jesus was the Son of God, and yet, until the soul apprehends this great truth for itself, the heart will remain unchanged, and there will be no conversion. "Flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father who is in heaven." We recognize this fact when we labor with penitents at the altar. They accept the authority of the Bible and of the church, but it does not enable them to believe to the saving of their souls until, by mighty prayer and faith, a new revelation is made in the soul of everyone who comes to Christ. No spiritual gift can be imparted without faith on the part of the receiver as well as the giver. Of what avail is it, then, to insist upon standards of doctrine which must first be believed in order to be accepted? Let the human mind under the influence of the Spirit of God work out its own conclusions, and it will necessarily agree with all others who have done the same. The action of the intellect is divisional—that of the heart tends to unity and harmony. Define your doctrines how you may, and all men will be left out who have not already made them their own. Better keep open the doors of investigation in the temple of truth, and continue to invite all inquiring spirits to come in, than to shut them up for the sake of enclosing those who have entered already. For there is little danger of those who once enter there ever turning back to the beggarly elements of the world; but in the effort to fasten these in we may bar others out. Wisdom is represented in the Bible as standing in the streets, and calling out to the sons of men: "O, ye simple, understand wisdom; and ye fools, be ye of an understanding heart. Hear, for I will speak of excellent things, and the opening of my lips shall be of right things, for my mouth shall speak truth."

This is God's own way of giving instruction, and men can not improve upon it. What matters it to this age of the world what Mr. Wesley thought about the cause and cure of earthquakes, or of the doctrine of Christian perfection, when we have the same sources of information, or even better, than he possessed? Granting him to have been far in advance of his age in regard to matters of religion, do we owe nothing to our age and to ourselves? No man was more free from the influences of other men than Mr. Wesley; no one more often quoted the sentiment—Jurare in verbis nullius magistri. Are we worthy to be called his disciples if we reject his example?

The Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, in this city, is making a strenuous effort to pay off its indebtedness. The congregation, last year, purchased the Calvary Episcopal Church at a very reasonable price. It is a fine location. They need help. The pastor, Rev. J. C. W. Smith, is soliciting help from our friends, and we hope they will respond liberally. The cause is worthy. The editor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE will receive contributions for this purpose.

The Race Problem.

BY REV. T. B. HOLLOMAN.

In the face of all that has been written and spoken on what is called the "Race Problem in the South," it would seem presumptuous in the extreme to enter upon its discussion with the hope of adding anything new of argument or suggestion. The solution of this problem has engaged the thoughts of our wisest lawmakers, both in Church and State, and all legislation in every direction we have found has measurably failed of the end designed. Whether this problem is any nearer solution to-day than twenty years ago, I have not the wisdom to say, and many, very many, throughout our broad land hesitate to believe.

As a church, it is not our province to decide what position the negro shall occupy in State or society. These two questions must be decided—the one by the State alone, the other must be the result of individual character and worth. Ours is to advocate the principles and doctrines of a "kingdom not of this world," and only so far as these teachings influence these two spheres have we to do. The great question with us is, What shall we do for the better religious development of the negro, and how shall we do it? That it is the duty of the church of Christ to educate, Christianize and in every way to elevate ignorant and degraded humanity is confessed by all the evangelical churches in the urgent calls by the various missionary Boards for more men and more money to send the gospel to foreign fields. That we have among us a people whose ministry is, for the most part, ignorant and unlearned, and whose religion is largely composed of superstition, can not be denied. And yet, while we have sent the missionary to Mexico and Brazil to correct the errors of a superstitious, misguided people, we have turned the negro over to the teachings of a ministry utterly and totally incompetent to preach the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. This ignorance we know was, in the beginning, his misfortune; and, while the improvement has been necessarily slow, the unprejudiced mind can but see that there has been improvement in this particular. Every preacher has heard the caviler's argument—"Why send money to Christianize the Chinaman when we have the heathen at our door?" This is a poor, mean argument, yet all of the churches have heard it and passed it by unheeded; though I am persuaded that all are awaking to their obligation in this matter—our own church having contributed not less than $40,000 in the past few years toward aiding in the education of young colored men for work in the church. However, this is not the full measure of our duty. Until the demand for a better educated ministry is met, it behooves us to aid such ministry as they have in giving to their people simple, pure gospel preaching. We owe it upon the high grounds as stated by St. Paul, when he says: "I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the Barbarians; both to the wise and to the unwise." No matter whether he remain among us or emigrate to other countries, the obligation remains that we do what we can to fit him for Christian citizenship and self-government—to teach him of the love of God in the gift of his Son, and of that Son as the only Mediator between God and man.

Another argument—that of self-protection—demands of us that we be wide awake upon this question. That the negro is here to stay for many, many years, if not for all time, there can be no doubt; and, at the same time, they will be our neighbors and fellow-citizens. Their influence will be felt in our politics, our commerce and our homes. That we may have the best citizens, neighbors and servants out of this people we all devoutly hope. To secure this end, I know of no agency so potent as the gospel of Jesus Christ. To argue that it can elevate others, even the base Hottentot and the degraded Kaffir, and yet can not reach the negro of our own country, is an argument unworthy of notice. No doubt that the assertion made by one in high position among us—that the "solution of the race problem is largely in the hands of the church"—is true. But, then, how shall it be accomplished? is a question of grave import. To solve this problem who is equal?

Centenary College.

REPORT OF THE VISITING COMMITTEE.

As a member of the committee appointed to visit Centenary College during the examinations at the close of the spring term of the session of 1888 and 1889, I have purposely deferred my report in order that the facts so favorable to the college may be fresh in the minds of our people at the opening of the fall term of the session of 1889–'90.

Though not present at those exercises technically called "the commencement," I witnessed the examinations in most of the classes—partly, I think, in all, except Prof. Wiley's—and everywhere found very satisfactory evidences of thorough training, both moral and intellectual. The examination of the class in the evidences of Christianity was especially interesting and assuring. Our holy religion is safe from the assaults of infidelity when put in the hands of a corps of young men trained after this fashion.

The moral tone of the school is rather higher than I have ever seen elsewhere. Each student seems to be led by his own convictions of right—his high sense of a noble manhood. But this splendid moral condition has not been attained at the expense of the purely literary culture of the young men. In each and every department the standard is well up to the average, and in some, I think, far above it. As far as my observations and competency to judge justify me in the expression of an opinion, just so far I desire to go in my commendation of the work of the faculty at Centenary College. Notwithstanding the very satisfactory results in the past, I believe that the present faculty, as reorganized by the Board at its June meeting, will greatly increase the efficiency of the work. The addition of Mrs. Hunnicutt and of one of the graduates of the college—R. H. Wynn—to the corps of teachers, I regard as an especially wise conclusion. Than such hands as these the Preparatory Department could be in none better.

Taking the college, as a whole, or in detail, I do not believe a better or safer place (morally, physically and intellectually speaking) can be found among colleges where the sons, whether of Methodists or others, can be placed for educational training.

The financial outlook will be presented to the Conference in the report of the Board of Trustees, and will be most encouraging to the friends of the college.

Respectfully submitted.

Notes.

Those who felt disappointed during the commencement season that they were not doctored can keep up hope. The New York Advocate says that Williams College has just conferred the degree of "D. D." on a minister in his 97th year!

Electrical science is certainly one of the growing sciences. There are now nearly 200,000 men in that service and nearly 2,000,000 miles of wire in use. There are 237,017 arc lights, 2,700,000 incandescent lights and 109 electric railways. Even steam has been called upon to bring electricity to the front.

There is talk of converting Niagara Falls into a transmitter of energy for the purpose of lighting the city of Buffalo with electricity by means of a No. 8 copper wire. If Buffalo can be lighted, why not New York and Philadelphia and—all the rest of the United States and even Mexico? It looks as if Niagara may be of some use yet!

It looks very much like Nevada will lose her statehood. The population has decreased from 62,266 in 1880 to about 40,000 now, and it is the largest State excepting California and Texas. It looks a little queer that a State of only 40,000 inhabitants should have the same representation in the United States Senate as the great States of the East and West and South!

Having been over a good part of our territory during the summer, we are glad to report that our church is in a healthy condition generally. The preachers are earnestly at work, and find earnest co operation from very many of their members. The details of the work are carefully looked after and progress is being made everywhere. While the preaching and Sunday-school work is being vigorously carried on, we have seen signs of a fresh awakening in other departments. The missionary impulse is throbbing in the life of the church as never before. Many are the converts reported to foreign missions. The church and parsonage extension work is gaining ground in the hearts of our people, and is evidenced by new houses of worship and new homes for the preachers springing up in very many places heretofore destitute of both. The NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE is growing in favor and steadily increasing in appreciative readers. Let every preacher and every official and every private member work on in earnest prayer and hopeful faith until the Conference year closes, and we will see larger results in favor of Methodism in Mississippi and Louisiana than we have ever before seen.

On one occasion Paul said: "A great and effectual door is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries." So it has ever been. The "open door" and the "many adversaries" stand over against each other. In some parts of our Zion there are "troublers of Israel." Some of our pastors have been troubled by the "come-outers" entering into the fold and producing confusion and, in a few instances, carrying off some of the flock. These people, as the name implies, have repudiated the church entirely—they have "come out" of it. They have no organization, and their only aim seems to be to persuade others to do as they have done. They preach in public and talk in private about the utter godlessness of the church. They claim to be under the immediate and direct supervision of the Holy Spirit, and that whatever they say or do is by his inspiration. And yet they have been clearly convicted, in some instances, of direct falsehood. The singular thing about these people is, that they invariably start out on the second-blessing theory of sanctification. Such vagaries, however, will only influence the most ignorant of people. No sane man, with a New Testament in his hand, can ever repudiate the church, which Christ purchased with his own blood. As long as it is written there that the "church is the body of Christ," "come-outism" will only find a home among the ignorant and fanatical.

In a few places in our territory the "Seventh-Day Adventists" have been trying to lead the unwary away from the faith of the gospel. These people, utterly mistaking one of the great designs of the Sabbath, would revolutionize the whole world, by converting it to a keeping of the seventh day of the week for the Sabbath instead of the first. They do not see the plain physical fact that they are actually proposing an impossibility. Their literalism leads them to absurdities. The only way their theory, that everybody shall keep the seventh day, could be realized at the same time by everybody would be to stop the revolution of the earth on its axis and flatten it out into one broad plain. All our people have to do to successfully resist these fanatics is to bring forth the New Testament with its positive statements about the early church invariably meeting for worship on the first day of the week, in commemoration of the resurrection of our Lord. The Sabbath is a commemorative day as well as a rest day.

Personal and Otherwise.

The Emperor of China is a progressive young man, and is talking about visiting this country. His ambassador at Washington City has suggested to him to defer his visit until the big Exposition in 1·92.

Queen Victoria has commuted Mrs. Maybrick's sentence to penal servitude for life.

Rev. J. L. Fulrell, recently transferred from North Mississippi Conference, has become associate editor of Our Brother in Red.

New Orleans Methodism will send five young preachers to Centenary College next term. Four of these will be maintained by the Carondelet Street Church! Why can't other churches do something like that?

Do you see how fast our fund for the Japan missionary is growing? You had better send on your contribution early, lest you have "no part nor lot in this matter."

One of our country exchanges speaks of him as "the illustrated Sam Jones."

A letter from the "Lower Coast Mission" says: "Our Methodist preacher is doing a fine work, and the religious prospect is good."

Rev. W. W. Wadsworth, of Georgia, well known to many of our readers, has in press, to be issued soon, a book on the "Missionary Question and Movement," entitled, "The Coming Kingdom."

The Wesleyan Conference has, by rule, "declared that non-attendance on class meeting is not in itself a sufficient cause for excommunicating a Christian Methodist."

Bishop Galloway called on us on his return from the Coast. His few days breathing the tonic breezes of the Gulf had a fine effect in bracing him for his fall work.

Dr. Wadsworth, through the last Wesleyan Christian Advocate, has called upon the Georgia Methodists for a thousand dollars for the Japan Mission. See how our fund is growing. If you don't send in quick, you will lose the opportunity. "He gives twice who gives quickly."

William Otis, of Mobile, a life-long Methodist, and a member of the Board of Trustees of Seashore Camp Ground, died August 23, aged seventy-two years.

Hereafter the postoffice address of Rev. R. Abbey will be Yazoo City, Miss.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. J. H. Hounsell writes from Holly Springs, Miss., August 22: "The Holly Springs District Missionary Mass Meeting is to be held in Holly Springs, September 29 and 30. Bishop Galloway is to be with us, and deliver a lecture on 'Mexico,' and one on 'Education.' We expect all the preachers of the district, and many others, to be present. The Bishop will preach for us at 11 A. M., on the twenty-ninth."

—Rev. H. R. Singleton writes from Crystal Springs as follows: "On Sunday, after camp meeting, contrary to former experience and adverse predictions, my church was literally filled. Upon invitation, twenty-one of the young men and women who applied for membership on the camp ground came forward, accompanied by seven new ones. According to our beautiful and impressive ritual, we received this class of thirty-one into the church, and then concluded with an old-fashioned handshaking. Before this I had received into the church about forty-five, giving me about twenty-five members this year. Besides I now have fully ten more applicants for membership. The young men have organized two prayer meetings, and most take an active part. The church is revived, and has a future big with promise of success and usefulness."

—Rev. J. M. Johnston writes from Pleasant Hill, La.: "We began our protracted meeting with success at Marthaville. We had seventeen accessions. At our third Quarterly Conference we had six accessions; baptized seven infants. How the remainder of the year will terminate I can not say, as we now have whooping cough the second time, and we can truly say the last state is worse than the first."

—Rev. B. F. Phillips writes from Columbus, Miss: "I have just closed my third protracted meeting. Result: about twenty professions and thirty accessions to the church. Bros. W. C. Harris, J. S. Oakley, John Thomas and John Egger, with Bro. Porsinger, of North Alabama Conference, gave me valuable help. I have three more meetings to hold. Pray for me."

—Rev. J. P. Drake corrects our error in this wise: "By a slight omission in my postal correspondence of this week's ADVOCATE, you make it report from the wrong church. I wrote from Shubuta, but wrote of a 'good meeting at DeSoto.' You omitted the heading, and thus comes the error. Will you be kind enough to correct the mistake. If I was at all to blame for it, I am willing to take my share."

—Rev. J. M. Henry writes from Thibodeaux, La.: "I have been here long enough to become acquainted with some of the people. They are kind; so much so that we soon felt at home. The Presbyterian brethren kindly tendered me the use of their pulpit, which is vacant three Sundays in the month, until I could properly arrange and repair my own. For the short time I have been here, I feel very much encouraged. My congregations are pleasingly large, considering the situation. I feel that the Lord will prosper his work in this part of his vineyard. The church prospered here once; adversity almost killed her. There are about a dozen female members here. We lost by allowing our children to slip from under our influence."

—Rev. Fred While writes: "Let me say a few words of encouragement from the DeSoto circuit, Shreveport district. I have held several protracted meetings during the last month with much success. The churches have been blessed, backsliders reclaimed, and the lukewarm stirred, sinners convicted and mourners converted. There were thirty conversions and nineteen accessions. We have organized a new church at Felicisna station, on the T. and P. R. R.—seventeen members—with fine prospect. We hope soon to build a new church-house at this little town. We have other protracted meetings to hold. This circuit is large, and we have no ministerial help. My health is poor. More anon. Pray for us."

—Rev. Frank M. Keen writes from Amite City, La.: "We closed a fine meeting last Wednesday at Tangipahoa. Ten accessions on profession of faith. The church greatly revived. Two prayer meetings started; one a ladies prayer meeting. This is a rare thing in this pastoral charge. Persons pray in public who never thought of doing such a thing before. Bros. James Leggett and Winans Drake gave valuable assistance. Two Presbyterian laymen—Bros. Berryhill, of Iowa, and Wayne, of your city—greatly assisted us. Will begin a meeting at Oyka tomorrow. Bro. Hopper will be with us during the latter part of the meeting. Rev. Joe Jones will commence a meeting at Amite City, September 20. Pray for us."

Indian Mission Proposition.

MR. EDITOR: With your permission I will now comply with my promise of some time ago, and prepare for publication in the ADVOCATE my "Indian Mission Proposition," which is as follows:

We, the undersigned, promise to become responsible for the payment of amounts annexed to our names, respectively, for the purpose of supporting a missionary to preach to and teach the Indians in Mississippi; said amount to be paid annually for a period of five years, and first payment to be made to Bishop C. B. Galloway as soon as it will aggregate five hundred dollars. (Promise to be null and void in case of the death of promiser.)

Centenary College.

MR. EDITOR: There is a prospect of a fine opening for Centenary on the fourth of next month. The Steward's Hall is to be under the management of Mrs. Sloan. Besides several of our best families are preparing to take boarders, so that there will be no lack of accommodation for as many students as will come. Possibly every vacant house will be occupied soon. We expect students from sections not represented here before. We look for President Hunnicutt home next week, after an extended tour in behalf of the college.

Next to your subscription the greatest favor you can extend the ADVOCATE, in a business point, is to mention the paper in writing to advertisers.

Housekeeper—"Norah, you must always sweep behind the doors." New Servant—"Yes'm. I always does. It's the aisiest way of gettin' the durrit out of sight."

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change can not be made.

Guest (to colored waiter)—"See here! I can't cut this steak with this knife!" Colored waiter—"Low me, sah, to lend you my razab, sah!"

Teacher—"For what was the year 1876 remarkable, Tommy?" Tommy—"Why, that's the year I was born."

EMORY & HENRY COLLEGE.

THE 53D ANNUAL SESSION WILL BEGIN SEPTEMBER 5, 1889.

The last session was one of the best in the long and useful history of the College. The order and general behavior of students was excellent; moral and religious influences strong, and admirable progress generally was made in studies.

GYMNASIUM and WM. MORROW SCIENCE HALL are finished and beautiful additions to the already lovely grounds.

Work of rebuilding the burnt "BYARS HOUSE" is in progress, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

The new SOCIETY HALLS will be commodious and elegant.

In addition to subjects heretofore embraced in the courses, thorough practical instruction will be given in Analytical Chemistry, Determination of Minerals, Assaying, etc.

NO HEALTHIER OR MORE BEAUTIFUL PLACE. NO MALARIA.

No saloons, no occurrences to distract the minds of students, no safer place for boys and young men. Charges very moderate. Every possible arrangement for the encouragement of young men of limited means.

Our Young People.

OLD SCHOOLBOOK'S LAMENT.

BY LILLIE SHIELDS.

I'm a castaway fellow, all dingy and yellow,
Forsaken I lie on the dark garret floor;
All wretched and lonely, for now I am only
A mere wreck of what was a beauty before.

My pride is all shattered, my leaves they are battered,
And all of them cruelly scribbled and torn,
I have but one cover, they tore off the other—
And that one is dreadfully tattered and worn.

An old-fashioned bonnet, a faded rose on it,
A rusty jack-knife, a shoe out at the toe,
A pile of old papers, three dirty wax tapers,
Are my only companions in these hours of woe.

Once I lived in the city, where books, bright and pretty,
Were ranged in a long shining row on the shelf;
I'd an ex-pinkie cover, gilt-lettered all over,
And not one was more beautiful there than myself.

My next place of dwelling—I blush at the telling—
Was a school-room as dusty as dusty could be,
Where long I was studied, scratched, thumb-marked, and muddled,
And ruined, as anyone gladly can see.

But here I am lying, degraded and dying,
While old dusty cobwebs are covering me o'er,
Alone and forsaken, while naught can awaken
The glory I knew in the sweet days of yore.

Missionary Thistles.

The boys' mission band at Glenoaks wanted to find some way to earn their share of the missionary money which went to far-away India to support a Bible woman.

There were plenty of ways for the girls to earn money. Their nimble fingers could do so many things deftly and well that there was no fear but that the proportion of the money they had pledged themselves to raise would be forthcoming. But the boys—what would they do to earn some money? They looked at their sturdy fingers, stubbed by baseball-playing and scarred by jack-knife accidents, in despair. There did not seem to be anything for them to do just then. If it had been winter time, they might have formed a snow-shovel brigade, and turned the snowflakes into pennies in the missionary coffer; but what was there to do beneath this blazing August sun?

Even Miss Nannie, their enthusiastic young president, was without a suggestion for once. One day, she came home from the city, her face aglow with the brilliancy of the idea which had suggested itself to her. A special meeting of the mission band was called; and not a boy was absent when the roll was called, for it had been whispered about that Miss Nannie had found out a way for them to make money.

Brown eyes and blue eyes and gray eyes opened to their widest extent with surprise, and stared at Miss Nannie in unmitigated astonishment, when she bade them gather as many as they could of the big purple thistles that were blooming in profusion along the hedges just then, and bring them to her the next Saturday afternoon.

"But, Miss Nannie, what good are thistles, I should like to know?" ventured one boy, more bewildered than the rest.

"That's my secret," smiled Miss Nannie. "I will show you how to turn them into missionary money when you bring them to me."

Saturday afternoon people wondered not a little when they saw groups of thistle-laden boys turning their steps in the direction of Miss Nannie's house. One hundred thistles filled the large clothes-basket which had been prepared for their reception; and then the boys looked at Miss Nannie eagerly.

What next?

She held up a soft, fluffy pompon, that looked as if it was made of the whitest, finest spun silk in the world.

"What do you think of that, boys?" she asked. "Isn't it pretty?"

"Yes'm," was the chorus of assent. "But what are we going to do with our thistles?" was the eager query that followed.

"We will make these lovely pompons out of them, and take them over to the hotel at the lake and sell them," Miss Nannie answered. "I paid ten cents for this; and perhaps, if ours are equally pretty, we may get the same price."

"O Miss Nannie"—and the boys looked delighted, though incredulous—"how could anybody make a soft, white thing like that out of the old thistles?"

"I will show you. Where are your knives?" And, in a moment, Miss Nannie was explaining the mysteries of pompon-making to her auditors.

Such a busy, delightful afternoon as that was; and, when it closed, a hundred thistles, stripped of their green sheaths and robbed of their purplish plumes, hung in long rows in the garret, ready for the drying process. They fluffed out beautifully, and were the softiest, creamiest, silken color.

The next Saturday afternoon, daintily laid in boxes that their delicate beauty might not be marred by handling, tied in bunches with knots of warm-tinted ribbon, the pompons were carried over to the large hotel filled with summer boarders; and there the boys found a ready market. Each pompon brought a shining dime into the treasury; and, when the happy, tired boys counted up their gains that night, an involuntary cheer escaped them, as they found their bank held ten whole dollars.—Presbyterian.

MR. EDITOR: This is my first attempt at a letter for the dear ADVOCATE. First let me thank you for the children's column, which affords us so much pleasure in reading each other's letters. We have a juvenile missionary society at Friendship, consisting of twenty-six members. We collected forty dollars our first year, but missed getting the banner offered by Mrs. C. J. Foster by about fourteen cents. But we are going to try again. We have an interesting Sunday-school, and Mr. W. J. Sullivan is our efficient superintendent. We tent at Cypress Bayou Camp Ground, and our folks are in the midst of preparations.

Respectfully,

JEPTIE DALSTON.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl thirteen years old, and live way out in the country. I have a little sister and two brothers—one is only four years old. We have no mother; she died when I was eleven years old. We go to school at home. Our papa takes the dear old CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. I love to read the children's letters. I will ask a question before I close my letter: When 'was "shaving" first spoken of in the Bible? I would like for some of the little cousins to answer this question.

Your friend,

IRMA CORDILL.

COMO, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl seven years old. My papa takes the ADVOCATE, and we like it very much. I have six brothers. I am going to school. Our teacher is Mr. Wailes. I like him so much. Our school will be out soon. Papa is a farmer and a merchant. Bro. Ponder is our preacher this year. We like him very much. I will answer the little cousin's question: "Money" is mentioned in Acts viii, 18, 20. I will close, hoping to see this in print.

It is a very sharp emergency that can catch Pat, even when he is ignorant and ragged. An Irishman, whose garments were in tatters, was brought before a magistrate on a charge that he was a vagrant.

"What have you to say to the charge that you have no visible means of support?" asked the justice.

Pat drew from the pocket of his torn coat a loaf of bread, the half of a dried codfish and several cold potatoes. These he spread upon the stand before him, and coolly asked:

"What do you think of thim, yer Honor—shure an' isn't thim visible manes of support?"—Youth's Companion.

Household.

Give Children Something to Do.

An important point in managing children is to always have ready something for the little hands to do at those times which come quite often on rainy and other days, when, tired of play, they listlessly gaze through the window or wander aimlessly about, not knowing what to do with themselves. Children at such times are a great trial to the busy and often nervous people of the house, and are quite likely to be scolded, though such a course is so unwise and unjust that it can lead only to the worst results in the child's future. Calm and reproving words, kindly spoken, are necessary with all bright children, and are usually very effective; but words uttered in a sharp, scolding tone must in most cases work an injury to the child's disposition. It is all the more sad, because the matter could be so easily managed by a very little attention on the mother's part.

How often we hear mothers or older sisters say to some little child who is full of desire to do right, if it only knew how: "Do get something to do; how lazy you are; I never saw such a good-for-nothing child; I am sure I don't know what is to become of you;" and a great deal more of such talk, which, alas! most people have heard too often. The child at such times is not in fault. It is the mother's duty to see that suitable work is always ready, and she should require the child to do a moderate task, for which she should not be afraid to give a due measure of praise after it is done. Always be careful to see that the child is not kept too long at one task, as such a course would be worse than idleness.

It is worthy of note that the work given to a child has a great influence in molding the mind and taste. A child kept always at knitting stockings or cutting carpet rags will be very practical, perhaps too much so. A wise mother will have a variety of work, both useful and ornamental. Some parents think it useless to teach boys to sew or knit. It is not, however, for there are many times in a boy's life when such knowledge may be useful. I have often observed that many college boys could mend their own clothes while they were quite up in their classes. I think the subject should be thoughtfully considered by parents, seeing to it that time should never hang on their children's hands for want of something to do.—American Agriculturist.

CONVENIENCES FOR FARMERS' WIVES.—Farmers are too apt to forget the inconveniences their wives are subjected to in the discharge of their duties indoors. They remodel and repair their barns, stables and farm implements as often as their own conveniences and profits indicate, and buy new implements in the same way. They see the importance of it as they engage in their daily avocations. Are they generally as anxious that their wives should be equally accommodated in their sphere? Are not the labors of the latter often increased 100 per cent. for the want of a better cook stove, more tin pans, a better pump, easier access to the cellar, a more suitable milk-room, more paint on the kitchen floor, new paper on the walls, scrapers and mats at the doors, a new broom, an occasional ride in the open air, suitable domestic helps, etc? Farmers and their wives, being one flesh, ought always to remember and feel that their interests are one and the same; that they are equally responsible for the prosperity, success and respectability of the family, according to their relative circumstances and capacity.

"O to be dead and done with the trouble
That fills each day with a dreary pain."
This is the moan of many a woman
Who thinks she can never be well again.
"It were better for me and better for others
If I were dead," and their tears fall fast.
No so, not so, O wives and mothers,
There's a bow of hope in the sky at last,

and it tells you that the storm of disease which has spread its shadow over you will give way to the sunshine of renewed health, if you are wise, and try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It can and will effectually cure all females weaknesses and derangements, and no woman who has not tried it need despair, for a trial will convince her that it is the very thing she needs to restore her to the health she fears forever lost.

To cleanse the stomach, liver, and system generally, use Dr. Pierce's Pellets. 25 cents.

WHY COUGH,

WHEN a few doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral will relieve you? Try it. Keep it in the house.

You are liable to have a cough at any time, and no other remedy is so effective as this world-renowned preparation. No household, with young children, should be without it. Scores of lives are saved every year by its timely use.

Amanda B. Jenner, Northampton, Mass., writes: "Common gratitude impels me to acknowledge the great benefits I have derived for my children from the use of Ayer's most excellent Cherry Pectoral. I had lost two dear children from croup and consumption, and had the greatest fear of losing my only remaining daughter and son, as they were delicate. Happily, I find that by giving them Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, on the first symptoms of throat or lung trouble, they are relieved from danger, and are becoming robust, healthy children."

"In the winter of 1885 I took a bad cold which, in spite of every known remedy, grew worse, so that the family physician considered me incurable, supposing me to be in consumption. As a last resort I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and, in a short time, the cure was complete. Since then I have never been without this medicine. I am fifty years of age, weigh over 180 pounds, and attribute my good health to the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."—G. W. Yonker, Salem, N. J.

"For a winter I contracted a severe cold which, by repeated exposure, became quite obstinate. I was much troubled with hoarseness and bronchial affection. After trying various medicines, without relief, I at last purchased a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. On using this medicine, my cough ceased almost immediately, and I have been entirely free from it ever since."—Rev. Thos. B. Russell, Allegheny Holston Conference and P. E. of Greenville District, M. WHITE—CLAUD MALOY, youngest son of Joseph M. and M. A. White, was born near Homer, Claiborne parish, La., January 22, 1872. In the fall of 1881 or 1882, he was received into the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by the writer. His life was ever that of a consistent Christian. He was meek, obedient and affectionate to his parents; he reverenced age; and was respectful and polite to all. He preferred the society of his mother to the company of boys out on the streets. His love and respect for his parents was remarked by all who knew the family. His thoughtfulness and care for his mother was wonderful for a boy of his years. His father was blind for several years; and last April Claude left Homer, La., in care of his blind father, to go to Atlanta, Ga., to have his eyes treated by the celebrated Dr. Calhoun, of that city. The operation was successful, and, under the medical treatment of the doctor and the careful nursing of the son, in a few weeks he was able to travel, and they went to Forsyth, Ga., to visit Mr. James M. White, a brother of the father, whom he had not seen for twenty-four years, intending in a few days to come home.

On June 22 Claude was stricken down with fever, and the father was called upon to nurse the son. He continued to grow worse. The mother and older brother were sent for; but no loving attention or medical treatment could avail, and on July 15 he fell on sleep at the residence of his uncle, near Forsyth, Monroe county, Ga. Quietly and peacefully, as the sun sinks behind the waters of an unruffled sea, he passed from earth to his eternal home. In a letter, found among his papers, written a few days before he was taken sick, but not sent off, he expressed to his friend and school-mate the strongest confidence in the blood of Christ and the ineffable comforts of religion. The weeping parents and loved ones have much to comfort and console them in their sorrow. Thy son and brother shall live again. JNO. A. MILLER.

LEWIS—EDWARD FRANCIS LEWIS was born August 27, 1867, and died, May 29, 1889, near Campte, Natchitoches parish, La. He was the oldest child of James E. Lewis and Mollie Lefere. Eddie was an obedient son; a good brother. He was converted three or four years before his death. He died at home, and everything that his kind father and loving mother, sisters and friends could do was done for him; but God in his wisdom saw fit to take him. He had been sick some time. He told them he would never be well any more. He very suddenly got worse. When near death, he called his father closer to him, and said: "Pa, I'm going to leave you; going home to rest, going to another world." His father said, "What makes you say so, son?" He answered, "Because I see the people." May he not have been permitted to see through the "gates ajar?" These were his last words. In a few minutes he had passed away. May the Lord comfort his parents and sisters and brothers (who miss him so much), and make them strong to overcome the trials and temptations of life! He can not come to them, but they may go to him."

NELSON—MRS. JULIA A. NELSON, daughter of N. U. and T. M. Bell, was born in Bedell county, N. C., November 3, 1817. She came to Alabama in 1851. She joined the Presbyterian Church at the age of fifteen years. She was married to J. B. Nelson, December 15, 1839. She was left a widow, with three children, in 1879. She removed to Louisiana in 1885. She settled in Lincoln parish, near Simsboro, and here united with the Methodist Church, under the pastoral charge of the writer, in 1886. Sister Nelson was the subject of a long-protracted sickness, all of which she bore with patience and Christian resignation. She was confined to her bed in September, 1888, and suffered much until June 17, 1889, when she was called to her reward in heaven. She was fully resigned to death, and calmly awaited the end. The relatives and friends weep not as those who have no hope. God bless and sustain you! JNO. A. MILLER.

ALFORD—THOMAS E. ALFORD died on July 25, 1889. I was, by the request of the young sufferer, called to his bedside in order to baptize him, and then receive him in the church, which I did two days before his death, and he said he was prepared for the great change that would soon take place. He suffered much and long; was never heard to complain or murmur in all his afflictions. On Tuesday morning, when I went in to tell him farewell, he said: "May God bless you and your labors, and if we never meet again on earth, that ere long we would meet again in heaven!" He exhorted his father and mother and sisters and brothers, and all that stood around his bed, while life was ebbing out, to prepare for the great change and meet him in heaven. May the relatives obey the exhortation, and by and by join the departed one in that sweet by-and-by!

J. H. EVANS.

LLOYD—Died, in Hazlehurst, Miss., Mrs. SERENA SHELBY LLOYD, July 20, 1889. Sister Lloyd was born in Claiborne county, Miss., July 20, 1812. She died upon her seventy-seventh birthday, entirely resigned to the will of God, willing to go or stay as pleased him. She gave directions for her burial, and sent messages of love and farewell greeting to her absent loved ones, and requested her pastor, the Rev. Mr. Nicholson, to preach her funeral sermon; and was then taken to her old residence, near Bartonton, and laid beside her husband and children, who had preceded her to the spirit land. True and just in all her dealings, a faithful Christian, a wise and constant friend, irreproachable in life, we feel that the place of Sister Lloyd will not be filled. There are inner places into which we can not enter, where the shadow lies now which she filled with sunshine, in the tenderness and thoughtfulness of home relations. Her memory is cherished in love, which will long remember her virtues and worth. Mrs. Lloyd had been twice married: first to Mr. Barnes, who soon passed away, leaving one daughter, Mrs. M. O. Bridgers; next to Mr. William Lloyd, who died in January, '73, leaving two sons and one daughter of mature age—two noble sons having given their lives to their country. It was my sad privilege to be with and mingle my tears with the broken-hearted mother's but after those miserable days were past she never seemed the same, going about her duties with a cheerful, smiling face. But to those who knew her best, her bitter sorrow was well known. Farewell, dear sister and kind, sympathetic friend, we shall meet again.

SARAH FRENCH.

FLYNN—The following resolutions were adopted by the Quarterly Conference of Sparta circuit, Aberdeen district, North Mississippi Conference:

Whereas, It hath pleased our heavenly Father to take from our midst our faithful and vengeable old father and brother, WILLIAM FLYNN, who for so many years went in and out before us, and cheered us with his counsels and grace; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we humbly and submissively bow to the will and providence of our heavenly Father in this display of divine power, and say that we feel glad that Bro. Flynn lived among us, and that his godly life is worthy our admiration and exemplification.

Resolved, That while we would mourn or feel sad that he is not present with us to-day, yet we can mingle gladness with our sorrow, in that he has escaped the pollutions of earth, and has, no doubt, gone home to glory.

Resolved, That we tender to his bereaved family our sincere condolence, and pray God to prove unto their hearts the consolations of the gospel.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Quarterly Conference, and a copy be sent to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE for publication.

WM. M. FOSTER, for Com.

MASSEY—The following resolutions were adopted by the Methodist Sunday-school at Montrose, Miss:

Whereas, After live years with us, as assistant superintendent and member of the Bible class, our beloved brother, Prof. W. B. MASSEY, has entered into rest; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Bro. Massey, our Sunday-school has lost one of its best members; also our literary school and church is deprived of a zealous, efficient laborer, a devout, consecrated Christian man; one whose superior could not be found in warmth of heart, strength of mind and purity of soul.

Resolved, That while this Sunday-school mourns the loss of one of its brightest members, one whose interest and zeal for the Sunday-school never decreased at any time, that we renew our diligence in the work he loved so well, emulate his example that we may receive our reward in that bright home where parting never comes.

Resolved, That we tender our loving sympathy to the aged mother and others of the family.

J. P. ARNEY, for Com.

THELMER—On Saturday night, August 10, 1889, at ten o'clock, the angel of death visited the home of George and Carrie Thelmer, of Wilkinson county, Miss., for the first time in life, claiming as his victim their sweet little daughter, CARRIE EVALINE, aged six years, ten months and twenty days. Her disease was congestion, and the little bud soon yielded, as she was only sick four days and three nights.

Little Evaline, sweet be thy rest! God bless the bereaved parents!—they have another tie in heaven. God help them to say, Thy will be done. Farewell, little Evaline, until we meet to part no more. LAURA OAKES.

Tired Natures' Sweet Restorer.

Sancho Panza, wasn't it? who cried, "God bless the man who first invented sleep." And England's greatest bard has called it "Tired Natures' Sweet Restorer." Still there is another invigorating and refreshing element of existence which is also tired natures' sweet restorer.

We call it Compound Oxygen: our patients through gratitude call it blessed.

Extraordinary Flood Rains.

This year's protracted rainfall, which led to the May cataclysm at Johnstown and still continues on our Eastern coasts, is the most memorable physical phenomenon in American history. During July just passed 9.63 inches of rain fell in New York City and 8.39 inches in Philadelphia. Eight inches, therefore, may be taken as a fair average of the midsummer month's fall over a belt of the Atlantic coast at least fifty miles wide and stretching from New York to Charleston—an area exceeding thirty thousand square miles. Computed by avoirdupois this deposit from the clouds over this area is fourteen thousand millions of tons, or more than seven times the mean discharge of the Lower Mississippi from all its outlets per day.

The explanation of this enormous rainfall on our Atlantic seaboard will be found in the abnormal distribution of barometric pressure over the Western Atlantic, similar to that which caused the March "blizzard" of '88, and also the late Johnstown and allied flood rains. The vast anti-cyclone or wave of high barometer on the ocean has moved westwardly, as pressure was low on the heated continent. While in July the hot atmosphere on the seaboard was densely charged with Gulf Stream vapor and in a state of unstable equilibrium, its slightest agitation, even in the absence of cyclones or brisk winds, sufficed to elevate the vapor and cause excessive condensation, rivalling in quantity that of the mountain cloud burst.

As, too, the Atlantic anti-cyclone rotates from right to left, southerly winds prevail over the warm Gulf Stream waters, serving to pump up their vapors and pile them over the land afresh as fast as they can be converted into water.

With every incursion last week of the Atlantic anti-cyclone upon the coasts the rain came down in torrents over the seaboard. But on Friday the high pressure wave receded from the coasts, swung out to sea, and then its eastward movement was immediately followed by comparatively fair inland weather from Boston to Norfolk. This fact clearly shows that the immediate cause of the torrential downpours was the movement of the Atlantic air wave.

Even should the long series of disastrous floods, cloud bursts and ruinous rains bred of this vaporous sea speedily come to an end, weather science ought, if possible, to get at the bottom of all the physical causes of the phenomenon. The New Madrid earthquake of 1811 and the Charleston earthquake have been carefully studied. But in point of fatality and destructiveness, what are they compared with this overshadowing visitation which began its desolations in the Conemaugh Valley more than two months ago and, perhaps, is not yet overpast?

Though we must wait for more light before drawing final lessons from these mysterious meteorological phenomena, we may at least conclude that they can never be understood or predicted until we have some means of learning daily the great atmospheric movements going on over the Western Atlantic. Then, perhaps, the people may be duly forewarned of disastrous flood rains, cloud bursts and "blizzards."—N. Y. Herald.

RIDING A SKY ROCKET.—An inventor in Peru has designed a passenger sky rocket consisting of a combination of rockets of immense power, with a parachute attachment. Four tubes from the framework contain the explosives. The nature of the explosive is a secret, and is called dynoascenimite. Its peculiar property is that it is detonating. A small volume of the solid makes an immense volume of vapor, and lifts the machine with great rapidity into the clouds. A test was made under Peruvian government patronage, near Callao, in December, when the charge touched by electricity sent the machine up 15,515 feet, and the descent by parachute was perfect. The inventor landed five miles from the starting-point, and no worse for the trip. Fifteen thousand people were present, and watched with telescopes the rise and fall of the machine. It will be exhibited in this country.—Ex.

The Georgia Farmers' Alliance having provided for the wrapping of the entire cotton crop of the State in cotton bagging, now goes a step further. A resolution was passed asking the alliances of all the cotton States to unite with the alliance of Georgia and demand 12½ cents per pound for the present cotton crop.

One man was killed and several wounded at an election in Mississippi.

The Spring Lake reservoir, near Fiskville, R. I., which supplies the whole row of mill villages along the Pawtucket river, burst on August 25, drowning three persons and causing great damage to property. The reservoir covered eighteen acres and contained 35,000,000 gallons of water.

Carlisle D. Graham, who has achieved fame by his previous efforts, made a successful trip through the whirlpool rapids, Niagara river, on August 25, in a barrel-shaped boat.

The cotton worms are doing much damage in various localities, diminishing the cotton to less than an average crop. In the main, however, the product will exceed that of many years.

Swift's Packing-house, in Kansas City, was totally destroyed by fire on August 25. The loss on buildings, machinery and stock is estimated at $150,000. Insurance, $120,000.

It is said that Democratic employees in the departments at Washington are being shruptly dismissed. Republican chiefs are to open disregard of precedents, dismissing clerks appointed under civil service rules.

The plant of the Union Furniture Company, in Rockford, Ill., was destroyed by fire on August 26. The company lost $100,000.

Four tramps, arrested for vagrancy in Moberly, Mo., were put up at public auction, on the twenty-sixth, from the court-house steps. Two were sold to a farmer at $2 a head, and another was bid in for seventy-five cents. The fourth tramp could find no purchaser, and he was returned to jail. The three who were sold must serve their purchasers for four months.

Port Costa, Cal., had a $100,000 fire on the twenty-sixth.

In the House of Commons, on August 23, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, president of the Board of Trade, said that England had accepted an invitation to send delegates to the maritime conference to be held in Washington, but the British delegates would not be empowered to make any engagements binding upon England.

The Heytien war has ended. Legitime accepted terms of peace and embarked on board of a French corvette. Hippolyte's troops are in possession of Port-au-Prince.

Compared with the visit of late Emperor William to Alsace-Lorraine in 1887, the present Emperor's visit was a phenomenal success. After making every allowance for official zeal in stirring the province to enthusiasm the Emperor's reception indicates the remarkable progress made in Germanizing the province during the past decade.

The Silesian Gazette publishes statistics showing an uninterrupted growth of socialism. The city of Berlin in 1882 contained 24 socialist societies; now it contains over 100. Bavaria in 1886 had 1,102 societies, with 50,000 members. She now has 2,200 societies, with 122,000 members.

Mr. O'Brien and Mr. James Gilhooly, M. P., for county Cork, who were charged with holding a nationalist meeting which had been proclaimed by the government, were convicted and sentenced at Clonakility on August 26. Mr O'Brien was sentenced to two months' imprisonment and Mr. Gilhooly to six weeks, without hard labor.

The council of the Legion of Honor has erased the names of Boulanger and Count Dillon from the roll of the order.

A severe earthquake shock was felt throughout Greece on August 26. Serious damage was done in several towns.

State Bureau of Agriculture.

Below we reproduce the directions for using Paris Green, published in Bulletin 13, by the Bureau. Paris Green has been used in these ways by farmers and is reliable, and where properly used are harmless and effective.

THE COTTON WORM—HOW TO DESTROY IT.

Paris Green, London Purple and White Arsenic, all compounds of arsenic, are used for the destruction of this pest. Since all the above are poisonous to man and beast, they must be handled with great care and caution.

The almost unanimous opinion of farmers and planters is, that of the above Paris Green is by far the best poison. It is used in three ways: first, in liquid suspension. Mix one pound of pulverized Paris Green with forty gallons of water, and put this on one acre—by and with a large watering-pot, or from the barrels placed in a wagon—by use of spray-pumps. In either case the mixture must be kept well stirred, since Paris Green is not soluble in water, but is held mechanically suspended; a little flour, just scoured in a bucket of water and then added to the mixture, gives it greater adhesive power.

Second: Dry, mixed with some diluent, as cheap flour, yellow ochre, fine clay, plaster or ashes. A little dextrine is sometimes added to increase adhesiveness. One pound of Paris Green is mixed with twenty-five pounds of the diluent.

This mixture, used during showery weather, is sifted over the plants by hand, through coarse sieves.

Third: The finely ground Paris Green is dusted from an oblong sack, made of coarse muslin, attached to the end of a long pole, carried by a man on horse back. In this way it is easily and cheaply distributed; the only objection is, that, as ordinarily performed, more Paris Green is used than is necessary. Care should be taken to keep man and beast on the side from which the wind is blowing, so as to avoid inhalation of arsenical dust.

Either of the above methods can be used with certainty of success, if proper care in following directions be exerted.

The M. E. Church has three Annual Conferences in India. According to the latest reports these conferences have an aggregate of 84 foreign preachers and 51 native, 10,318 members and probationers, 138 churches, 126 parsonages and 20,138 scholars in day-schools.

The clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese of New York has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and The Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices, in Louisiana National Bank Building.

East Tennessee, Virginia & Georgia R. R.

Well known as the Great Kennesaw Route, is now making twelve hours quicker time to Washington via New York and eastern points, with Pullman Buffet Sleepers from New Orleans to Washington without change. The mountain resorts of East Tennessee are reached in twenty-four hours, and Virginia resorts in thirty hours. For tickets, sleeping accommodation, circulars, schedule, etc., call at Kennesaw ticket office, 22 Carondelet street.

The Best and Cheapest College.

Nearly 1,000 young men from 30 States entered the Commercial College of Kentucky University, Lexington, Ky., the past year. This College received the Highest Honor and Gold Medal at the World's Exposition over all other Colleges for System of Book-keeping and Business Education. It is situated in the beautiful, healthy and renowned city of Lexington, Ky., accessible by the leading railroads. Read advertisement of this College in another column, and write for particulars to its President, WILBUR R. SMITH, Lexington, Ky.

Iuka Normal Institute.

Summer School closed July 26. One hundred registered; the youngest sixteen, the oldest forty-seven—average age about twenty seven. All still have a few male teachers, experienced. All hold from their county superintendent high first-grade certificates. Also a number of ladies, experienced teachers—scholarship from a second-grade certificate to a full college course. They can give references. Do you need an assistant? Write to H. A. DEAN, Iuka, Miss.

From Most Rev. Bishop Ryan, of Philadelphia.

I can testify to the efficacy of J. & C. Maguire's Cundurango, it having been my favorite medicine for several years past. I believe it to be the best Anti-Bilious Cathartic and Corrector of Liver, Blood and Kidney derangements that can be taken, and its general use in families would no doubt avert attacks of sickness.

NASHVILLE, TENN., June 11, 1889.

For four or five years I have every year spent at least one day in the class-room of Messrs. Wall and Mooney's School. I have questioned their classes, and heard them recite in English, Mathematics, German, Greek and Latin; and do not hesitate to call their work excellent. Better trained pupils it would be hard to find. The moral culture is equally good.

Boyt, Downsville and Rapides Camp Meetings.

Bro. Chas. M. Fush and I enjoyed immensely our visit to the three camp meetings of Revs. Parvin, Collier and Lyons. We wished not only to breathe the pure country air, but also to enjoy such spiritual refreshment as might be had at these camps of the Lord's people, and our wishes were fully realized. Urgently invited by the brethren in charge to come up and help them, we were glad to have release from brick and mortar for ten days. The T. and P. morning train carried us safely to Shreveport, the day being passed with much of interest occurring inside and outside of the cars. To us our fellow-passengers are always a study, and on this trip we were particularly drawn out in the direction of a Texas mother traveling alone with her babe, which cried incessantly, being colicky. Fush showed himself a genuine pater familias by his knowing what was best for the child, and his kindly heart displayed itself in his prompt application of the remedy. The poor mother was wearied well nigh to distraction, and hundreds of miles yet to go before she could reach home. Ah! me, the women have many trials and distresses we men can not begin to fathom. It would almost kill an ordinary man to have to travel for days in charge of a colicky infant.

Arriving at Shreveport at ten P. M., we found excellent beds at the City Hotel, and, after refreshing sleep, we left by the V., S. and P. train, at six in the morning, for Dubberly. The Boyt Camp Ground being only a quarter of a mile from the station, we were soon there, and the big-hearted Parvin took us to Cheshire's to breakfast. The meals we had at that Baptist brother's table were first-class, including the rare treat of barbecued meat. Bro. Boyt, under the inspiring touch of Parvin, did a good thing in giving those ten acres for a camp ground. They are well adapted for the purpose, and, as there is a mineral spring there, the water used is conducive to health. There are not many tents built besides the preacher's tent and the splendid large boarding-tent. This is a new camp ground, first named the North Louisiana Seashore Camp Ground; then the International Camp Ground; but now it has settled down into the short and honorable name of Boyt. The tabernacle is a very capacious one, and on Sunday was crowded to overflowing. It has a most commendable feature in its wide and deep pulpit platform. There is plenty of room on it for Bro. Parvin, or other live men, to move about at will and not be cramped or fear to slip off. Walking room on a speaker's platform is a positive luxury to a wide-awake talker. We met at Boyt, Revs. John A. Miller, Robert Parvin, P. C., Harry W. May, and Brown, a local preacher from Virginia. Bro. Fush bunked with the preachers at this and at the other camp meetings, and constant mixing in such choice company was, doubtless, pleasant and helpful to him. I am sure that this old globe of ours affords no better companionship than that found among the devoted, God-fearing, fearless-preaching, hardship-bearing Louisiana itinerants. When we left Boyt on Monday morning the outlook was encouraging for a good meeting. It would be well if our people throughout the Conference could hear Bro. Miller's sermon on family prayer. People were at Boyt from Shreveport, Minden, Ruston and all the surrounding section.

Leaving the train at Choudrant, we were met by Bro. John Ferguson, who had come with Bro. Collier's spanking team and buggy to deliver us at the Downsville Camp Ground. As we were starting briskly down the road we met Rev. Robert Randle, who was aiming to take the ears for Dubberly to help Bro. Parvin. We had time only for a few words and a hand-grip, which we regretted, as we would have greatly enjoyed a good talk with Bro. Randle. From all we heard at Boyt and Downsville, we rejoice to know that he holds the reins of his district with a master-hand, pushes all the interests of the church, and is in great esteem with preachers and people. He looked worn, as a man must who so fully does his duty.

The Homer district, under Presiding Elder Randle, is on rising ground, as the reports at Baton Rouge will undoubtedly indicate. We met at the Downsville Camp Meeting, Revs. R. S. Collier, P. C.; Henry O. White, Thomas S. Randle, T. K. Faunt LeRoy, C. F. Staples, and Joe Jones. We met also local preachers, exhorters, class leaders and other officials, and a host of godly men and women. We missed Father George Gunby, who, since our last visit to Downsville, had made the passage to the glory-world. And others, old and young, were not there, having gone over into "the beautiful land." Fathers Staples and Hodge, and Mothers Cork and Hearn, and many more whom we used to meet, were at Downsville, and it was to us a great blessing to hear the prayers of Father Staples and Sister Ford, and to be thrilled by the shouts and hallelujahs around the altar and over the camp. The Holy Spirit was in the midst in convicting, converting and sanctifying power. We found the Rev. Joe Jones preaching, and noticed that he is a much larger man than Sam. His style is straightforward, honest; somewhat rough, but telling. He was at times very pathetic, and did good work in each of the sermons we heard. He meant every word he said, and God carried his messages home to the hearer's conscience and heart. A boy, listening to his father telling something, said, "Pa, do you mean that, or are you only preaching?" The boy's idea of preaching is not met in Joe Jones, for it is evident that he is in downright earnest and thoroughly honest. The grove meetings are sources of power at Downsville. We remained to the close, and good, better, best. It was until the final parting night, when, amidst a perfect blaze of glory and wonderful baptism of the Holy Ghost, the multitudes gave Bro. White and myself the old-fashioned Methodist hand-grip, and not a few warm hugs from the brethren thrown in. Oh, it was a blessed place to be! We do not remember to have seen in several years any greater manifestation of God's presence and power than at Downsville.

Thursday we started for the Rapides Camp Ground, twelve miles from Boyce, on the T. and P. R. R. The pastor, Rev. C. Marcy Lyons, was fortunate in the choice of a place. Bro. Slatter donated the land. It is on Spring Creek, and hence the best of water is abundant. Quite a number of tents had been put up. The preaching-tent is adapted to hold comfortably a very large congregation, and, being on an incline, all can see the preacher. Considering that this is the beginning of it, and that only two weeks were taken to clear the ground and make preparation, it is wonderful that so much building was done and so many families enabled to tent during the meeting. Centrally located, easily accessible from all parts of Bayou Rapides, and all points on the T. and P. R. R., the large crowds in attendance this year will be doubled or trebled next year, and, doubtless, all the circle around the tabernacle will be built up and occupied by tenters. We met at this camp Revs. C. M. Lyons, P. C.; B. F. White, George Jackson, Franklyn N. Parker, F. D. Van Valkenburgh, C. Briscoe Carter, John F. Foster, A. D. McVoy, and Hurst. Here, too, we crossed palms with Bros. Pickles and Brewer, mighty in prayer and song. The Sunday audiences overflowed the tabernacle, and when we left on Monday morning we felt sure of a mighty victory being had that day. Sunday night the opposition was broken, and the altar crowded with mourners. The boys are fast developing into very effective preachers. We were glad to notice in their preaching the absence of all attempt at mere ornament, and the presence of a burning desire to tell the whole truth, hurt as it might, and to press upon their hearers the necessity of immediate acceptance of Christ. Methodism is still "Christianity in earnest," and Methodist preachers should be the most plain, practical, fearless and earnest of men.

J. T. S.

Kentucky Correspondence.

The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE circulates where twenty-two years of my itinerant Methodist-preacher-life were spent. This consideration prompts me to contribute, occasionally, to the columns of the paper; for I experience the delights of thinking as in communion with kindred minds of men who had genuine enthusiasm of life in the brotherhood of a ministry whose excellency and beauty are that in honor they preferred one another. This is not written in derision. It is not irony. I was taken to task by an Alabama brother for mentioning certain names so frequently, of the old Alabama Conference, in my correspondence for the papers, as though they were exceptional in respect of humility, self-renouncement and generousness. Father Stephen F. Pilley, Walter C. Harris, and Thomas S. Abernethy, Jr., were the names. My reply to him was that, these being dead, I could make free to declare my estimate of them; but of the living it were not so seemly to write unrestrainedly. Now, it may be allowed me to write of one whom many of the readers of the ADVOCATE remember, since she has joined the ranks triumphant.

On the evening of June 27, 1889, at the home of my son, Z. Jennings Cottrell, in Tavares, Lake county, Fla., at about eight o'clock, Mrs. M. Carolina Cottrell yielded this life for that which is unobstructed by disablements and weakness. I had been with her from June 4, and was flattered, occasionally, with what seemed promise of sufficient recuperation in her to justify bringing her back with me to Kentucky. That twenty-seventh day of June she seemed so calm! so clear in mind! so perfectly her own sweet self in expression of love to each of us, and to all of us, without a word, however, indicating that she realized that the crisis was upon her. The night came on, and she was sleeping sweetly. "Daughter," said I to Sue, "go up stairs and sleep. I'll call you up after midnight, and then rest, myself." She retired, and Henry Duncan, Jennings and I drew off into another room, just across the hall, that we might talk, and let the wife and mother sleep. In an hour, or less time, we three went softly back into the room, Henry Duncan leading. He passed round the foot of the bed to the opposite side, and, kneeling, took hold of a wrist. After a pause of about a minute he said, in a tone that mingled expression of as much pathos, resignation, and sorrowful regret as could possibly be blent in any voice, "It is all over now, papa!" I called for Sue from the foot of the stairs, and she came down promptly with little Flossie, Jennings' little daughter, and we five sat around for a time. Oh, God! He has his own blessed way with us! It is all in love! "Our Father! who art in heaven! Hallowed be thy name! Thy kingdom come! Thy will be done!" That was as far as our boy prayed, as he lifted his hand, in dying, at Bowling Green, Ky., on June 15, 1882, and then, letting his hand drop, passed out from suffering. John! How "mamma" and I had, since that terrible hour, come over and over again that prayer of our boy!—she listening, and I repeating it, as sorrow drew upon the ultimate fountains of our being! Now, again, it is the prayer?—"Thy will be done!" We took her across Lake Harris to Yalaha, and buried her in the cemetery by the church, where our sons, Henry Duncan and Jennings, had been officers for fifteen years. They first projected the building of it—made sacrifices for it through exceptionally severe ordeals. They were comrades along from childhood—Henry Duncan being my stepson, and Jennings being my son by a former marriage. Brotherhood, of the highest and holiest, is not conditional upon natural generation. Our son, Joseph, with his wife and three little ones, who live at Yalaha, were with us at the burial. Bros. Penny and Joiner, of the Florida Conference, conducted the funeral services at the church and at the grave—the ritual being all. Mrs. Cottrell, I apprehended, would so have ordered it.

Now, if it were possible for me to embody in words, and thus convey to others, the ideal of womanhood most transcendent, possible to the human mind, it would be no exaggeration in description of her. I write it most deliberately: She was the most exalted, faultless, attractive, benevolent, considerate, refined and cultured being I've ever known. This, too, is the verdict of others than I and our children, who have known her intimately. Not the slightest tone of cant, ever, in her religious manifestations; with most beautiful enthusiasm of life; philosophic, studious, reflective—wise! Her mother dying when she was a child, her father, Col. John Sims, of Lancaster, S. C., took her, with her older sister, to Philadelphia, and placed her in a school where she had advantages that were used with diligence and fidelity. Her former husband was a son of Col. William Duncan, of Philadelphia, one of the chief men of the city; and he, the son, was a gentleman of the first order—devoted to all that conserved the interest and welfare of humanity. Jennings' mother, who died two weeks after his birth (formerly Miss Lou Jennings), was in conduct and character like a flake of pure white light from out the central throne of the universe. So Mrs. Cottrell and I had the privilege of reciprocally exchanging expressions bordering on worship of these, our former companions, feeling that our union was but a continuance of those of the past. Dr. J. Marion Sims, her distinguished brother, of New York, deemed her all I've attempted to describe in this poor recital. If I've been free, in what is written, to a degree beyond what is usual, let criticism have its say. There are those in my mind's eye that I know will approve and mournfully enjoy the recital.

Recently there has been much criticism, in the secular papers, of a letter written from Nashville, Tenn., by a Mrs. Caufield, to a Topeka paper, in which she indulged in some criticisms of the South not complimentary. She spoke of a sermon she heard in McKendree Church, expressing her surprise that a preacher of the South should be as liberal—claiming the sermon as a Simon-pure Unitarian one. As it happened to be your correspondent who occupied the pulpit that day, it would have been gratifying to me had some one of the Methodist preachers, who expressed so much approval of the sermon, met the statement promptly with a denial that there was anything directly, or by implication, in the sermon that touched the issue between Unitarianism and Trinitarianism. The lady must have merely intended to say that the discourse was good enough to have been preached by one of her Unitarian ministers. Bro. F. M. Grace, doubtless, remembers the enthusiasm of Dr. John N. Bonnell, in Tuscaloosa, Ala., in 1857, over a sermon I preached on the "Trinity," in which I elaborated an argument for necessity of plurality of personality in Deity—an argument that I had evolved, or that I had dedneed, in the saddle, whilst on Spring Hill circuit, the year before. To Ralph Waldo Emerson, in his home in Concord, Mass., in 1873, I proposed the same, and the consideration he gave it was as grateful to me as was Bonnell's declaration that it had removed from his mind a difficulty. Through the years the argument has never weakened in my mind, but, the rather, has constituted the trellis over which the vine of philosophic, speculative and exegetical thinking and teaching has continued to climb, and clustered.

Sanctification.

There seems to be two distinct modes of attaining this great blessing. One is by sharp, distinct, successive leaps. The other, by gentle, but continued, progress; as after being converted, you "go on to perfection." With some the process is much like leaven hid in a measure of meal—gradually permeating the mass till the whole is leavened. Well, I am glad for the people to be sanctified; get it as they may. As there are two distinct modes of attaining this blessing (and we have the experiences of the best of men for testimony on this point), there are also two varieties of the blessing attained; and we have the lives of men before us to prove this position. In one variety the white robes of purity are worn with great meekness and modesty; the possessors seem shy of praise; they are afraid people will honor them too much. By their professions you would hardly know they were sanctified if you did not see it in their lives. The other variety flaunts the snowy mantle of holiness in your face on all occasions. They remind you of the little child that comes out before you Sunday morning dressed for church, and says, "Do you see my pretty new dress?" In sweet innocence she reveals her self-consciousness—not to say, pride. One variety seems to have no desire to force the conviction on the people that they are so good; but, on the contrary, when they have done all things commanded, they say, "We are unprofitable servants." The other variety seem to fear you will not believe they are sanctified; and that if you do, you will blame them for being so good.

In a meeting that I once attended several testified in about these words: "I am sanctified wholly, both soul and body; and I am not to blame for it, the Lord did it, the altar sanctifieth the gift." I did not suppose that anybody blamed them for being sanctified. But I did think them unfortunate in the Scripture quoted to sustain their position—that it was the Lord's work. In that Scripture there is not the slightest reference to the sanctified believer. It was to show the folly of men that were far otherwise. "Wo unto you, scribes, Pharisees, hypocrites: ye blind guides." You say, To swear by the temple is nothing, but to swear by the gold of the temple, is wicked. Is the gold in the temple (per se) better in any way than other gold? All the sacredness it has is derived from the fact that it is set apart in the temple for holy use. It "is the temple that sanctifieth the gold." How apparent the folly of your traditions, by which you break the commandments. Again, to swear by the altar, you say, is nothing, but to swear by the gift on the altar, is sin. The lamb offered there of itself is no better than any other spotless lamb of the fields. Its peculiar sanctity is derived from the fact that it is here offered. The altar sanctifies the gift. See the law, Exodus xxix. 29-37, and your folly is apparent. In this reproof of these hypocrites was there the slightest reference to the sanctified believer? Did the good people quoting this Scripture have some sort of figurative reference to it? I could not see the aptness of it. I have always thought the lamb on the altar represented the Savior, and to me it seemed strained to put themselves in place of the lamb, and make the altar mean Christ. Mr. Wesley says sanctification does not help the intellect; that after we are sanctified wholly we may err in judgment. I much incline to that opinion. I heard one sanctified man say that he was helped much in body; that he could endure more fatiguing labor now. That was a new feature to me.

T. S. WEST.

Camping by the Pacific Ocean.

Here we are at McFadden's Landing experiencing the novelty of living in a tent. The "we" consists of Rev. O. H. Duggins, pastor of New Port and Los Bolsa; Miss May, daughter of our presiding elder, Rev. R. H. Parker; my wife, our two little children, and myself. We are ten miles from our home in Santa Ana, for which this is the seaport and summer resort. Here are hundreds of acres made up of the purest white sand and broken, decomposed sea shells, deposited by the tidal waves, and separated from the main land by a narrow arm of the ocean, over which there is a bridge. The people from Santa Ana and surrounding country spend most of their summers here, for the benefit of the cool, salubrious sea breezes, surf bathing, and fishing. For a mile or more the tents are as thick as they can stand, within one hundred feet of the ocean. It is estimated that there are from five hundred to one thousand people here all the time. We have abundant supply of fruits and melons of all kinds. There is a wharf, built on piles, over five hundred yards long, extending to deep sea, where vessels land to load and unload. This is utilized for promenading and fishing. Hundreds of people may be seen fishing on it at all hours of the day. They catch thousands of many varieties. I have eaten fish till, for once in life, I have enough. During the day hundreds of people, of all sorts, sizes, shapes and ages, may be seen in bathing costumes of many cuts and colors, sporting in the surf. I am persuaded that one who never enjoys a plunge in the ocean misses one of the most pleasurable sensations of living.

I am taking my first real vacation in a pastorate of seventeen years. My people had nearly all gone, and my congregations dwindled to a mere handful. Several advised me to close my church and take a rest; but, not feeling very tired, and still having some people to preach to, I refused to comply till I made satisfactory arrangement to have my pulpit supplied. Rev. J. H. Harwood, D. D., pastor of the Congregational Church, called on me and proposed that we unite congregations during the dull season. We agreed, and arranged that he should take his congregation to my church two Sundays, and then my people and I to go to his two; he to do the preaching at my church, and I at his. This is my two weeks of leisure, and I am resting. To one accustomed to the excessive heat of the Southern summers, and the severe labors of the ordinary itinerant preacher in protracted meetings, this is truly delightful. If our Southern people could be suddenly transported from the severe heat of their section at this season to Santa Ana, where we have the sea breezes, only slightly modified, and a temperature not averaging over sixty degrees, they would likely think it foolish to leave the place in summer. It seems to be the habit of the people here to go to the coast or mountains every summer, as they say "camping." This annual hegira is much in the way of the progress of the church. It disorganizes the working of every department; and then the free, easy, and sporting life led is not very conducive to spirituality.

This ocean scenery is truly grand. Thirty-five or forty miles out the landscape of Santa Catalina Island can be plainly seen, stretching along the coast fifty or sixty miles. Occasionally a steamer or yacht may be seen; most vessels pass beyond the island. It is delightful to sleep within the roaring, lulling sound of the ever-restless ocean at night, and in the daytime to watch the incoming and outgoing waves as they meet, each seeming to contend for the moment for the mastery; then breaking into spray, and glistening like a thousand mirrors in the sunlight. Here deep calls to deep at the noise of many waterspouts, inviting our admiration and veneration to him who separated the waters under the firmament, and gave to the mighty oceans their bounds, that they should not pass them. Language fails to depict the soul-inspiring grandeur of the scene. I was impressed with my little three-year-old boy's description of it. He had been with his mother, in company of some friends, for the first time to see the mighty Pacific Ocean. On reaching home he hastened to my study to tell what he had seen. All aglow with excitement, he exclaimed: "Father, we saw de ocean; and de water was slidin' up, and then slidin' down, and slashin' over!" He then raised his little hands, stretching as wide apart as he could; and, looking away in the distance, added, "And it was 'at long!"

Our Methodism in this Conference has been visited with revival power during the year in almost every charge, and we expect to add a showing of material advancement in all the departments of church enterprise by the session of our Conference, the second of October. My own charge will show an increase of forty or fifty members.

We have recently had a visit from Rev. Dr. Miller, pastor of our church in Little Rock, Ark. He gave us several most excellent sermons, and two lectures. He lectured on "Moses and Egypt," giving us the benefit of his observations on his recent trip to the East. He also lectured on temperance. His visit was a benediction to us all, and will do much to give the church abroad a correct idea of the situation here, as he will, no doubt, publish his impressions.

SEPTEMBER.

A change creeps over nature. A deep flush
Mounts to the maple-leaf; the air is clear.
The grapes are purpling, and a crimson blush
Spread o'er such flowers as deck the waning year;
Ripe apples bend the trees, while golden-rod
By roadside, lane, and meadow gayly nod.

Now whistlings of the quail are often heard
From buckwheat-fields, while, on the calm air, floats
The drumming of the partridge. Not a bird
Builds now a nest; but night is thrill'd by notes
From crickets near, and locusts' drowsy hum
That seems to say: "September time has come!"

The Japan Missionary.

MR. EDITOR: It seems to me that that part of our church which is within reach of your paper ought to supply the amount called for by Bishop Wilson within thirty days after the call was made. The measure of duty which even the Scribes and Pharisees acknowledged in the ways of contributing of their means to the service of God was to give one-tenth. The command of Christ is yet instant, thrilling and imperative: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." If we do not feel the call to go in person, ought not the church to equip those who do hear, and heed it with the means?

The barriers which shut out the light from the millions of Japan are down. As to whose was the hand that removed them, there can be in the Christian's mind no shadow of a doubt. Shall not those whom the Lord has made the steward of earthly riches render unto the Lord freely and without stint of what he has given, and be thankful also for the opportunity of sharing in this glorious work? Let us not resist the moving of the blessed Spirit who maketh intercession for us with groanings that can not be uttered, and whose silent voice we may hear, if we will but heed. Do we believe that Christ has redeemed us with the agonies of Gethsemane and of the cross, and shall we withhold from him his own when he bids us give? Brethren, if we have faith, let us show it by our works. LAYMAN.

(The writer of the above proves his "faith by his works," and proves it in an unmistakable way, for he sends a check for seventy-five dollars for the Japan missionary. Who next?—EDITOR.)

Honor to Whom Honor Is Due.

MR. EDITOR: I am rejoiced to see the strong and wise words you write in the ADVOCATE, of August 22, headed "Gov. Lowry vs. Sullivan." All moral, as well as religious, papers ought constantly to uphold such administration. We, of Mississippi, do, indeed, now feel a just appreciation of the manly and courageous action of our governor. But there is another official upon whom came the chief burden and the highest test of moral stamina, and whose action is little noticed—his name often omitted in the high eulogiums justly passed upon the "authorities" who acted so bravely. To Judge Samuel H. Terral, of Quitman, Miss., more than to any other one man, is our State and country—nay, the world—indebted for this full and fair vindication of the sovereignty of law. Surrounded by a community who appeared to be in sympathy with the prize fighters, some important officers of the court and the grand jury indicating the same animus, he yet rose to the height of his grand opportunity, and, by well-weighed, but uniquely bold aggression, he conserved the dignity of that court and of the whole State and nation, as few others in like position would have dared to do. The second charge he gave to that grand jury (which brought about the wholesome change in their apparent sentiments) deserves to be bauded down to posterity as a model of what a judge should do when need requires heroic action. All honor to one who worthily wears the name and part of the office of Israel's first and, maybe, greatest prophet! Sincerely,

J. P. DRAKE.

Old Books of Interest.

MR. EDITOR: Rev. W. T. J. Sullivan, D. D., has found "an old book of valuable Methodist history—'Minutes of the Methodist Conferences'"—and gives, in our ADVOCATE, of August 15, "the title page, preface, and Minutes of 1773." He mentions only "Volume the First." The Doctor proves his appreciation of the "old book" by proposing to "transcribe it seriatim for the columns of the ADVOCATE ... give each of your subscribers the opportunity to possess it in that form."

When Dr. Sullivan completes his labor of love in transcribing Vol. I., you can obtain copy from Vols. II. and III. I have Vols. I., II. and III., given to me in 1859 by that saintly woman of precious memory, Mrs. Martha E. King. These books were the property of her former husband, Rev. W. V. Douglass.

Volume II., "Minutes Taken at the Several Annual Conferences," from 1814 to 1820, contains "Constitution of the Missionary Society established by the last General Conference."

Volume III., in addition to the Annual Minutes from 1820 to 1831, contains "Alphabetical List of the Preachers in the Methodist Episcopal Church." J. A. B. JONES.

From the Work.

TILLATOBA, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We have just closed a most wonderful revival meeting at one of my churches. I don't suppose there has been a meeting in the country greater in results than this since the formation of the North Mississippi Conference. There were, at least, 165 conversions; 133 joined our church—127 on profession of faith, 6 by letter; 72 adults baptized, 8 infants baptized. The influence of the meeting reached many miles. After a few services we left the church, went to a beautiful little plot of ground between two ridges, where we could seat the multitude of people. There the Rev. E. G. Kilgore preached with wonderful power for six days. The community was greatly moved—shaken from center to circumference. Persons from seven to seventy years old professed conversion, joined the church, and began to work for the Master. A very few were left out; and these promised to consider the question of salvation until satisfied, and then unite with the church. Among the many wonderful successes of the meeting was the conversion of a steam mill—owner, hands, ox-driver, pond and all—everything. Mr. Editor, this pond-conversion may be new to many, especially as resulting from a Methodist revival service. Learn that this is a new community, situated between two other communities, Baptist and Methodist. Out of the eighty who were baptized, only eight were immersed. So you see that we are, upon an average, nine-tenths Methodist. When the time came for these eight to be plunged, Bro. Kilgore said right low: "I thank God that I was not sent to baptize, but to preach the gospel." Let me say right here, that the Rev. Kilgore is decidedly a success in a protracted meeting. He has great faith in God and the simple story of the cross. He is faithful, earnest, durable. My people love him, and would be delighted to have him with them at any time. I want to say for the encouragement of the "second blessing" advocates that our folks believe in it much, but more in the third, tenth—yea, fortieth blessing. On the last day the neighborhood resolved to raise six hundred dollars, and, with the church they had just built, to erect a larger and more beautiful house for worship. About four hundred of this amount was subscribed in a few minutes, and persons selected to raise the other. This is a new circuit—first year for both of us. We have six appointments, and at each we hope to have a church, and make better the old ones by Conference. God bless the ADVOCATE! RUFUS C. MOREHEAD.

SCOTTSVILLE CAMP MEETING.

MR. EDITOR: The annual Holiness Camp Meeting, at Scottsville, Texas, is passed, and left its impressions on the multitudes that attended. The camp has been considerably improved since last year. Among the improvements a nice cottage for the circuit preacher, and a back porch and bath-room added to the preachers' tent, and several new, substantial houses. The sanitary, culinary and commissary arrangements are excellent, if not approximating perfection. All credit to Bro. Winston and Dr. Wascom and their co-laborers and their wives—all of whom, I believe, claim and profess the blessing of "perfect love that casteth out all fear."

There must have been twenty-five or thirty ministers, including Bishop Key, in attendance; but the preachers' tent, with Charlie as porter, seemed ample to give all a hearty welcome to bed and board—even better than some of us have at home. The preaching was clear, definite and scriptural, "not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth, comparing spiritual things with spiritual." The doctrine and experience of holiness or sanctification as definite and distinct blessing, and witnessed unto by the Holy Spirit, and its cognate doctrines of justification, regeneration and the witness of the Spirit, formed the tissue and body of the sermons. There was deep digging at the core and root of sin, and the highest standard of practical godliness enforced as the legitimate issue of holiness. The plowshare of the gospel sub-soiled the heart. Original sin in its corrupting tendencies and villeness was laid bare, and the sovereign remedy of divine grace prescribed; and many precious souls stepped in and were healed. A goodly number came to the altar, sought, and obtained pardon, and immediately pressed on to entire sanctification. Glory to God! it was a salvation time. The testimonies and experiences were in rapid succession, and greatly edifying and comforting. Differing in some of the minutiæ, yet agreeing and attesting a definite work of grace in "cleansing from all sin," subduing the carnal mind, being "crucified with Christ," and filling the soul with peace, rest, love. The doctrines and polity of the Methodist Church were emphasized, and not a word or inuendo that was in any sense revolutionary. No come-outism. No fanaticism.

That movement that will make people pray more, pay more, read and study the Bible more, love more, and takes away all "bitterness and wrath and anger and clamor and evil-speaking," and jealousy and envy and selfishness, and leads to "in honor preferring one another," is certainly the desired, and the hungry, thirsty soul pants for it. May it not be that this revival in the church of scriptural holiness is the lever to raise up and lift the standard of Christian experience and practice among the people called Methodists? Oh, it was good to be there!

THOS. B. WHITE.

MANSFIELD, Louisiana.

ARCADIA, LA.

MR. EDITOR: We have held two protracted services on the Arcadia circuit, with good results to the church, as well as having some conversions and some accessions. The first at Simsboro, La., on the fourth Sunday in July. We have no organized church at this point, though I have been keeping up a regular appointment there on the fourth Sunday in each month for the past two years. We have now arranged to organize a church there, which will be completed to-morrow (D. V.). I believe there is a good opening for the building up of a strong church at that place.

My second meeting was at Pine's Chapel. Here the church was much revived and established. We had Bro. Parvin with us at our first meeting, and Bro. Upton at the last. They did us efficient service in the Lord. God will reward them.

We expect to commence a meeting in this place to-morrow night, to be continued, at least, two weeks. We need much help here. Pray for us.

JNO. A. MILLER.

JACKSON, LA.

MR. EDITOR: I invited Bro. G. D. Anders to come home with me from the Sam Jones Camp Meeting, and we began a meeting here on Monday night. It has quietly progressed with increasing interest from the first service. The good work has been mainly among the young, some of whom are of very tender years. Bro. Anders is one of the most effective preachers in the district; is an untiring worker, and wins all who get acquainted with him. If I could properly use the word "sweet" in describing a protracted meeting, I would say that this has been one of the sweetest little meetings I ever attended. We are forced to close August 23, as both of us must leave for other engagements to-morrow. The results may be stated, in part, as follows: Nine applicants for church membership, a number of conversions, and over thirty persons at the altar. Possibly we may renew the meeting next week. C. M'DONALD.

PLAQUEMINE BRULEE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: Last night we closed a meeting of twenty days at this place, which resulted in quite a number of conversions and eighteen accessions to the church. The unusually fine interest manifested by the older people, as well as the young, is a subject of comment and praise to God. The work seems to be thorough. The crowds attending were exceedingly large—many times unable (by twenty-five to fifty) to get even standing room in the house. Rev. William Schuhle has been with me five weeks, preaching his first sermon after reaching my circuit. Our meeting closed, leaving a great many seekers of salvation, some of whom have fully made up their minds to go on until they have found peace with God. Though the meeting has closed, we are not willing that the revival close. We are now ready to do our best work in the prayer meeting and in the class meeting service. Many of our best revivals fail to accomplish lasting good because they are not followed up by a good work in the social meetings of the church. There are young members to-day who are worth nothing to the church because they have no work given them by the pastor and officials of the church. Paul says: "Work out your salvation." To date we have had seventy-two accessions to the church in the circuit, and several seeking to be made perfect in love. I believe in "full salvation." I believe in "entire sanctification." I believe it ought to be enjoyed by all earnest Christians, and should be preached from every Methodist pulpit.

This week we have three days' rest. We all love the ADVOCATE and its editor. Wherever it is taken it is highly appreciated, and is an invaluable help to all its readers.

Just now Bro. Offutt Lyons, of Plaquemine Brulee, handed me a dollar for the missionary to Japan. Let every subscriber in my circuit give a dollar, and more, too.

R. M. BLOCKER.

HATTIESBURG, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: The Hattiesburg Methodist Church observed the week of prayer according to the programme. This is the only church on the circuit, so far as I know, where it was observed. Our pastor was not with us. The laity conducted the meetings, taking up in their order the several missions of the church, discussing them briefly, and making each the subject of special prayer. The attendance was surprisingly large, and, to me, I know it was one of the most profitable weeks of my life. This, I am sure, is the common sentiment of all who attended. Many who were not of our own or any church, indeed, attended. We had our boxes placed conveniently for the free-will offerings of the people. The aggregate contribution was twenty-five dollars, which was forwarded to Rev. I. G. John at Nashville, and duly acknowledged by his clerk, Bro. Holt. It will be a memorable week for Hattiesburg.

An Episcopal lady, who had attended one meeting and was too feeble to attend another (my near neighbor), came to my house and brought her offering—which was a liberal one—saying: "I want to do something for the missionary cause. Here is so much for bushand and myself; so much for each of our little boys, and so much for old man Albert, our cook (a negro). He says he wants to give something, too." These indices show the effect of the services.

Hattiesburg is a poor piney-woods town, but certainly her contribution will compare favorably with many places much more able to give. God bless the people! Fraternally,

H. J. HARRIS.

OLIVE BRANCH, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: After the Sam Jones Camp Meeting I came with Bro. N. J. Roberts, pastor of East Feliciana circuit, to assist him in some protracted meetings. Bro. Roberts is a sweet-spirited man of God. His people love him to a degree that I have rarely, if ever, witnessed before. So well in hand did he have the work, that the revival was comparatively easy. Bros. Tucker, of East Baton Rouge, and Cecil, of Wilson, were also with us, and did some excellent preaching. The interest was good throughout. Twelve or fifteen professed conversion; six additions, and five children baptized, was the result of five days' work. On Thursday the Spirit came in power. Bro. Tucker preached a good sermon, and Bro. Cecil went to the mercy-seat in such a prayer as I have not heard in many a day. Sinners trembled, and Christians, as on the day of Pentecost, acted as if under the influence of "new wine." The face of the pastor shone with ecstatic brightness, and the struggle that he made to maintain the "dignity of the cloth" was only a partial success. The joy within was so great that there was not room to contain it, and, in effecting its escape, overflowed and kindled a flame that spread from heart to heart. The embrace of love witnessed in and around that altar on that occasion was enough to attract angels from around the throne of God.

J. M. WHITEHEAD.

A TRIP TO WHITE CASTLE.

MR. EDITOR: Yesterday evening, Sunday, August 25, our pastor, Bro. Wimberly, and myself left here on the T. and P. R. R. for White Castle, a station about fourteen miles below Plaquemine; Bro. Wimberly to fill an appointment to preach the everlasting gospel, and to organize a Sabbath-school in that place. White Castle is a very well settled place; indeed, quite larger than we had expected to find it; but, sir, would you believe it, not a church for our people within miles! We speak of foreign missions, and right here in our midst, in our own country, there are thousands of men and women dying for the want of the bread and water of life.

We have had a glorious time. Quite a goodly number had gathered at the school-house in that place, which had been chosen in which to hold the service. Oh, if you could have been there with us, and could have seen with what attention those that were there listened to the Word of God as it fell from the mouth of our beloved pastor—there, where the old man, upon whom the evening of life had cast its shadows, and there where also the young, full of life and hope, all stirred up—surely you would have enjoyed it! Truly the Holy Spirit was there, and working; and when all kneeled in prayer, we could feel and realize that the soul was holding sweet communion with its God and Creator, and from the bottom of the heart went up a shout. Glory to God in the highest! Light is coming and dawning in this place, too.

From what I could see and hear yesterday, I am sure before this year is out another house of worship will be erected, whose steeple will point up to God, and its bell will call out to all: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden; I will give you rest." Knowing well the energy and zeal of our pastor when he is working for God, this will be a sure success. Pray for us and with us for this end, and God be blessed forevermore!

H. C. EMDE.

PLAQUEMINE, Louisiana.

BANNER, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I serve one of the largest circuits in the Conference—nine appointments well scattered, embracing part of Pontotoc, Lafayette and Calhoun counties. Of these, nine churches have had four meetings to date. Thirty-two conversions, 11 infants baptized, 8 adults baptized, 13 accessions to the church. The greatest good accomplished in these meetings was the awakening and quickening the church into a higher state of Christianity. The members have been greatly revived; and, as there has been so much said about the "second blessing," I believe I will say some have attained it away out here in the Calhoun hills. And, perhaps, some the third and fourth, etc. Notwithstanding all this, it has been said by old men in this country that the sinners seem to be harder to move than they ever saw them. And I lay it to the carelessness of us church members.

We hope to have greater success in the five meetings yet to hold. Bros. Lagrone and Bruner have assisted me greatly; local preachers; also Bro. Robert Cole, L. P., from Coffeeville circuit.

We are glad to hear that our beloved presiding elder, Bro. J. F. Evans, is improving, and will soon be with us again. Our prayer is, that he be restored to us soon. Preacher's salary well up to date; Conference collections behind.

People are greatly alarmed about the cotton worm. They have struck it very early.

May the Lord bless you and the ADVOCATE! I can't say my people are a reading people. Yours in Christ,

C. C. GRISHAM.

(We hope Bro. Grisham will educate them to read the ADVOCATE.—EDITOR.)

SAM JONES CAMP MEETING.

MR. EDITOR: The Sam Jones Camp Meeting began on Friday night, August 9, and ended Sunday night, August 18, 1889. The meeting was good from the beginning to the end. Rev. Jo. J. Jones came on the second day (Saturday), and remained until Thursday night. He preached seventeen sermons, generally three each day. The effect was wonderful and varied; some admiring, some condemning, some enjoying his hot thunderbolts at the common sins and follies of the day. His manner is not common to the pulpit, but is calculated to awaken an interest among the worst class of sinners. There were present during a part, or all of the time, a large number of preachers. I may classify as follows: Eleven visiting, eleven itinerants from this district, thirteen local preachers, and six from other denominations. The attendance was large from first to last, aggregating four or five thousand, and from Natchez to Baton Rouge. Vital godliness has been quickened in this part of the Mississippi Valley. There were fifteen accessions to the church, and a large number of conversions. There is a great interest being taken in this camp ground. Bro. Jo. Jones promised us that he and his brother, Sam, would both be with us next year. Prof. Gilreath, the musician who accompanies Bro. Jones, is an expert in his line. The organ from Gloster Church was put under the tabernacle, and we had the cornet, organ and vocal all united together, which was charming music. C. M'DONALD.

MR. EDITOR: We are having a season of refreshing and quickening on the Ebenezer circuit. Hebron was revived, and five were added to the church. Ebenezer had a season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, and many Christians were happy in God, and a religious interest was felt throughout the community.

Our third Quarterly Conference at Bethany was protracted nine days, with gracious results. Dr. J. J. Wheat, the presiding elder, remained with us three days, preaching with power and much acceptability. Nine were added to the Methodist Church. There was an increasing interest at every service. A widespread interest was felt among both saint and sinner. The last two nights we had a Pentecost. Closed with twenty penitents at the altar. Rev. Dr. Lyon and Clarence Perkins were with us part of the time, working efficiently. Nearly all of our churches are being put in good repair. I think all our collections will be full. "Glory be to God in the highest, shall be my song to-day." Yours truly,

G. W. BROWN.

LESSON XI.—September 15.

DAVID SPARING SAUL.
1. Sam. xxiv, 4-17.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.—Rom. xii, 21.

TIME.—B. C. 1060.
PLACE.—Engedi (Fountain of the Kid).

4. Behold the day of which the Lord said—How apt we are to misunderstand! (1) The promises of God. God had assured David that he would deliver him, and his men interpret it as a warrant to destroy Saul. (2) The providences of God. Because it was now in his power to kill him, they concluded he might lawfully do it. Cut off the skirt—Literally, the wing of Saul's robe, whether on Saul at the time, or whether laid aside by him while in the cave, does not appear certain. Privily—Saul had probably laid the cloak on one side, which rendered it possible for David to cut off a piece of it unobserved.

5. David's heart smote him—Probably David would have felt to much reverence for Saul to injure his robe if it had been actually on his royal person at the time; as it was, his heart smote him. Here heart is used for conscience, as often in Hebrew.

6. The Lord forbid—Far be it to me from Jehovah. These words of David show clearly enough that no word of Jehovah had come to him to do as he liked with Saul. Anointed—But the sole and simple maxim of David was, Do right, and leave the results to God; and that the results thus left to God were so generally favorable to him was not because of his political astuteness, but because his spirit, under divine enlightenment, so generally led him the right way.

7. Stayed his servants—Suffered them not (literally, tore them away). The word notes both the eagerness and violence of David's men in prosecuting their desire, and David's resoluteness in opposing them, as it were, by force, wherein he shows great piety, and generosity and loyalty to Saul.

8. My lord the king—A most loyal address, which David elsewhere used to Saul. It was fit to soften the proud heart of Saul. David stooped—As a token of reverence and loyalty to the king. An Oriental, when he meets a superior, kneels down and touches the ground with his forehead.

9. Wherefore hearest thou men's words—David is quite aware that there were flatterers at Saul's court who were continually inflaming his mind by their false accusations against David. This explains the language of many of the Psalms, as, for example, x, xi, xii, xxv, and many more. It has been thought by some, and with reason, that something more than the varying humor of Saul is necessary to account for his persistent efforts to kill David. And it is believed that a clue to this is supplied by the expressions of which David made much use, and by certain references in the Psalms, which imply that to a great extent he was the victim of calumny, and of calumny of a very malignant and persistent kind.

10. The Lord had delivered—David expressly represents it as a divinely ordered circumstance that Saul was put into his power. Mine hand—In my power. Some bade me kill thee—It is very doubtful whether the Hebrew can be so rendered. A mere change in the punctuation would give the sense expressed by the Vulgate, "I thought to kill thee." Lord's anointed—It is not the less true that had David suffered the king to be slain under these circumstances the result could not but have been most discouraging to himself. By this act David would set an example of disregard for the character and condition of the "Lord's anointed" which might be turned most dangerously against himself when exalted to the throne.

11. My father, see—Saul was David's father-in-law, and by this address the son of Jesse shows the king a child-like respect and reverence. It was a word of love that touched the heart of Saul, and brought the response, my son. To confirm what he said, he showed him the lappet of his coat which he had cut off, and said, "My father, see." In these words there is an expression of the child-like reverence and affection which David cherished toward the anointed of the Lord.

12. The Lord judge... the Lord avenge—This is not a prayer for vengeance, but expresses David's wish to leave the result with God.

13. Proverb—The whole verse is the proverb quoted, as is evident from the repetition of the words, my hand, etc., the use of which in verse 12 recalled the proverb to his mind. The meaning of this is only a wicked man could wish to avenge himself. I do not.

14. After whom—This is another argument to deter Saul from his course. Was it consistent with the dignity of the king of Israel to lead armies in pursuit of a weak and helpless individual like David? He hoped, too, to cool down Saul's envy by such humble expressions concerning himself. Dead dog, ... flea—A term of contempt and term of insignificance. By these terms David represents himself as one so contemptible and insignificant that it was beneath the dignity of Israel's royal monarch to pursue him.

15. Therefore ... judge ... plead ... deliver—Because Saul persecutes him unjustly as an innocent man, and foolishly as an undangerous man, because David, is unjustly slandered and persecuted as a malicious enemy of Saul, he appeals to the judge who alone is just and gives success to a righteous cause.

16. My son—In years, by kingly relation (a king the father of his people) and by marriage with Michal. Lifted his voice, and wept—Behold how that stern heart is melted! The hard winter frosts thaw fast before the kindly warmth of David's generous nature. The sign of this sudden awakening of better feeling is Saul's weeping aloud. Many mourn for their sins that do not truly repent of them; weep bitterly for them, and yet continue in love and pursue with them.

17. More righteous than I—On this psychologically so significant address follows the ethically so important confession. This proves that his conscience was touched by David's word, which had so sharply contrasted innocence and baseless persecution, righteousness and unrighteousness. So far as we know, this was the last meeting between Saul and David; and it is pleasant to think that, after all that had occurred, Saul's latest utterance to him was one of benediction; at once a vindication of David's conduct in the past and a forecast of his glory in the future.

Missionary.

Letter from Japan.

MR. EDITOR: I am sorry to have delayed so long in writing; but my time has been so occupied I have hardly time to pen a line to anyone. The past three months, it seems to me, has been more completely filled with constant work than I can remember to have ever had before. But it has been a work of great peace and joy to me.

In the month of April I opened work in a large city some thirty-five miles from Kobe, directly west of us, and, I am happy to say, now connected by rail. We had no acquaintances there, but went trusting in the Lord. We had heard that there were some persons interested in Christianity in the place, but we did not know them. After trying to secure several places and not succeeding, we made it a subject of prayer, and the Lord in a wonderful manner directed our steps to the house of a family who were reading the Bible and seeking after light and salvation. The husband and the wife not only offered to rent their house, but invited me into their family to teach them about Christianity, and to make their house my home. There I found the wife reading the Bible with six or eight others every night, her husband being in Kobe. I had met him, and it was from him I had first received the invitation to go to his home and stay as long as I liked. I felt the Lord was directing my steps, and was giving me an open door among these people. Day and night for more than a week I had the pleasure and the privilege of teaching this family and some six or eight others while an inmate in the family. And after going to our hired house, which belonged to this family, we still kept up the meetings there, as well as in our own church, and the Lord greatly blessed the work.

In the early part of May I had to go to another part of my work, some two hundred and seventy miles distant, from which there was an earnest call. I spent some ten or twelve days among them, baptized two adults and two children, and received eleven on probation. When I left there the church seemed greatly revived and strengthened.

From there I went to another city, about twenty miles distant, and there I baptized two adults and received seven on probation. I found in this city, or town, a most remarkable work of grace. We had one church member there—a teacher who had been laboring among his friends while carrying on his school work. Almost the whole town seemed to favor Christianity. The leading man of the town invited me to his home to teach his family and neighbors something about Christianity, and there in his house I met some fifty or sixty people and talked to them about two hours. He came to see me several times and expressed his sincere thanks that I had visited his town. I was told that two-thirds of the people favored Christianity and would soon embrace it, if they had opportunities to hear and understand. The Buddhists have done much to oppose Christianity; but I hear their opposition has resulted in good.

From this town I visited another part of this large island, and quite away into the interior. There I found the people extremely ignorant of the truths of Christianity. They had never heard of the true God or of the name of Jesus. For four days and nights I tried to teach them and lead them to Christ, and the Lord greatly blessed the word spoken. My two rooms at the hotel were crowded a good part of the time. Some officials, some Buddhist priests and Shinto priests were present. More I found one of the officials had organized a temperance society, and had about thirty members. Many of these people are just ready to accept of Christianity, for they have no more faith in idols. Oh! that we had a missionary to go there and reside among them and tell them the way of salvation! They begged and pleaded with me to stay with them, but I could not. Oh! my heart yearned to stay longer when on the morning I was leaving many men and women came to the hotel to beg us to stay. Many of them followed some distance out of the town to bid us good-by, and begged us and earnestly entreated us to come to them again. Some of them have since written to me to send them Bibles, and earnestly entreating me to come again. Two or three have written me they are coming to Kobe to study the Bible. Oh! how I wished it were possible to multiply myself, or, rather, multiply my usefulness among them! The work in other parts of my district was needing help, and I could not stay.

Dear Christian friends, what ought we to do when this people are holding out their hands and begging for the Bread of Life? You dear Christian friends in Mississippi and Louisiana sent us a good and useful missionary last year in Bro. J. C. C. Newton, and now I see you propose to send another. Thank God for this, brethren! Let us ask God, in faith, to send us the help by putting it in the hearts of his people everywhere to give of their means to send another missionary to these people. The people want the gospel; but how are they to get it unless someone takes it to them? These are Macedonian calls to God's people everywhere for help. The people are holding out their hands to Christian people for the gospel, while they are sinking into their graves without hope. Delay not, brethren; but send with all speed the help that is needed, and may our God help before it is too late!

Your brother in Christ,

J. W. LAMBUTH.

(What a loud call this is! Dear readers, send on your tens and fives and ones, that we may help this self-sacrificing missionary to answer the many calls that come to him. Amen!—EDITOR.)

Temperance.

NOT AN IDEA IN BEER.—Theodore Roosevelt, the rising young statesman of New York, made the following shrewd observations as he eyed a glass of lager beer while visiting Milwaukee recently: "Do you know that there is not a thought in a hogshead of beer; that they is not an idea in a whole brewery? I mean," continued the New York politician, "that nothing of merit was ever written under the inspiration of lager beer. It stupefies without invigorating, and its effect upon the brain it to stagnate thought. I am simply comparing stimulants. I shall wait and see if any man can write anything who has a drop of beer in his system."

The high-license system of Boston has had the effect of reducing the number of saloons in that city, but the bar facilities of the large number of drinking places left have been greatly increased. Many saloons have lengthened their bars and added to their supply of glasses, seats etc.; others have rented additional room, and all have increased their custom to such an extent that the fallacy of high-license diminishing the sale and consumption of liquor is so plain that he who runs may read.

Unintended testimony is often the best. Such is that of real-estate men who in describing the attractions of localities where they have property to sell, make emphatic the absence of all saloons, or other places in which liquor is sold. They know well that nothing damages property so much as the vicinity of these centres of poisonous influence. It is a testimony for radical temperance measures, unintentional, but just so much the more to be valued.

Seattle, Washington, people are convinced that prohibition does prohibit. During the closing of the saloons after the fire, at the mayor's proclamation, the town was so orderly and quiet that the work of rebuilding was carried on without interruption. Now the saloons are re-opened, and on the first day there were thirty-five arrests for drunkenness, more than for the entire time of prohibition.

Connecticut has passed a law requiring the removal of all screens interfering with the full view of a saloon from the street. Every State should enact a similar law. If that were done, the saloons would not have so many youthful and "respectable" patrons. The screens greatly assist the saloon-keepers in securing new victims.—Western Christian Advocate.

Boils and Pimples and other affections arising from impure blood may appear at this season, when the blood is heated. Hood's Sarsaparilla removes the cause of these troubles by purifying, vitalizing, and enriching the blood, and at the same time it gives strength to the whole system.

A Mississippi town of 7,500 inhabitants provides a large number of saloons for the men to get drunk in, but has repeatedly failed to sustain the existence of even one ice-cream parlor for the refreshment of wives and children. The same stream of money could not flow in two opposite directions.

Take Hood's Sarsaparilla 100 Doses One Dollar

The Chief Reason for the great success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is found in the fact that Merit Wins. It is the best blood purifier and actually accomplishes all that is claimed for it. Prepared only by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Briefs.

No one can object to John Wesley's definition of perfection: "By perfection, I mean the humble, gentle, patient love of God and our neighbors, ruling our tempers, words and actions."

From the Southern Churchman we clip the following in regard to the statistics of the Episcopal Church, in Mississippi:

The journal of the convention, among its statistics, gives the following: Clergy, 31; churches and chapels, 60; rectories, 16; baptisms, 380; confirmations, 284; communicants, 2,682; Sunday-school scholars, 1,770; contributions, $34,745 68; value of church property, $304,740.

The Los Angeles Christian Advocate says: "There are more church letters at the bottom of old trunks in Southern California than there are names on the church books." What good accrues to a man or woman in keeping the evidences of church membership hidden from the world and the church? Are there not many such "quasi members" in Mississippi and Louisiana?

A disgrace to Louisiana is in the fact that during the recent political campaign in the Third Congressional District both parties have held meetings on the Sabbath. One of our Mississippi exchanges says in regard to it: "Louisiana lacks a good deal of being civilized yet. As far as we know, Louisiana is the only State in the Union where such a thing is tolerated." It is, indeed, a burning shame that such a thing is possible. It is a disgrace to the committees who managed the campaign.

Can any of our works come up to this? There is a circuit in the Holston Conference of which the following are some of the items:

Thirteen hundred members, 13 preaching-places, and 12 houses of worship—these so close together that the preacher can reach any of them from the parsonage on Sunday morning; 15 Sunday-schools, with over 1,300 scholars; 11 local preachers, 12 exhorters, and nearly 100 class leaders; 166 members of the Quarterly Conference, and other things in proportion.

The name of that circuit deserves to be mentioned. It is Elk Creek circuit, in Grayson county, Virginia.

The Southern Churchman, in a thoughtful article on "Educated Ministers," closes with this wise paragraph:

The clergy of to-day are much tempted. There are so many papers and magazines and books full of interest, too, that we are moved to devote more time to "current literature" than to the oracles of God. The church has learned much, but the church has not gotten to the end of revealed truth—no, not by a great deal. "I am persuaded," said the old Puritan, John Robinson, "that the Lord hath yet more truth and light to break forth from his holy mind." "Emphasize biblical theology," wrote Dr. Hitchcock in his volume of sermons, that has already passed through several editions—"emphasize biblical theology. We are only just now beginning to appreciate the importance of it or to understand its scope. It is the grandest thing I see in the horizon anywhere all around us. What does the Bible teach—what exactly? What did God, through his prophets, say to the old Hebrew people? What did Christ and his apostles say in Palestine, in Asia Minor, in Greece, in Italy?—Ascertain and then interpret the utterances. This is the path and this is the sign by which to conquer."

The corner-stone of the new edifice of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Gretna, La., will be laid on Sunday, September 8, at 4 P. M.

HENRY H. AHRENS, P. C.

A Place for You.

Never did sweeter words fall upon human ears than: "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you." The Son of God, pressed with the awful weight of a world's guilt, and travailing with the birth-throes of a world's redemption, and seeing with undimmed vision the fierce tragedy of the morrow, through whose furious fires he must go, yet spends his last evening in instructing and encouraging and comforting the hearts of his faithful, but weak disciples. The reader of the Scripture who fails to appreciate the significance of that last evening with his disciples fails to see the most beautiful side of the character of the Savior of sinners. The Master, putting aside for the time his own great heartache, looks upon the future of his disciples, and utters a promise which shall cheer them through all the days to come. Forgetting his own woe in his sympathy for them in their coming woe, he speaks words of comfort for all time. His own bruised and breaking heart pours itself out in a stream of consolation, whose unfathomed sweetness his disciples of 1800 years have not yet exhausted.

"I go to prepare a place for you." What a precious promise! There is no promise which brings more comfort, which fills the heart with a deeper peace, which inspires more joy, which lightens more of the burdens and sweetens more of the afflictions of life, than this one. No other promise so strengthens the Christian for life's duties, so fortifies him against temptation, so enables him to bear crosses, so encourages him amidst trials, as the promise of a "home in heaven" prepared by the skillful and loving hands of Jesus. In all the Word of the Lord there is no sweeter statement, no more consoling thought to those who have buried Christian friends, than that Christ, the Lord, prepared the mansions for them in the eternal world, and they have gone before to possess them. The Christian's faith in this statement of the Lord grows stronger with each reading of it, and produces each time a keener appreciation of the blessedness of the promise it contains. His hope is ever hovering over these precious words of the Savior, and continually extracting from them more and more of their heavenly flavor. In this blessed process, somehow, he finds life's work is lightened, life's sorrows alleviated, and life's rough places smoothed. And when he buries his friends, who have loved God and "served their generation according to his will," there is in these words the assurance that they have entered into the "mansions prepared" for them. The toils of the day are ended, the privations of time have ceased, the perplexities of life are all past, because they are at home in the places prepared for them.

And who can describe that building? Whose pen can give an adequate description of the "place prepared" by a loving Savior for his loving disciples? Of one thing we may be assured: He who made the earth so beautiful, and stored up in it everything necessary to the comfort and well-being of his creature, man, will not fail to draw upon his exhaustless resources to prepare and furnish a residence for those who have been redeemed by his own blood, and whose characters have been fashioned after his own model by the perfecting work of his own Spirit.

"To prepare a place for you." Is it for you, dear reader?

Sir Humphrey Davy said his greatest discovery was "the discovery of Michael Faraday." He helped the young man to development and usefulness and distinction, and you, reader, may do the same thing.

A School-Ma'am's Outing.

If one has once spent any time in Tennessee, there is always a longing to return. This longing led me to board the train one hot July day for that charming place—Monteagle. It is the typical Southern Chautauqua, and on that mountain is to be found the most delightful society. It is truly refreshing to be in any place where everything seems to have been done for your pleasure alone; and the people at Monteagle have the knack of making you feel this way. One may even follow his "own sweet will," and still feel he is contributing to others' enjoyment. Never was a richer intellectual feast spread before the people than this year. Leaders in thought and action appeared before the people, and thrilled them to greater deeds by their utterances. Besides the platform speeches, lectures, concerts, etc., which kept us going all the time, there was the regular school-work. The advantages were superior. For a mere pittance one could take a six weeks' course in mathematics, English, French, German, Latin, Greek, science, music or cooking. The schools were attended, for the most part, by teachers who had come upon the mountain to rest, but availed themselves of this opportunity for an interchange of thought; thus broadening themselves, and gaining a deeper interest in their work.

As a social centre, Monteagle has its peculiar charms. It has never attracted the society people; but the preachers, teachers, and the parents interested in the best development of their children, are always to be found there. Every man was either a preacher or a teacher, and nearly every woman was seen with a book in her hand, trudging to some class or lecture. One of the most social places was the restaurant. One of the professors, in bidding farewell, went so far as to say he had done his best work there.

Monteagle is 2,200 feet high, and the scenery round about is beautiful. The most noted places are Table Rock, Alpine View, Bridal Veil Falls, Palisades, and Saltpetre Cave. And they could not be more appropriately named. Everyone goes to Bridal Veil Falls; and after a rain it needs no stretch of the imagination to see a veritable bride before you in all her snowy beauty.

Near Monteagle is that charming summer resort—Sewanee. And a more picturesque little town it has never been my pleasure to see. There is situated the University of the South, and the students are decidedly one of the greatest attractions of the place. Else why would you find so many young ladies summering there?

Tracy City, six miles beyond Monteagle, is noted for its coal mines. A trip through them was something very novel to a Louisiana-bred woman. To some the atmosphere is very oppressive, and the trip really dangerous; but I risked all, thinking the end would justify it.

From Monteagle I joined an excursion to Lookout Mountain. We arrived in Chattanooga about one o'clock, and took the Broadguage road up the mountain. It makes a roundabout route, thus enabling one to get a splendid view of the scenery. The Electric Incline goes right straight up the mountain in a few minutes. Lookout is fast becoming a popular summer resort, and the people of Chattanooga, realizing this, have begun to build and take their families up there for the summer. A company is building a magnificent hotel on the summit of the mountain. It contains six hundred rooms, and will, no doubt, make that a very popular place. The view from Lookout Point is grand. Below we see the miniature city, the winding river with its deeply fringed banks, and the beautiful farms stretching across for miles and miles, and mountain after mountain, until the horizon comes to our relief and shuts off further gaze. Our guide assured us we could see seven States from that point; and, in fact, pointed them out to us: Kentucky, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Virginia and Alabama. The Lookout Mountain Hotel is built just below this point in the side of the mountain; and as you look upon it, it seems terribly insecure. Very near this point are Pulpit and Umbrella Rocks, and a little further on Roper's Rock, which gets its name from the fact that a Mr. Roper killed himself by jumping from it. There is a strange and cruel fascination about the valley when viewed from so distant a point; so is it any wonder that some are drawn to it, and in a mad moment seek to reach it? The next places we visited were Grand View and Saddle Rock. There is said to be a Natural Bridge on the mountain, which vies with the one of Virginia for its great beauty; but we did not go there.

In all of our mirth that afternoon we were reminded of the "inevitable fate of all" by a lonely grave on the mountainside. It has been there for years; and although the site is a beautiful one (suggestive of a long, quiet rest), it is very sad to think of so lonely a resting-place. It was a matter of no little speculation as to the cause of its being there; but we could get no definite information.

It was our desire to see the sunset and view the city by night; but trains stop running at six, so we had to leave without seeing it. We spent that night in Chattanooga, and took the early train next morning. As we left, we had a splendid view of the mountains wrapped in the grey clouds of morning.

There is one sad fact not yet related: This most glorious place has not escaped the advertiser, and in the most conspicious places are to be seen flaming notices of some patent medicine.

But everything delightful has an end, and so had my stay in Tennessee. After flitting about Nashville and Gallatin a week, I bade adieu to those charming scenes, and was soon speeding through Alabama hills to Louisiana swamps. Something, or everything, made my outing a delightful one.

SCHOOL MA'AM.

Lake Camp Meeting.

BY "GILDEROY."

I am just home from the Lake Camp Meeting—in Newton county, in the bounds of the Mississippi Conference. I had to lie over a day in Jackson, both going and coming. A day around a hotel in a strange place is terribly long to me. I found my way to the Methodist parsonage, and to the home of Bishop Galloway, where the time passed pleasantly away. Dr. Black is a white man, and a genial, Christian gentleman; full of zeal for the church, and a good companion all the time. Bishop Galloway is given to hospitality in a royal way—the way commended in the Word of God.

The town of Lake is fifty-five miles east of Jackson, on the line of the Vicksburg and Meridian railroad; and the camp ground is two miles north of the town in an oak grove. The ground, a sixteen-acre lot, has been turned over by the church to the Patron's Union, an organization among the farmers and working classes generally. The church retains the right to hold the annual camp meeting. The union has put the grounds in good condition, and contemplates other and larger improvements next year. There are about fifty tents, all plank houses, some of them two stories high, and nearly all with good plank floors in them. A large three-story hotel stands in one corner of the square, and it is said to be capable of sleeping comfortably three hundred persons. The grounds are fenced in with wire, and a lot of seven acres near by is enclosed in the same way for the accommodation of stock. The water supply is obtainable from wells on the grounds, and some of it is mineral, and said to be very healthful. A large pool furnishes water for the stock. The Patrons of Husbandry hold an annual camp meeting here for the promotion of agriculture, horticulture, stock-raising, and such other industries as tend to build up the country. It is really a midsummer school of husbandry, and can not fail to result in much good. If nothing more, it will draw the people closer together. There is much in this. Taken all in all, this is, by far, the best-arranged and best-managed camp ground I have ever seen. The congregations were large, and the best-behaved I have ever seen. There was no occasion to reprove or even check anyone during the meeting. The people gave profound attention to the preaching. The preaching was done mainly by the presiding elder, Rev. P. A. Johnston; Rev. J. S. Parker, Rev. W. W. Simmons, Rev. W. W. Cammack, Rev. —. Henry, a local preacher, and Rev. Dr. Keen, of the Presbyterian Church; and it was edifying, instructive and stimulating. Of course, your correspondent had to splice in and help out when the others would not preach. Conviction for sin, repentance, faith, justification, regeneration, the witness of the Spirit, and holiness of heart and life, were the themes dwelt upon. The trumpeters gave no uncertain sound. There was no hair-splitting, no sky-scraping, but plain, old-fashioned gospel preaching from the first to the last. In a ministry of thirty years I have never known a time when the old fundamental doctrines were more plainly and powerfully presented than they are now. Holiness, as a Bible doctrine, and as the privilege and obligation of every child of God, received marked attention and emphasis in every sermon. Whatever may be said to the contrary, Methodist preachers understand that they are sent of the Lord to spread scriptural holiness over the land. Sin and salvation—salvation from all sin—is the burden of all their preaching.

The pastor, Bro. Caldwell, will give you the results of this meeting. I left before it closed. The religious and social features of the occasion were delightful indeed.

As I came home, I spent a day with Dr. Black and Bro. Little, P. E., of the Jackson district. The last-named is Little in nothing but in name. I attended prayer meeting at Dr. Black's church, and found fully a hundred and fifty persons present; and I asked, "How is this?" "We owe this to Sam Jones," was the reply; and I said, "God bless Sam Jones!"

Another Missionary to Japan.

Our fund to send another missionary to Japan is growing gradually. Why should it not grow faster? Have you sent your $10? Can't you spare that much to help the Lord's cause on this line? Won't you send it right away? Who next? The following have contributed up to going to press:

Reported previously	$395 50
Mrs. J. M. Johnston (collected)	5 00
A Layman	75 00
Mrs. G. F. Patton	2 00
J. A. Wetherbee	10 00

Notice.

Any pastor and church desiring the fall session of the Mississippi Holiness Association will please address W. M. Adams, president, Holly Springs, Miss., or T. A. Bottom, secretary, Victoria, Miss.

Notes.

The difficulties of pastoral visiting in the country, and the perseverance and pluck necessary to overcome them, were well illustrated when a brother in our office the other day stated, that he rode on horseback sixty miles and spent two days in visiting four families, and one of them not at home.

The combined Protestant churches of Meridian, Miss., have perfected arrangements to erect a tabernacle for Rev. Samuel Jones' meeting in November next, which will seat about eight thousand persons. They will have the hearty co-operation of the municipal authorities and citizens at large.

Madam de Stael, when complimented on her marvelous musical attainments, said: "It is not of these I boast; I glory in having seventeen different trades, by either of which I can win a living."

We imagine that seventeen trades would be too many for the average Southern girl. Sixteen is enough for her.

Ex-President Bush, in his charge to the young ministers ordained at the recent Wesleyan Conference, told them to remember that it took a lifetime to make a good preacher, and with some, unfortunately, one lifetime is not sufficient for the purpose. In regard to pastoral work he said, "Visit or vanish."

The man who invented lucifer matches also invented wool-carding machines. The former, though in universal use, never brought him in any money. The latter have made him one of the richest men in England. He is Mr. Isaac Holden, a member of the British House of Commons. He discovered the principles on which matches are made while a school-teacher, teaching his pupils chemistry.

Bishop Hendrix, writing in the Nashville Advocate, of the Denver Conference, says: "There is now a desire on the part of some for a division of the Denver Conference as it stands, and the making of a Colorado Conference and a New Mexico Conference." That is evidence of growth in our work in the West. The Bishop's letter gives evidence of his own hopeful view of our future in that great and growing country. One stage of growth is seen in the reproductive power of our ministry there, five preachers having been admitted on trial at the late session of the Denver Conference.

A writer in the Independent, in a long article in favor of the revision of the Presbyterian Confession of Faith, has this significant paragraph:

At the time of the meeting of the last General Assembly I asked one of the commissioners, an aged minister, over seventy years of age and now a pastor, what he thought of a revision of the Confession. He answered: "I do not believe the doctrine of the Confession on reprobation, and never did." I thought I would ask the views of a director of the Princeton Theological Seminary, whom I supposed would be a non-reviser. His answer was: "It always gives me a cold chill when I read the chapter on the decrees. It ought to be changed."

We call the reader's attention to the advertisement, in another column, of The Century Dictionary. This is the completest work on the subject of English words that has ever been put forth. No pains of study or research, nor outlay of money has been spared in the production of this great work. It is a book which every teacher of English and every preacher, and, indeed, every reader, and every student of art or science or philosophy should possess. With it you have the key that unlocks many of the mysteries and opens the door to the many beauties of our growing language. It is the opinion of many far-seeing men, Mr. Gladstone among the number, that our language will in a comparatively short time become a universal language, and with this encyclopedic dictionary you will be furnished to keep pace with its widening circles of influence. The editor will take pleasure in answering any inquiries on the subject.

Dr. Hoss, writing to the Nashville Advocate about things in the Holston Conference, says:

There was one sight at the Wytheville District Conference which it did my eyes and my heart good to behold—a company of eighteen young men who are getting ready to enter the itinerant ministry. At least one dozen of this number will be at Emory and Henry College next year. The presiding elder looks after them all, plans for them, advises and helps them with constant solicitude. To assist such of them as are straitened in circumstances to procure a college education he has personally raised a large sum of money, and proposes to keep at work on the same line. What is such a man worth? How it would have rejoiced Bishop McTyeire if he could have been witness of all this.

"Such a man is worth" more to the church of the future than any mathematician can compute. He is putting in motion living forces which will influence for good the ages to come. Those influences will gather power and momentum as the years go by, and prove the truth of that Scripture which says, "Their works do follow them."

Personal and Otherwise.

President Fitzhugh and Dr. Murrah, of Whitworth College, gave us a call last week. Whitworth opens September 18, and the prospect of a large attendance is very flattering. Whitworth claims to be the best-equipped college in the Southwest.

Our mission fund for Japan is steadily growing. Read Dr. Lambuth's letter about his work in Japan, on another page, and then, in the name of the Lord, see if you can not give something to send a helper to that godly man!

The Texas Advocate reports the deaths of Rev. R. M. Shelton, of Belton, and Rev. J. Clark Smith, of Terrel, the latter a superannuate of the North Texas Conference.

One hundred and six years ago last Tuesday, the Commissioners of Great Britain and the Colonies signed the treaty by which the independence of the United States was secured! How we have grown since then!

One of our contributers persists in addressing his communications to this office to "Rev. Dr. Parker." Galloway and Carter have not yet come within his horizon. Alas! for fame.

Col. E. W. Cole, president of our Board of Missions, and family have been lately much afflicted in the loss of a daughter, Mrs. Louise Gaines, and a son-in-law, Mr. L. F. Benson. We offer our condolence to the afflicted family.

At last accounts Sam Jones was preaching with great power at Trenton, Tenn., to over 5,000 people.

A brother writes: "I love to work for the ADVOCATE. I recognize in it a great assistant in my work." If every preacher would only see it in that light, what a boom we would have!

If the brethren don't condense when writing obituaries, we shall be till Christmas publishing the deaths that occurred in August!

The New York Herald is the authority for the statement that our former superintendent of missions in Mexico, Dr. W. M. Pattersen, died of yellow fever, August 19, at Caracas, Venezuela. He was in the employ of the American Bible Society.

The Brookhaven Leader says: "The Methodist parsonage has been completed and is a thing of beauty." We congratulate the pastor, Rev. A. F. Watkins, and the Methodists of Brookhaven on their success. Who is going to succeed Bro. Watkins? Ask Bishop Galloway.

Rev. R. M. Saunders, president of the East Mississippi Female College, Meridian, Miss., has just returned to that city from Cambridge, Mass., where he has been recuperating from his recent injury. Bro. John L. Lewis states he is greatly improved in health and is prepared to resume the active superintendence of this college, which will open with a full roll of students, September 23, 1889.

A writer in the New York Advocate has an article of interest in which he advocates the establishment of a great Methodist University in Washington City, to counteract the influence of the Romish Church at the national capital.

Our four young preachers left the city, Monday morning, for Centenary College. About one hundred of their friends accompanied them to the depot to see them off and wish them a pleasant trip and a great success in their studies during the coming session of school.

That College Once More.

What are the presiding elders of the North Mississippi Conference doing about these educational mass meetings called for by the Joint Committee at their meeting, July 23? How many such meetings have been held? Wake up, brethren! Bishop Galloway must go to Mexico early in October, and we must get all the work out of him we can before that time. He is a willing worker and his heart is in this movement. Rally to his support and to the support of the college enterprise! The Joint Committee know you are interested, but we know also that the enterprise can not succeed without earnest, persistent effort.

T. L. MELLEN.

And Again.

So far of the nearly $30,000 subscribed to the endowment fund of the proposed Mississippi Methodist College, more than two-thirds, or nearly $25,000, have been subscribed by people living in towns. Have the country people no interest in this work? Are there no farmers with noble, manly bright boys hungering for an education? And are there no Methodist farmers, or only a very few, who are concerned about enabling such boys to obtain an education under Christian influences and at the very lowest cost, within the borders of our grand old State? If such things be, let them remember that we receive subscriptions in any amount from $5 up.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. W. S. Lagrone writes from Valden, Miss., August 28: "We have closed a meeting of ten days at Columbiana; about thirty conversions, nineteen accessions to the church, eight new family altars, and the church graciously revived. Have in cash and subscription on the collections ordered by the Conference all I have asked for. Have received over fifty persons into the church for the year, and one meeting to hold yet. The Lord be praised!"

—Rev. J. W. Malone writes: "I have just closed a gracious revival on Tippo Creek. This place was given to me by my presiding elder after the session of our last Conference as an extra preaching-place. A church-building being much needed, the people had started a subscription for that purpose last year. I have succeeded in adding enough to the amount already secured to put up and pay for a neat and substantial house. On the day of dedication we began a meeting which resulted in not less than fifty conversions and reclamations. The new register will show an increase from eight to forty-three members. Church officers have been appointed, and a good Sunday-school organized. My churches at Minter City and Strathmore are both doing well."

—Rev. L. Carley writes from Moss Point, Miss.: "A letter containing the 'wherewith' from friends who have gone before to Hoaling Springs, Ala., opens the way for me to go over there and rest (though I am not tired) and to recruit my health (though I am not sick). So my pulpit next Sunday will be vacant. But when I come back I promise to make up for lost time by preaching longer and louder for two or three Sundays. By that time we will have our new hymn book, and then it would do you good to hear 'em sing. Sickness, rain, etc., prevented a full attendance upon the services during the week of prayer and self-denial, but on Sunday the collection amounted to $47 75."

—Rev. H. P. Lewis writes from Benton, Miss.: "We closed our meeting at Midway, yesterday. Results: fourteen new members, backsliders reclaimed, the whole church quickened into new life. Thirty-nine in all added to the membership at Midway this year. Bro. Inman Cooper was with me, and did good work. God bless him and his! Up to date about one hundred and twenty have joined the church on Benton circuit. I do not know the number of conversions. Many family altars have been erected, and prayer meetings improved."

—Rev. R. M. Blecker writes from Long Point, La., August 30: "Yesterday we closed a meeting of six days at this place, with twenty-three accessions to the church, and as many conversions. Several family altars were erected, and the membership greatly revived. Arrangements were made for building a church, and $260 subscribed."

—Rev. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, D. D., writes from Centenary College, August 30, 1889: "It is pleasant to be at old Centenary once more, and find the prospects for the session, which opens next Wednesday, so good. Three new students came in to-day; six days in advance of the opening of the session, brought by Bro. C. R. Godfrey. Bro. George Anders has been conducting services here in our church, which resulted in nine being added to the membership. Hope to send you a letter soon."

—Rev. J. Wilson Brown, writing from Hays, Miss., September 2, 1889, says: "We closed a pleasant and gracious meeting of six days' duration at Cane Ridge Church, on August 29. The Lord was with us, the church was revived, some family altars erected, and seven precious children joined. Bro. N. B. Young was with us in the grace and power of the Lord. Bro. E. H. Monager gave us two good sermons on the last day. We serve kind and appreciative people here. Many favors and a good pounding are among past blessings. The future brightens."

—Rev. C. McDonald, writing from Jackson, La., says: "Rev. F. M. Featherstun, D. D., of Clinton, La., has been granted a respite for September by his charge, and he expects to spend the time with his family at his brother's in Kentucky. We wish them a pleasant vacation."

—Rev. W. H. Hill writes from Spring Creek circuit, Louisiana Conference: "I have just closed a meeting of five days' duration at Spring Creek Camp Ground, in which there was a manifestation of spiritual power. The church was wonderfully blessed and sinners brought under the Spirit's power. Verily, Spring Creek circuit is moving upward spiritually. I was assisted in this meeting by Rev. W. W. Monroe, a local preacher of this circuit, who did faithful service. I would say also Bro. Deramus was with us to pray and sing. May God bless the faithful laymen who are ever ready to assist in the advancement of his kingdom on earth! We have received twelve in the church up to date. We are working and praying to bring this circuit up and win souls for Christ. Amen!"

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhœa. 25c. a bottle.

EMORY & HENRY COLLEGE.

THE 53D ANNUAL SESSION WILL BEGIN SEPTEMBER 5, 1889.

The last session was one of the best in the long and useful history of the College. The order and general behavior of students was excellent; moral and religious influences strong, and admirable progress generally was made in studies.

GYMNASIUM and WM. MORROW SCIENCE HALL are finished and beautiful additions to the already lovely grounds.

Work of rebuilding the burnt "BYARS HOUSE" is in progress, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

The new SOCIETY HALLS will be commodious and elegant.

In addition to subjects heretofore embraced in the courses, thorough practical instruction will be given in Analytical Chemistry, Determination of Minerals, Assaying, etc.

NO HEALTHIER OR MORE BEAUTIFUL PLACE. NO MALARIA.

No saloons, no occurrences to distract the minds of students, no safer place for boys and young men. Charges very moderate. Every possible arrangement for the encouragement of young men of limited means.

MANSFIELD, LA.

One of the most popular and flourishing Institutions of the South. The Sixty-sixth Session opens September 11, 1889, and the Spring Term begins February 1, 1890, with an able and experienced faculty. Curriculum comprehensive. Instruction thorough. Advantages in Music unsurpassed, as in the best conservatories. The pianos are new and of the best make. The Techniceu and the Technichene are used to facilitate the work in the music department, placing this department beyond competition. Departments of Fine Arts and Industrial Arts under specialists.

The location is unsurpassed for beauty and attractiveness, and the school is celebrated for the remarkable record for good health maintained. The climate is the best in which to educate, and the place is the safest for girls. The main building is of brick, massive and commodious, with a large and well-shaded campus. Rooms large, well furnished, warmed and ventilated. Ample provision for the table of the best the market affords. All necessary comfort secured. Expenses very low and the school very economical. A new building with a large audience hall is in contemplation, and extensive improvements are in progress to make this the grandest institution in the State.

From the Professor of English in Vanderbilt University:

NASHVILLE, TENN., June 22, 1880.

For four or five years I have every year spent, at least, one day in the class-room of Messrs. Wall and Mooney's School. I have questioned their classes, and heard them recite in English, Mathematics, German, Greek and Latin; and I do not hesitate to call their work excellent. Better trained pupils it would be hard to find. The moral culture is equally good.

THE CENTURY DICTIONARY.

THIS great work, which has been in active preparation for the past seven years, contains a number of novel features, and combines in one a dictionary and a condensed and usable encyclopedia. It does not stop at mere definitions of words, but goes into particulars about things. The spelling, while resting on an independent basis, is essentially the so-called American; the system of indicating pronunciation is simple and easily understood, and the etymologies are treated more fully than in any dictionary yet published. It is a reference book, not only for the casual reader, but for the specialist also—the biologist, the architect, the electrician, the musician, the mineralogist, etc.—and for the business man.

We would like to make every reader of this paper acquainted with the plan of The Century Dictionary, and for this purpose we will send descriptive circulars free of charge, upon request, or for ten cents in stamps (the cost of manufacture) we will mail to any address a large pamphlet containing a number of specimen pages of the Dictionary, showing sample definitions in various subjects, as anatomy, law, botany, theology, gems, games, mechanics, physics with specimen illustrations, etc., etc. Address

Our Young People.

JUST LIKE THEM.

BY SYDNEY DAYRE.

"His mother's eyes, his mother's brow,
His mother's lips, 'tis plain to see."
"He is his father's self again!"
That is what people say to me.

I wonder which of them is wrong!
For how can both of them be right?
Could one small boy be like the two,
If he should try with all his might?

Like papa! If I ever grow
To be as strong and tall as he,
How learned, and how brave and true
And generous I ought to be!

And mamma—gentle, loving, kind,
And sweet and beautiful and good—
Of course, a boy would like to be,
Well, something like her, if he could.

So, if I should begin to-day
And do the very best I can,
Perhaps what people say to me
May turn out true when I'm a man.

Science, Homeopathically Prepared by Uncle Carlos.

Uncle Carl, as we called him, was our mother's youngest brother. I was one of the large circle of nephews and nieces for whom these scientific powders were prepared and brought to just the "proper attenuation."

Of course, our uncle ate and drank, read and rode, walked and talked as do other uncles; yet he lived, as he said, emphatically, in his delightful old library, which (I have, no doubt) equalled in beauty and interest "St. Elmo's," so elaborately described by Miss Evans. There, in the coziest corner of this coziest of libraries, with a real wood fire blazing upon the hearth, with his slippered feet resting upon the bright fender, surrounded by a bevy of gay, laughing, inquisitive, bright-eyed boys and girls, their faces radiant with anticipation of the good things they well knew awaited them, sat my dear old uncle when he administered these scientific pellets.

I, being the youngest of the group, always seated myself in the post of honor on his right, and there received the choicest preparations with the kindest and most loving attentions.

How those evenings still linger in my memory; and for this very reason it is, that I wish the young people, for whom I feel a great and constantly increasing interest, should have the pleasure and benefit of them.

There he discoursed to us most lovingly, learnedly and wisely in words our young minds could grasp; and if, when grasped, we could not see through them, he would explain so patiently and clearly that they would gradually become perfectly transparent.

It has occurred to me to offer a taste of these diluted scientifics to the young people, with the assurance, as do usually the advocates of homeopathy, that "they are perfectly harmless," which in this age of adulteration is more than can be truthfully said of many things. He even administered the nebular hypothesis, as the scientists term it, with regard to the creation of our earth in this delightful manner. Let me tell you how it was done. When we were all in our accustomed seats, quietly revolving his study chair so as to bring himself into "position," he said:

"In how many conditions is matter now found?"

We, who had just had a taste of natural philosophy, delighted to hear a question within the range of our possibilities, quickly answered: "Three: solid, liquid and gaseous."

"Very well. In what form is matter supposed to have been created?"

That question being entirely beyond our range, an ominous silence ensued, broken by the genial, inspiriting voice of our loved uncle, who said: "The gaseous!"

"Everything made of gas?" shouted the irrepressible Ralph.

"So the wisest of our philosophers have decided."

"Oh, tell us about that to-night, uncle; it seems so strange—rocks, mountains, even the 'everlasting hills' made of gas!"

"Even the 'everlasting hills,' my boy, once glowed with fervent heat, once gave light, perchance to inhabitants upon the moon; but we will begin at the beginning when 'God created the heavens and the earth, and the earth was without form and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters, and God said: 'Let there be light and there was light.'

Thus reads the Mosaic account; and after this manner reads the latest developments of science:

"'A nebulous mass without form, void, fluid, inert, dark; motion imparted, temperature rises. The nebulous mass emits light. Revolution commences, nebula becomes spheroidal. Planets begin to be evolved. Earth and moon take form as a nebulous spheroid. The moon separated from the earth, falling temperature. The earth becomes a sphere of liquid lava, temperature still falling. The earth becomes evolved below 1,000 degrees, is covered with a dark, solid crust and ceases to emit light. Day and night begin.' This is the "one day" of Genesis. No more creation since of matter or force.'

"That passage suggests thought enough for many evenings. Can you grasp it?"

"Hardly, uncle," we gasped, awe-struck by the thoughts struggling into our youthful minds, yet able to feel that there was something in it which made the first chapter of Genesis more interesting to us than ever before.

"Tell it to us in your style, uncle," said Ralph; "then we can understand it."

"My style can't compare with the scientists, certainly; yet it may be better adapted to the present state of your brain development."

"It is," meekly replied the wondering boy.

"Sing the Happy Land Song!"

That is what our children used to say when they wanted to sing that old hymn, "There is a happy land, far, far away." Hundreds of children's voices who sang that melody on earth and the sweet words accompanying it, have gone to that "happy land," and are singing to-day before the throne. An incident connected with the singing of this hymn is told in the life of Thackeray. One day, when he was walking through a "slum" district in London, he suddenly came upon a band of gutter children sitting on the pavement. They were singing. Drawing nearer, he heard the words, "There is a happy land, far, far away;" and as he looked at the ragged choristers and their squalid surroundings, and saw that their pale faces were lit up with a thought which brought forth forgetfulness and hope, the tender-hearted cynic burst into tears.

That hymn was composed by Andrew Young, and he is now eighty years of age, still mentally and physically vigorous, and retaining in all its early freshness his sympathy with children. The hymn was composed in in 1838. The tune to which it is married is an old Indian air, which blended with the music of the woods in the primeval forest long before Sunday-schools were thought of. The hymn was composed for the melody. Its bright and strongly-marked phrases struck Mr. Young's musical ear the first time he heard it casually played in the drawing room. He asked for it again and again. It haunted him. Being accustomed to relieve the clamor of his thoughts and feelings in rhyme, words naturally followed, and so the hymn was created. Mr. Young happened to have his hymn performed in the presence of his friend, Mr. Gall, of the publishing firm of Gall & Inglis. It got into print, and has been translated into nineteen different languages. And yet the author has never received, and indeed has never been offered, a penny remuneration.—Selected.

Household.

Lovable Mothers.

BY HALFRED.

Somebody has said, "It is not what we do for our children, but what we do with them, which endears us to them," and observation and experience prove the truth of the assertion. As a rule, it is not the most self-sacrificing parents who reap the richest harvest of love and devotion.

Said a laughing mother to her careworn and overworked friend, "I never sew my children's buttons on the minute they drop off; I let them go for a day or two, and when I do put their clothes in order their gratitude is something good to see." Her friend sighed; gratitude from her children was something she had long since ceased to expect. Probably the speaker had no thought that her remark would be taken literally; it was only her whimsical way of stating her disapproval of a slavish subserviency on the part of mothers; and surely her happy, unselfish, loving children were bright witnesses to the wisdom of her creed.

It was my privilege, years ago, to be intimately associated with a family whose members were strikingly happy in their relations with one another. And yet the housekeeping was far from perfect. The meals were on time or not as suited the reigning domestic, and the children were often out at the elbows and toes. The mother was a great invalid, and passed days of pain and weakness in her darkened chamber; but her hours of comparative comfort were spent, not in darning stockings or washing windows, but in gay bandinage with her four boys, and in a joyous and eager participation in their games and plans. And, oh, how those boys loved their delicate little mother! They hung about her chair, kissing her hair and hands, and vying with one another in fulfilling her wishes. So happy and free were their relations that she could speak to them with as little embarrassment of their religious life as of their sports and studies; and so, hand in hand, they traveled heavenward.

Dear mothers, let us be cumbered with as little serving as possible, and "labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for the meat which endureth unto everlasting life."—Congregationalist.

It does not always add to the comfort of the household to have too high ideals—to try to "hitch your wagon to a star," as Emerson expresses it. We frequently see homes where the members are unwilling to exercise their individual gifts for the happiness of all, simply because their attainments fall below the highest standard of excellence. A daughter has a decided taste for music; but because she can not sing like Nilsson, or play like the infant prodigy, Josef Hofman, she refuses to touch the piano for the entertainment of guests. Her cultivated ear is annoyed by the least discord, and, therefore, no one dares propose a little informal chorus singing at home. The same is true with respect to other accomplishments. One may have real skill in painting, but nothing short of Ross Turner's water colors satisfies the fastidious judgment, and the brush is thrown aside entirely. Company can not be invited to the house, because its general furnishing, or the table service, or something else is inferior to what some one fancies should be. "Neglect not the gift that is in thee," is a good motto, but the gift need not be cultivated to such a degree as to check innocent and genuine enjoyment.—Exchange.

The best form of responsive service is that which consists in putting a good sermon into good practice.—Christian Register.

MANY A LIFE

HAS been saved by the prompt use of Ayer's Pills. Travelers by land or sea are liable to constipation or other derangements of the stomach and bowels which, if neglected, lead to serious and often fatal consequences. The most sure means of correcting these evils is the use of Ayer's Cathartic Pills. The prudent sailing-master would as soon go to sea without his chronometer as without a supply of these Pills. Though prompt and energetic in operation, Ayer's Pills leave no ill effects; they are purely vegetable and sugar-coated; the safest medicine for old and young, at home or abroad.

"For eight years I was afflicted with constipation, which at last became so bad that the doctors could do no more for me. Then I began to take Ayer's Pills, and soon the bowels recovered their natural and regular action, so that now I am in health."—Mrs. C. E. Clark, Tewksbury, Massachusetts.

Excellent

"I regard Ayer's Pills as one of the most reliable general remedies of our times. They have been in use in my family for affections requiring a purgative, and have given unvarying satisfaction. We have found them an excellent remedy for colds and light fevers."—W. R. Woodson, Fort Worth, Texas.

"For several years I have relied more upon Ayer's Pills than upon anything else in the medicine chest, to regulate my bowels and those of the ship's crew. These Pills are not severe in their action, but do their work thoroughly. I have used them with good effect for the cure of rheumatism, kidney troubles, and dyspepsia."—Capt. Mueller, Steamship Felicia, New York City.

"I have found Ayer's Cathartic Pills to be a better family medicine for common use than any other pills within my knowledge. They are not only very effective, but safe and pleasant to take—qualities which must make them valued by the public."—Jules Hauel, Perfumer, Philadelphia, Pa.

NATIAN—Mrs. ELIZA ANN NATIAN was born in Blunt county, Ala., October 29, 1819. She married, while young, Mr. Thomas B. Shearer, who preceded her to the glory-land. The latter part of her life she spent with her daughter, Mrs. Sallie Shell, in Houston, Miss., where she died, June 17, 1889. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in early life, and continued a devoted member thereof, until death summoned her to the church triumphant. Her husband was a Methodist minister in the local ranks, and they both were fond of the society of preachers. They had a room in their home in Alabama set apart for the preacher's use—the prophet's chamber. This was the preacher's resting-place when the circuits were large and only a few days to rest during the month. And when the preacher, weary and worn from his arduous labors entered this godly home, he received a cordial greeting and hospitable entertainment. So when his rest days were ended, and he again entered upon the work of the Master, he was revived in spirit and body, and quickened in zeal and energy. Unto them were born six sons and four daughters. Two of each preceded her to their heavenly home. She taught her offspring the way of holiness by example and precept, for the principles of godliness were instilled into their young minds and hearts, both around the family circle and in the Sabbath-school. Her devotion to her church did not weaken with her body, but to the very last she delighted to frequent the house of the Lord. And though disease had laid hold of her physical frame with an iron grasp, in the form of paralysis, she would embrace every opportunity of attending the ministry of the Word; and whenever her bright face was seen in the congregation the minister was sure of one prayerful and sympathetic hearer. Just as the sun arose, on June 19, her sun went down to rise in brightness and beauty in the glory-world. We laid her remains to rest by the side of her husband in the Odd Fellows' Cemetery in Okolona to await the resurrection of the dead, when, doubtless, the Master will say unto her, "Come, you blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." EUGENE JOHNSON.

GORTON—JOSEPH GORTON was born in Troy, N. Y., August 10, 1813, and died at Waterproof, La., July 23, 1889. Coming South when a young man, he spent most of his life in Natchez, Miss., and Waterproof, La., where honor and integrity characterized his business career. He was married three times, surviving his last wife several years. Religious impressions were early made upon his mind, but his first public profession was made in the year 1837. In that year an attack of yellow fever brought him near his grave, and he determined to give his spared life to the service of God. He at once united with the Methodist Church. Thenceforward his whole life was one of active, though unobtrusive piety, responsive to every call of duty. As a Sunday-school worker, class leader and steward, he was diligent and faithful. His faith, courage and zeal contributed no little to the reorganization of the church at Waterproof after the war, and ever since to its continued existence. In his own home, his godliness could not fail to impress those around him. Much physical pain and many misfortunes were endured with cheerful submission. In the minds of his children, ideas of goodness and purity are intertwined with every memory of their father. But his last years were his best. About ten years since his religious experience grew much deeper. He entered into closer communion with his Lord, and his peace flowed as a river. Little there was of profession, but the life grew more Christ-like. The Bible became more and more his joy and study, and prayer was the very breath of his soul. During the last few months of his life he suffered the most intense pain; yet there was never a murmur, but the language of praise and thanksgiving was ever upon his lips.

With his mind clear nearly to the end, his faith was unfaltering, and he seemed almost to look into heaven with open vision. His only fear was lest he should be too anxious to depart. At last the Master said, "It is enough;" and the purified spirit was released. "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace." A. G. D.

WHITE—The following resolutions were adopted by the Methodist Sunday-school of Homer, La.:

It pleased our Supreme Superintendent, on the fifteenth of July last, to take from our school and from among men on earth, our young friend and brother, CLAUD M. WHITE. Claud was a good boy, and we miss him from our Sunday-school and our associations, and we sympathize with his parents, sisters and brothers in their great bereavement.

We feel confident that he has been called to a higher sphere of life, and we are resolved to yield submissively to the command of him who doeth all things right.

PORTER—RUSSEL E. PORTER, son of John C. and Nancy G. Porter, was born in Kemper county, Miss., November 12, 1864. His parents moved to Lauderdale station, Lauderdale county, Miss., when he was about two years of age, at which place he remained until 1878 at which time he, in obedience to his parents, entered school at Marion, Miss., and remained there during 1878 and 1879. While there he joined the Methodist Church under the pastorate of Rev. J. M. Gan. During the years of 1880 and 1881, he attended the A. and M. College, at Starkville Miss. In 1882, and until September, 1883, he worked for his father in the store in Lauderdale, Miss. From a child he had had a great desire to make of himself an engineer. He began work on an engine on the M. and O. R. R., September 11, 1883. He was taken sick and had to abandon for awhile his loved employment. His friends persuaded him to abandon this work on account of the uneasiness it gave his mother. His mother, to whom he was very much devoted, died October 24, 1881. In September, 1885, he began work in the freight depot of the N. O. and N. E. R. R. He gave perfect satisfaction, as he had done elsewhere during life. His desire for an active and an exciting life still remained, and in the fall of 1886 he began working for the U. S. Express Company. He worked for this company for two years and six months as express messenger, to which he gave perfect satisfaction and had the confidence of his employers. He made friends everywhere; all who knew him were friends to him. If he had an enemy he was a stranger to the fact. He loved everybody and thought that everybody loved him. He was married to Miss Blanche Walker, January 30, 1889, by Rev. D. F. Guice.

He possessed a warm disposition that drew old and young alike to him. He was a devoted husband, and a friend to all. He possessed a generous disposition and a warm heart. Generosity was a prominent feature in his character; his hand was open to every call for charity. But this happy life must close. His train pulled into Meridian, Saturday night before the third Sunday in March, and after he had arranged everything save the pistol he took it from its resting-place, and, in some way, it slipped from his hand, falling on the safe, which discharged the same. The ball entered his body, and in a few brief hours this happy life closed. His spirit took its departure, and we hope one day to meet him in the city of the great King. D. F. GUICE.

STORY—JULIUS C. STORY, son of Joseph A. and Selina A. Story, was born in Walker county, Ga., October 13, 1871, and departed this life, at the residence of his father, near Arcadia, La., August 15, 1889, being nearly eighteen years old. Just four years previous to his death he gave his heart to God by faith in Christ, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. In his life and death he proved his conversion genuine. Always loving and obedient as a son, kind and affectionate as a brother, and faithful and true as a friend, he won the confidence and love of all who knew him. He was consistent in his integrity and devotion to God and the church of his choice. He loved the Sunday-school and the worship of God's house. A vacant chair in the family circle brings a tear of sadness, but the hope of the resurrection brings joy and comfort to loving hearts. God bless the bereaved!

JNO. A. MILLER, Pastor.

FARMER—Mrs. ADA E. FARMER was born June 3, 1866. She was married July 4, 1886; joined the Methodist Church in June, 1886. She lived a devoted Christian up to the date of her triumphant death, which occurred on the night of June 16, 1889. She leaves a husband and little child, together with numerous relatives and friends, to mourn her early death. She died of consumption, and suffered very much from weakness and coughing, but she remained cheerful and hopeful amid it all. It was a privilege to visit her and to see how calmly and peacefully she met death, and how joyously she looked forward to her heavenly home.

C. G. ANDREWS.

REGAN—JOSEPH REGAN died, August 11, 1889, of consumption; was converted and joined the church this year. GEO. H. GALLOWAY, P. C.

Napoleon gave his soldiers, after a famous battle, a simple medal, inscribed with the sentence, "I was there," and the name of the bloody field. Money could not buy from his veterans this little memorial of their part in the campaign of the great warrior. When the temperance warfare for "God and home and humanity" is over, may every reader of these words be able to say with a victor's joy, "I was there."

Jubilation.

Misery adds to misery, sometimes, in our endeavor to escape it. Presently we are confronted by disheartening accumulation: we know not where to turn and courage is almost gone.

But a beneficient providence opens the way, at sadly rare intervals, and then—Jubilation.

Here are a few notes of it.

Facts about Insomnia.

THOSE WHO ALWAYS PRACTICE PUNCTUALITY AND THOSE WHO DO NOT.

Are you afflicted with insomnia? Perhaps you have too much time for sleep. Perhaps you depend too much on sleep for rest and recuperation. For sleep is not the sole rest of used-up nerves. Sociability, congeniality and the enjoyment of good company rest the body quite as much as sleep. The dreary monotony of life in many a household, involving this tumbling into bed with the mechanical regularity of a machine at nine or ten o'clock in the evening, does not always rest weary bodies. "Early to bed and early to rise," does not always make a man healthy, wealthy or wise. Numbers of organizations are only capable of five or six hours' sleep at a time, and their early lying down to rest is often succeeded by an early waking up and a consequent restless tossing for hours preceding daybreak. The practicers of punctuality are often surprised after breaking their own cast-iron rules, and passing two or three later hours of mirth and jollity past their usual bedtime, to find themselves even more refreshed in the morning than usual. The relaxation of sociability has rested them more than sleep would, or an attempt to sleep. But these are conditions not so easily reached in the average family. In fashionable life we have a formal, exhausting, mechanical evening of more or less dissipation. On the other hand, the evenings of great numbers of families are monotonous humdrum. They involve the assemblage of the same people, the same surroundings, the same paterfamilias yawning over his paper, and the same querulous mamma overladen with family cares. Fresh people, with fresh thought, fresh atmosphere, anything to stir up and agitate the pool of domestic stagnation, are sadly needed and sadly scarce. There needs to be also a constant succession of such fresh people to bring about these results. The world is full of men and women, and in a better regulated life it would be their business after the day's work was done to entertain each other, and give each other fresh life. As it is now, hundreds, if not thousands, of our households are little better than cells for the incarceration of each family. Thousands are thus worn out prematurely from utter lack of domestic recreation. There might be written over the graves of hundreds of thousands, "Bored to death by the stagnation of domestic life."—The Christian at Work.

TWO WONDERFUL WATCHES.—John Huntington and his son, W. T. R. Huntington, of Cleveland, own two of the best watches in the world. They are duplicates, and were ordered by the senior Huntington, in 1881, in Geneva, Switzerland. He agreed to pay $5,000 in gold for two watches that should combine every movement then known to the art of watch-making. A description of one answers for both. The case is of pure gold; the works number 400 pieces. On the large dial appear four smaller dials. The one at the top shows by a diagram of the sky the changes of the moon, the firmament being of lapis lazuli, studded with golden stars. The next dial to the right shows the leap year, the tiny hand moving around the circle once in four years, and an auxiliary hand shows each month. On the dial at the bottom is a hand marking the quarter-seconds, and one showing the day of the month. At the left, on the fourth miniature dial, is a hand pointing out the day of the week, and another the tide as it ebbs and flows. Around the large dial, besides the usual hour and minute hand, moves a second hand and an extra horse timer, so arranged that the distance between two horses at the finish is accurately noted in quarter-seconds. By pressing a button the past hour is struck on a deep-toned bell, one of a chime; the quarters are a more silvery note, and a rapidly tinkling companion gives the minutes. The watch is a stem winder, and one spring furnishes the motive power. Where there is friction the pivots are set in rubies.—Ex.

In cases where Quinine utterly fails to have any effect, and where the patient can not take it by reason of its unpleasant influence, a cure is promptly obtained by Shallenberger's Antidote. It cures immediately. In no case will there be more than one chill after the first dose, and in the majority of cases not even that. Sold by Druggists.

A federation of Republican clubs of the third Congressional District of Maryland, on August 29, passed a resolution denouncing civil service law, saying "that the present civil service law is a relic of European governments; is injurious to party success, and not at all appropriate to a republican form of government, and, therefore, should be repealed."

Hon. M. D. Lagan and Frank Wheaton, of New Orleans, are having much success with an invention for cleaning stone buildings called the Wheaton process. They secured permission to experiment on the old Treasury buildings, in Washington, and the trial has been attended with remarkable success.

Mr. J. T. Hayden, who was delegated by the associated banks of this city to visit Washington, and endeavor to have the fiscal authorities order the continuance of the arrangement under which transfers of New York balances of New Orleans banks could be made by telegraph as was formerly done, succeeded in his mission. He was assisted by Mr. Walmsley.

Annual Review.

From the Times-Democrat's annual commercial edition we select the following encouraging statement of the progress of the South:

A common error is to attribute all the improvement to mining and manufactures, and to create the impression that the farmers have not done as well. How erroneous this is the increase in the acreage under cultivation, the large increase in the number and value of live stock and the decided diminution in the indebtedness of the farmers prove.

They have been as active, energetic and as successful as any class of people in the South. They have cultivated carefully and with better methods, they have introduced new crops, and they have greatly increased the value of the South's agricultural productions.

The past year was a good one for them, bringing in the handsome sum of $868,979,523, an improvement of 42 per cent. over the census year—itself an unusually good crop year.

Summing up the whole story, the South produced last year a total wealth, mineral, manufacturing, agricultural, of $1,631,513,686, as against $1,089,366,654 in 1880, an improvement of 49.5, or considerably more than the advance in population made during this period.

The following is a brief picture by comparison of the progress made during the past nine years:

	1889.	1880.	Increase per cent.
Population	19,804,123	14,639,714	32.2
Assessed wealth	$3,759,058,367	$2,164,792,795	73.6
Actual wealth	$8,647,820,028	$5,725,000,000	51.1
State debts	$89,557,505	$124,066,897	.....
State revenues	$21,128,553	$15,201,866	.....
Railroad mileage	36,698	17,808	106.6
Value of manufactures produced	$651,202,000	$315,924,000	106.6
Cotton mills	214	45	375.5
Spindles	1,859,626	542,148	243.0
Pig iron produced, tons	1,245,595	212,722	485.5
Coal mined, tons	12,376,500	1,963,574	531.5
Mineral output, value	$29,476,472	$3,347,445	780.0
Lumber output	$80,191,000	$36,685,181	124.7
Agricultural products	$868,979,523	$611,679,048	42.0
Fruit	$28,327,000	$9,105,113	211.3
Value live stock	$551,528,751	$191,512,254	141.4
Total value of all products	$1,631,513,686	$1,089,366,654	49.5
School expenditures	$13,905,304	$6,145,706	127.8

The following assessment of the Southern States for the present year as compared with that of 1879-80 (census year) shows the progress made during the decade:

	1879.	January, 1889.	Increase per cent. in nine years.
Alabama	$117,486,181	$214,925,869	82.9
Arkansas	88,409,366	154,259,654	78.3
Florida	29,471,618	87,562,477	196.8
Georgia	275,650,630	357,167,458	54.9
Kentucky	318,037,875	565,438,250	77.8
Louisiana	158,587,495	211,925,751	33.7
Mississippi	101,594,708	145,829,770	86.6
North Carolina	156,100,202	220,868,583	41.5
South Carolina	132,017,308	157,393,000	19.4
Tennessee	211,768,538	329,495,350	55.8
Texas	304,493,163	681,084,904	121.7
Virginia	308,155,195	396,711,325	28.7
Total	$2,164,792,795	$3,522,597,367	62.9

The increase has been steady ever since the census was taken, as follows:

Year.	Assessment.
1870	$2,164,792,795
1880	2,377,564,841
1881	2,478,620,423
1882	2,565,302,787
1883	2,782,115,803
1884	2,887,[illegible]4,861
1885	2,996,514,225
1886	8,154,268,[illegible]
1887	3,407,037,021
1888	3,522,597,367
1889	3,759,053,367

Increase per cent. in ten years, 73.9.

This gives the true valuation of the South to-day as $3,647,890,028, an addition of $2,922,890,028 to its wealth in ten years. During the same period the State debts have been reduced from $124,066,897 to $89,557,730, and although the rate of taxation has been reduced from 4.60 to 4.23 mills per dollar, the revenues have grown from $13,201,866 to $21,128,633, or 60 per cent.

The railroad mileage has increased from 17,808 to 36,686 miles, or 106.6 per cent., with 2,447 miles more in process of construction, 4,522 under survey and 8,487 projected.

The cotton mills have grown from 142 to 330, and boast 1,859,626 spindles and 41,465 looms as against 542,148 and 11,898, respectively, in 1880.

The cotton seed mills have sprung from 45 to 214, yielding products of the value of $17,669,710, against $7,690,921 nine years ago.

The iron furnaces produced 1,245,595 tons of pig against 212,722 in 1880; the coal mines increased their annual output from 1,963,574 to 12,376,500 tons, and the total value of minerals has grown 780 per cent., from $3,347,445 to $29,476,432.

The sawmills now number 14,900 as against 5,785, with a production of $80,191,000, against $35,685,181.

These are but a few sample cases. It is the same in all the other industries, and new factories of all kinds have sprung up in this section. New industries have been introduced until the value of the goods manufactured amounts to $651,202,000, as against $315,924,794 ten years ago.

In the matter of the domestic produce which New Orleans handles, and upon which so much of its trade and prosperity depend, the receipts amounted to $178,704,622, an increase of $10,230,229 over last year, and the largest receipts since 1882-83.

The improvement, however, is not confined to the receipts of produce. There is an equally good showing in exports and imports. The exports for the year were $82,924,882, the best since 1883. The imports were $15,446,745, an improvement of $3,888,183, or 34 per cent. over last year. This has not occurred since 1873, and the total volume of our foreign trade has been equaled only four times in the last quarter of a century. Indeed, reduced to the actual values of to-day, only twice during this period has the volume of last year's business been exceeded. There is, as a natural consequence, a good increase in the tonnage of vessels entered and cleared, and a large improvement in the railroad business, as follows:

	Received. Tons	Forw'rd'd. Tons.
Southern Pacific	358,685	416,418
Illinois Central	298,905	202,825
Texas and Pacific	162,024	220,425
L. and N.	162,162	241,628
Northeastern	368,559	108,038
Mississippi Valley	367,570	109,584
N. O. and G.	31,978	25,389
Total	1,749,892	1,324,808
1886-87	1,344,480	740,146

In two years the amount of freight taken out of New Orleans by the railroads has almost doubled. There has been handled by them:

	Tons.
The present year	8,074,200
In 1886-87	2,009,576
In 1879-80	998,783
In 1872-73	464,240

With this increased trade, an improvement in the Clearing House business was to be expected. The gross clearances for the year were $476,776,088, an improvement of $28,760,023 over last year, and of $70,207,641, or 17 per cent. over 1886-87.

The clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese of New York has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and The Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

East Tennessee, Virginia & Georgia R. R.

Well known as the Great Kennesaw Route, is now making twelve hours quicker time to Washington via New York and eastern points, with Pullman Buffet Sleepers from New Orleans to Washington without change. The mountain resorts of East Tennessee are reached in twenty-four hours, and Virginia resorts in thirty hours. For tickets, sleeping accommodation, circulars, schedule, etc., call at Kennesaw ticket office, 22 Carondelet street.

Prevent Attacks of Fever.

We ask but a glance at this, and it will pay any sufferer from liver complaint, enlarged spleen or ague cake, billious affections of any kind, deranged secretions, prostration from dissipation, constipation, dropsy, or any affections where liver, bowels, blood and stomach are involved. A guaranteed cure for all this class of diseases is offered in J. & C. Maguire's Cundurango. Doctors are astonished and invalids delighted.

THE PASSING OF SUMMER.

BY JAMES BERRY BENSEL.

She gathers up her robes of green and gold,
The fair, sweet summer, and across the land
We see her go, with outward-reaching hand
Whose magic spreads its beauties manifold
Along the region by her sway controlled.
The trees, o'erhung with gorgeous banners, stand
To see her pass them with a last command,
While all the world is draped in splendor bold.
She passes onward, from the lowlands first,
Then lays a reverent touch on every hill,
A smile of promise lighting up her face;
The brooks are fain to quench her baleful thirst,
And glowing carpets line her roadway still,
The splendid queen departing from her place.

Facts about Entire Sanctification Learned in the School of Experience.

BY B. CARRADINE, D. D.

I always believed in the doctrine in a general way, but not in the way particular. That is, I recognized it as being true in our standards and religious biographies; but was not so quick to see it in the life and experience of persons claiming the blessing. I was too loyal a Methodist to deny what my church taught me to believe; but there must have been beams and motes that kept me from the enjoyment of a perfect vision of my brother. Perhaps I was prejudiced; or I had confounded ignorance and mental infirmity with sin; or, truer still, I was looking on a "hidden life," as the Bible calls it, and, of course, could not but blunder in my judgments and conclusions, even as I had formerly erred as a sinner in my estimation of the converted man.

Several years since I remember being thrown in the company of three ministers who were sanctified men, and their frequent "praise the Lords" was an offense to me. I saw nothing to justify such demonstrativeness. The fact entirely escaped me that a heart could be in such a condition that praise and rejoicing would be as natural as breathing. That the cause of joy resting not in anything external, but in some fixed inward state or possession; that, therefore, perpetual praise could not only be possible, but natural, and, in fact, irrepressible. But at that time all this was hidden from me, except in a theoretic way, or as mistily beheld in distant lives of saints who walked with God on earth fifty or an hundred years ago.

In my early ministry I was never thrown with a sanctified preacher; nor have I ever heard a sermon on entire sanctification until this year. I beheld the promised life from a Pisgah distance, and came back from the view with a fear and feeling that I should never come into that goodly land. So, when I was being ordained at Conference, it was with considerable choking of voice, and with not a few inward misgivings and qualms of conscience, that I replied to the Bishop's questions, that I was "going on to perfection;" that I "expected to be made perfect in love in this life," and that I "was groaning after it." Perhaps the Bishop himself was disturbed at the questions he asked. Perhaps he thought it was strange for a minister of God and father in Israel, whose life was almost concluded, to be asking a young preacher if he expected to obtain what he himself had never succeeded in getting. Stranger still if he asked the young prophet if he expected to attain what he really felt was unattainable!

One thing I rejoice in being able to say: that although about that time, while surprised and grieved at the conduct of a man claiming the blessing of sanctification, and although doubts disturbed me then and, even afterward, yet I thank God that I have never, in my heart or openly, denied an experience or warred against a doctrine that is the cardinal doctrine of the Methodist Church, and concerning which I solemnly declared to the Bishop that I was groaning to obtain. God in his mercy has kept me from this inconsistency—this peculiar denial of my church and my Lord. Let me further add that in spite of my indistinct vows of sanctification all along, yet over and anon during my life I have encountered religious people in whose faces I traced spiritual marks and lines—a divine handwriting not seen on every Christian countenance. There was an indefinable something about them, a gravity and yet sweetness of manner, a containedness and quietness of spirit, a restfulness, an unearthliness, a far-away-ness about them that made me feel and know that they had a life and experience that I had not; that they knew God as I did not, and that a secret of the Lord had been given to them which had not been committed to me. These faces and lives, in the absence of sanctified preachers, and sermons on the subject, kept my faith in the doctrine, in a great degree, I suppose, from utterly perishing. Then there were convictions of my hard heart all along in regard to what a minister's life should be. Only this year, a full month before my sanctification, there was impressed upon me suddenly one day such a sense of the holiness and awfulness of the office and work that my soul fairly sickened under the consciousness of its own shortcomings and failures, and was made to cry out to God. Moreover, visions of an unbroken soul-rest, and a constant abiding spiritual power, again and again have come up before the mind as a condition possible and imperative. A remarkable thing about it is, that these impressions have steadily come to one who has enjoyed the peace of God daily for thirteen years.

At the Seashore Camp Ground, one year ago, after having preached at eleven o'clock, the writer came forward to the altar as a penitent convicted afresh under his own sermon, that he was not what he should be, nor what God wanted him to be, and was able to make him. Many will remember the day and hour, and the outpouring of the Holy Spirit at the time. I see now that my soul was reaching out even then, not for the hundredth or thousandth blessing (for these I had before obtained), but what is properly called the second blessing. I was even then convicted by the Holy Ghost in regard to the presence of inbred sin in a justified heart.

Several months since I instituted a series of revival services in Carondelet Street Church, with the Rev. W. W. Hopper as my helper. At all the morning meetings the preacher presented the subject of entire sanctification. It was clearly and powerfully held up as being obtained instantaneously through consecration and faith. Before I received the blessing myself I could not but be struck with the presence and power of the Holy Ghost. While urging the doctrine one morning, the preacher received such a baptism of glory that for minutes he was helpless; and, while we were on our knees supplicating for this instantaneous sanctification, the Holy Spirit fell here and there upon individuals in the assembly, and shouts of joy and cries of rapture went up from the kneeling congregation in a way never to be forgotten. The presence of God was felt so overwhelmingly and so remarkably that I could not but reason after this manner: Here is being presented the doctrine of instantaneous sanctification by faith. If it was a false doctrine, would God thus manifest himself? Would the Holy Ghost descend with approving power upon a lie? Does he not invariably withdraw his presence from preacher and people when false doctrine is presented? But here he is manifesting himself in a most remarkable manner. The meeting or hour that is devoted to this one subject is the most wonderful meeting and hour of all. The service fairly drips with unction. Shining faces abound: Christ is seen in every countenance. If entire sanctification obtained instantaneously is a false doctrine, is not the Holy Ghost actually misleading the people by granting his presence and favor, and showering his smiles at the time when this error or false doctrine is up for discussion and exposition? But would the Spirit thus deceive? Irresistibly and with growing certainty we were led to see that the truth was being presented from the pulpit, and that the Holy Ghost, who always honors the truth when preached, was falling upon sermon, preacher and people, because it was the truth. And by the marvelous and frequent display of his presence and power at each and every sanctification meeting, he was plainly setting to it the seal of his approval and endorsement, and declaring unmistakably that the doctrine that engrossed us was of heaven, and was true.

One morning a visitor—a man whom I admire and tenderly love—made a speech against entire sanctification, taking the ground that there was nothing but a perfect consecration and growth in grace to be looked for; that there was no second work or blessing to be experienced by the child of God. This was about the spirit and burden of his remarks. At once a chill fell upon the service that was noticed then, and commented on afterward. The visitor was instantly replied to by one who had just received the blessing, and as immediately the presence of God was felt and manifested. And to the proposition made—that all who believed in an instantaneous and entire sanctification would please arise—at once the whole audience, with the exception of five or six individuals, arose simultaneously. It was during this week that the writer commenced seeking the blessing of sanctification. According to direction, he laid everything on the altar—body, soul, reputation, salary; indeed, everything. Feeling at the time justified, and having peace with God, he could not be said to have laid his sins on the altar; for, being forgiven at that moment, no sin was in sight. But he did this, however: he laid inbred sin upon the altar; a something that had troubled him all the days of his converted life—a something that was felt to be a disturbing element in his Christian experience and life. Who will name this something? It is called variously by the appellations of original sin, depravity, remains of sin, roots of bitterness and unbelief, and by Paul it is termed "the old man." For in writing to Christians, he exhorts them to put off "the old man," which was corrupt. Very probably there will be disagreement about the name, while there is perfect recognition of the existence of the thing itself. For lack of a title that will please all, I call the dark, disturbing, warring creature, "that something." It gives every converted man certain measures of inward disturbance and trouble. Mind you, I do not say that it compels him to sin, for this "something" can be kept in subjection by the regenerated man. But it always brings disturbance, and often leads to sin. It is a something that leads to hasty speeches, quick tempers, feelings of bitterness, doubts, suspicions, harsh judgments, love of praise and fear of men. At times there is a momentary response to certain temptations that brings not merely a sense of discomfort, but a tinge and twinge of condemnation. All these may be, and are, in turn, conquered by the regenerated man; but there is a battle, and wounds; and after the battle a certain uncomfortable feeling within that it was not a perfect victory. It is a something that at times makes devotion a weariness, the Bible to be hastily read instead of devoured, and prayer a formal approach, instead of a burning interview with God that closes with reluctance. It makes church-going at times not to be a delight, is felt to be a foe to secret and spontaneous giving, causes religious experience to be spasmodic, and permits not within the soul a constant, abiding, and unbroken rest. Rest there is; but it is not continuous, unchanging, and permanent. It is a something that makes true and noble men of God, when appearing in the columns of a Christian newspaper in controversy, to make a strange mistake, and use gall instead of ink, and write with a sword instead of a pen. It is a something that makes religious assemblies sing with great emphasis and feeling,

"Prone to wander, Lord, I feel it."

It is an echo that is felt to be left in the heart, in which lingers sounds that ought to die away forever. It is a thread or cord-like connection between the soul and the world, although the two have drifted far apart. It is a middle ground, a strange medium upon which Satan can and does operate, to the inward distress of the child of God, whose heart at the same time is loyal to his Savior, and who feels that if he died even then, he would be saved.

Now, that something I wanted out of me. What I desired was not the power of self-restraint (that I had already), but a spirit naturally and unconsciously meek. Not so much a power to keep from all sin, but a deadness to sin. I wanted to be able to turn upon sin and the world, the eye and ear and heart of a dead man. I wanted perfect love to God and man, and a perfect rest in my soul all the time. This dark "something," that prevented this life, I laid on the altar, and asked God to consume it as by fire. I never asked God once at this time for pardon. That I had in my soul already. But it was cleansing—sin eradication I craved. My prayer was for sanctification.

After the battle of consecration came the battle of faith. Both precede the perfect victory of sanctification. Vain is consecration without faith to secure the blessing. Hence men can be perfectly consecrated all their lives, and never know the blessing of sanctification. I must believe there is such a work in order to realize the grace. Here were the words of the Lord that proved a foundation for my faith: "Every devoted thing is most holy unto the Lord." "The blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin." Still again: "The altar sanctifieth the gift." In this last quotation is a statement of a great fact. The altar is greater than the gift; and whatsoever is laid upon the altar becomes sanctified or holy. It is the altar that does the work. The question arises, Who and what is the altar? In Hebrews xiii, 10-12, we are told. Dr. Clarke, in commenting upon the passage, says the altar here mentioned is Jesus Christ. All who have studied attentively the life of our Lord can not but be impressed with the fact that in his wondrous person is seen embraced the priest, the lamb, and the altar. He did the whole thing; there was no one to help. As the victim he died; as the priest he offered himself, and his divine nature was the altar upon which the sacrifice was made. The Savior, then, is the Christian's altar. Upon him I lay myself. The altar sanctifies the gift. The blood cleanses from all sin, personal and inbred. Can I believe that? Will I believe it? My unbelief is certain to shut me out of the blessing; my belief as certainly shuts me in. The instant we add a perfect faith to a perfect consecration, the work is done and the blessing descends. As Paul says: "We which have believed do enter into rest."

All this happened to the writer. For nearly three days he lived in a constant state of faith and prayer. He believed God; he believed the work was done before the witness was given.

On the morning of the third day—may God help me to tell it as it occurred!—the witness was given. It was about nine o'clock in the morning. That morning had been spent from daylight in meditation and prayer. I was alone in my room in the spirit of prayer, in profound peace and love, and in the full expectancy of faith, when suddenly I felt that the blessing was coming. By some delicate instinct or intuition of soul, I recognized the approach and descent of the Holy Ghost. My faith arose to meet the blessing. In another minute I was literally prostrated by the power of God. I called out again and again, O my God! my God! and glory to God!—while billows of fire and glory rolled in upon my soul with steady, increasing force. The experience was one of fire. I recognized it all the while as the baptism of fire. I felt that I was being consumed. For several minutes I thought I would certainly die, I knew it was sanctification. I knew it as though the name was written across the face of the blessing, and upon every wave of glory that rolled in upon my soul. Can not God witness to purity of heart as he does to pardon of sin? Are not his blessings self-interpreting? He that impresses a man to preach, that moves him unerringly to the selection of texts and subjects, that testifies to a man that he is converted, can he not let a man know when he is sanctified?

I knew I was sanctified just as I knew fifteen years before that I was converted. I knew it not only because of the work itself in my soul, but through the worker. He, the Holy Ghost, bore witness clearly, unmistakably and powerfully, to his own work; and, although three months have passed away since that blessed morning, yet the witness of the Holy Spirit to the work has never left me for a moment, and is as clear to-day as it was then.

There are some things written in this article in regard to my experience that I have given to the public with some natural shrinking and hesitation. There are other things of such a nature that I have not mentioned for reasons that will be understood by every child of God. To all I say, that I have written with but one desire and motive, and that was to glorify God.

In my next article I desire humbly to show that the blessing of sanctification may be clearly distinguished from other blessings; that it is an instantaneous work; that it is obtained by faith alone; that the Holy Ghost testifies distinctly and peculiarly to the work and life; that a man thus sanctified is under special pressure and command to declare the blessing, and that while thus testifying on all proper occasions that he is sanctified, may be humbler in spirit than a Christian who claims not the blessing.

These things I desire, in all love and tenderness and joy, to speak of as matters, not of theory, but of experience. Especially would I call attention to the calm, undisturbed life; the perfect, unbroken rest of soul that follows the blessing of sanctification.

Summer Assemblies.

BY M. B. CHAPMAN, D. D.

It was one of the happiest thoughts which ever came to the brain of John H. Vincent when he conceived the "Chautauqua idea;" and the people of America—especially the young people—owe a debt of gratitude which they can never repay to him and his efficient colaborer, Lewis Miller, who has stood by him in all his plans. Mr. Miller, of Akron, O., is the inventor of the Buckeye Mower, which has revolutionized the farming machinery of America. With infinite faith in his friend, Dr. (now Bishop) Vincent, Mr. Miller furnished the "sinews of war" by which the great Chautauqua enterprise has been carried forward so successfully. In the summer of 1874 the first Chautauqua Assembly was held at Fair Point, on Lake Chautauqua, in Southern New York. The original purpose was to bring together Sunday-school teachers for conference and for a course of systematic Bible instruction, which would furnish equipment for their work. Into the religious current came, in successive years, more and more tributary streams of modern science and literature, until it deserved the title, first bestowed by Joseph Cook, of "The Summer University." Prominent among the early features of Chautauqua, which it has retained in a remarkable degree, were its wonderful catholicity, its broad spirit of toleration, its democratic and widely representative character. During the recent Assembly, church congresses of no less than sixteen denominations, represented on the grounds, have been held.

It was during the Assembly session of 1878 that the now famous Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle was instituted. This plan involved a four years' course of reading and study, covering such parts of a college curriculum as would give the English reader a general outlook over the field of learning. More than 60,000 students are now enrolled in these Chautauqua reading circles, and the influence of the movement has widened from that beautiful highland lake over all the world. In the class of '89, which numbers about 3,000, there are 100 graduates in Japan and several in South Africa.

My second visit to Chautauqua was during the present summer, and the three weeks of the Assembly which I spent there were full of intellectual and religious enjoyment. The Chautauqua platform has no equal in the world, and thousands of dollars are spent every season in bringing to it the most distinguished men of this and other countries. The program was particularly rich and full this season, and the crowds in attendance, which were larger than ever before, filled the vast amphitheater three times a day, while smaller crowds were to be found at the same time in the Hall of Philosophy and in the various schools. Among the most noted lecturers this year were Dr. J. M. Buckley, editor of the New York Christian Advocate; Prof. J. P. Mahaffy, of Trinity College, Dublin, Ireland; Dr. F. W. Gunsaulus, of the Plymouth Congregational Church, Chicago; Dr. Washington Gladden, of Cleveland, O.; Prof. David Swing, of Chicago; Col. Russell H. Conwell, of Philadelphia; Rev. F. E. Clark, president of the United Societies of Christian Endeavor; and ex-Gov. Cumback, of Indiana. Prof. Mahaffy's lectures on Greek life fully sustained his reputation as an historian and student, and the occasional flashes of Irish wit, which he managed to intersperse, gave sparkle and zest to what might otherwise have been rather a dry subject. His two addresses on the "Irish question" attracted universal attention, as he presented what is in this country the unpopular side of the question. He opposes Home Rule on the ground that Home Rule means Catholic rule, and would virtually sound the knell of Protestantism in Ireland. "There would be no discontent in Ireland were it not for the Catholic power already intrenched in that country, and forever opposed to the governmental reforms of Protestant England. The Irish conflict is part of a conflict against Catholicism extending over the whole world, and in which America and Canada have their share."

The lectures in the School of the English Bible were stimulating and instructive; albeit most of the professors belonged to the school of the higher criticism. Dr. W. R. Harper, of Yale, the principal of the school, is not only one of the finest Hebrew scholars in the country, but has been a diligent student of the Old Testament; and as a biblical interpreter, has few superiors. Bishop Vincent's lectures on Timothy were worth a trip to Chautauqua to hear; and Prof. Ituruhaai, on hermeneutics, was not only abreast of the times, but a little ahead; and while I could not always agree with him, his lectures were thought-inspiring and suggestive. In general, the instruction was fresh and vigorous, and opened up many new avenues of thought and inquiry.

The Chautauqua Missionary Institute, held during the first six days of August, drew together many missionary workers and those interested in the great evangelistic movements of the age. The Institute is undenominational; eleven churches being represented on the Executive Committee. Dr. D. O. Cunningham, of Wheeling, W. Va., is president of the institute, and presided over the general conferences, while Mrs. Cunningham presided over the woman's conferences. Dr. J. H. Carlisle, of South Carolina, is the representative of Southern Methodism on the Executive Committee; but he was not present during the Assembly. Bishop Vincent and others testified to the good work that was being done by the Institute, and many valuable suggestions were made and much information given by the many who spoke in the conferences.

The sermons by Bishop Cyrus D. Foss, Bishop Vincent and Dr. Gunsaulus, were models of pulpit eloquence and power. Bishop Foss' sermon, on August 18, was especially stirring and effective. Southern Methodism had but few representatives at Chautauqua this year, Rev. D. F. C. Timmons, of Tyler, Texas, and your correspondent being the only ministers of our church on the grounds.

THE ART OF LIVING NEAR TO GOD.

BY REV. ALFRED J. HOYOR.

We must not lose in these brave days
Of progress, in a thousand ways,
The sight of manhood's splendid goal,
The finer visions of the soul,
But cherish with our culture broad
The art of living near to God.

Like Aaron's rod without the bloom,
The rose without the sweet perfume,
A summer without song or flower,
An uncrowned king, bereft of power,
Is he, who, knowing all beside,
Knows not our God as Friend and Guide.

Let learning flourish more and more,
And Science all her realms explore,
Art emulate the rainbow's rim,
And poets sing like seraphim,
We must revere while we applaud,
The art of living near to God.

That art has purified the State,
And made the nation truly great,
To sculpture finer lines revealed,
To music deeper tones unsealed,
Made luminous with heavenly rays
Our noblest thought, and opened ways
To heights the nation's feet have trod—
This art of living near to God.

Mansfield Female College.

MR. EDITOR: This institution opens September 11, and the prospect is good for a large increase of patronage. The great results of the work done by this institution last year have won the confidence of friends and patrons in the institution. The remarkable health of students here, the comprehensiveness of the curriculum, the high standard maintained, the unexcelled advantages of the music and art departments, the thoroughness of the instruction given, attest the fact that no institution stands higher in equipment and reputation.

The appeal is made to the Methodists especially of the State to patronize their own college on the ground of its merits, because it will suit them better than any other institution, because their daughters will be better provided for, be in more congenial surroundings and have the best advantages. It is the highest interest of Methodists everywhere to patronize their own institutions, and thereby to make them the greatest institutions of the land. If every Methodist of the State would send his boy to Centenary and his girl to Mansfield, then these institutions would flourish and meet with the success that they so richly deserve.

Let the cry go forth, "Louisiana Methodist girls for Mansfield!" I would like to hear from every Methodist in the State who has a daughter to educate. If I can obtain sixty boarding pupils, I will make any reasonable reduction I can to meet the demand upon me, although the present rates are as low as can be sustained and maintain the best facilities. Give Mansfield a trial, and you will find that it is the best place for your daughter. Let every Methodist in this Conference think about Mansfield, pray for her and send girls here. We want girls and money to build up the grandest institution in the Southwest. Let there be a grand rallying for this favorite school.

Fortunate, indeed, will be the girl who comes to Mansfield this year, for if she is a good girl, and will study, her future will be secure. We want to do good work here and make this institution a great blessing to the country. Let the people come to the aid of one of the hardest-working presidents in the land and give the institution an overflowing patronage.

I shall expect to hear from every lover of education in the State. If you have not a daughter, use your influence and money, if you can, to send some girl here this year.

A. D. M'VOY, Pres't.

Friday, July 25, is appointed as a fast day.

Ques. 7. As the present distress is such, are the preachers resolved to take no steps to detach themselves from the work of God for the ensuing year?

Ans.: We purpose, by the grace of God, not to take any step that may separate us from the brethren, or from the blessed work in which we are engaged.

Ques. 8. Has not the preaching of funeral sermons been carried so far as to prostitute that venerable custom, and in some sort to render it contemptible?

Ans.: Yes: therefore, let all the preachers inform every society that we will not preach any but for those who, we have reason to think, died in the fear and favor of God.

LAKE CAMP MEETING.

MR. EDITOR: It was my privilege to attend the recent camp meeting at "Lake" Camp Ground, and to witness and participate in its gracious results. It was my first visit, but I am told the meeting was considered the best ever held there. I trust Bro. Caldwell, the pastor, will pardon a few unobtrusive lines not intended, by any means, to supersede an official report of the camp meeting, but merely to express my own feelings and observations. I have never seen, since a child, greater displays of God's power to bless and save. The interest grew constantly, until the climax was reached on the last day of the meeting, when—from the close of the eleven o'clock service till three or four P. M.—a number of young ladies knelt at the altar, refusing to leave for rest or refreshment till God had spoken peace to their souls, and ever and anon the shout of a new-born soul would ring out on the air, until all were converted except, perhaps, one. Oh, may she never cease to seek until she finds the "pearl of great price." The preachers were few in number, but they preached in the power and demonstration of the Spirit. We enjoyed the long-desired privilege of seeing and hearing Rev. R. G. Porter, our inimitable "Gilderoy." I say, "our," for does he not belong to our common Methodism, and have we not a kind of proprietary right in him? He captivated all hearts by his irresistible humor (and a wit which always points a moral, but never leaves a sting behind), by his deep consecration and earnest, faithful, impressive sermons. For years I have laughed and cried alternately as I read the productions of his pen, and now that I have had the rare pleasure of meeting him socially, I, in common with others, love him, and hope to meet him again—if not here, in the hereafter.

Our presiding elder enjoyed the camp meeting as only P. A. Johnston can. Ever on the alert, vigilant, zealous, always able, by sound doctrine, both to convince and exhort the gainsayers, he is never so happy as when in the thickest of the fight and pushing the battle to the very gates of the enemy. Bros. Simmons and Cammack dropped in during the meeting, and gave us some sermons, which were good to the use of edifying. Bro. H. R. Caldwell and Rev. J. S. Parker were "happy on the way" from first to last, and wound up the meeting with a grand "hallelujah."

I do not know the exact number of conversions and accessions to the church, so I will not venture an estimate. I presume someone will give you the figures. I never heard so little said about men joining the church, but stress was laid in every sermon upon the necessity of the "new birth" and a sound religious experience. Such preaching will bear fruit.

I thank God I attended the Lake Camp Meeting; and, oh! it seems so long to wait before I can go again; and, meanwhile, how much patient plodding to be done; how many toilsome days, perhaps, with clouds overhead and shadows all around ere we come again with joy, bringing our sheaves with us!

MRS. J. S. PARKER.

NEWTON, Mississippi.

FAYETTE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: The Fayette circuit, under the pastorate of Rev. John A. B. Jones, is renewing its strength, and assuming a growing and prosperous attitude. Composed of eight appointments, each Sabbath has two engagements, morning and evening. Here the earnest presentation of the truth in its purity and power is revealing results splendid and glorious. The Master honors faith, and is pledged for the triumph of his Word.

Since assigned to this pastorate Bro. Jones has witnessed under his rearing and guiding hand the completion and dedication of a comely and tasteful church at McNair Station, on the L., N. O. and T. R. R., a growing and thrifty little town; and our church planted there was both timely and opportune. Here and adjacent are many who wait upon the ministrations of the Word at this church, which betokens and presages the dawning of an ever-brightening day. By reason of easier and readier access, newly planted and in its infancy, the consecrated, worshipful lives of some of God's godliest, such leaders renowned for piety and good works as Bro. John G. Guice, Sister Amanda Armstrong, and others, worship here.

With the coming of the Sabbath comes the Sunday-school scholars—the young, the middle-aged, and the aged—to engage in this delightful devotional exercise. This is a happy school under the leadership of the winning and talented Dr. N. A. Guice, who is lending noble efforts to its elevating worth; and, judging the way his pupils court and covet his society, he is impressing many in the high and strait way. The Sunday-school over, its inspiration, glowing in the familiar voices of a praising company, float outward and upward with a sweet, charming song of Zion, announcing the prayer meeting begun—a great spiritual feast. Here the glory of the church is defined. A praying membership is the typical church, reckoned, indeed, as the "light of the world," the "salt of the earth." May this arm of power be exalted everywhere to its true station of strength and worth; that the church be baptized with the spirit of prayer! So, Mr. Editor, you see this new church is finely equipped for honoring her official relation and mission in the world.

Sunday-schools, class and prayer meetings are held elsewhere; are in a fine condition, and doing a fine work. Special mention is made of Ebenezer Church, where a meeting of possibly a week's duration will begin September 7; and already the indications are strong and growing that it will be a great work of grace.

Pastor Jones is eminent in holiness, godly in counsel, wise in admonition; and, withal, his great and masterly pulpit utterances and sublime devotion to duty has endeared and enthroned him in the hearts of his people. May the Master give him many seals to his ministry!

The close of revivals is a magnificent opportunity for presenting and pressing the claims of the ADVOCATE. Let it go as a faithful guide into the hands of the young convert, and an unrewarded, splendid growth in grace will be the result. CHAS. W. SCOTT.

BOWERTON CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I have just closed up my meetings on the Bowerton circuit, and, think I can say, to the advancement of the cause of Christ. The faith of the people was increased; some were converted, and many hearts were blessed; only a few accessions to the church. Excepting a few hardened cases, who, perhaps, will never join any church, there are not many out of the church. We wait to see how faithful or unfaithful the many who made promises of a better life, and to meet in heaven, will be. We have hopes of permanent good. God has said, "My word shall not return unto me void."

As we closed the meeting at Pleasant Ridge, Sister Mary Ann West triumphantly passed away to her reward, shouting, or trying to shout, praise to God. May all her loved ones meet her where partings will be no more!

J. W. ELLISON.

RAYMOND CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: The Lord is still blessing our charge. We have just closed a meeting at Ratliff Chapel. The Lord was present to convict, convert, and to sanctify. I have never witnessed a clearer and fuller manifestation of divine power. We had several bright conversions and thirty accessions. I am satisfied if my strength had permitted me to have continued the meeting a few days longer, we would have had fifty accessions. Our work is in fine spiritual condition. We have four regular prayer meetings, and two ladies' prayer meetings. As a result of the ladies' prayer meeting, we have fifteen ladies that will pray in public and work in revivals. Up to date we have received sixty-two into the church, and have had about eighty conversions. The Lord is with us, and salvation is rolling on. To God be all the praise.

L. S. JONES.

BLACK HAWK CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I have held three protracted meetings. The first one at Jordan's Chapel. Church greatly revived, eight conversions and four additions to the church, two new subscribers to ADVOCATE, and several new family altars. The second was held at Pleasant Ridge, a new organization. At this place we had the Rev. J. J. Tarlton, of Eureka Springs, Ark., who did the most of the preaching; and I will say he did it well. We had about forty professions, and thirty additions to the church, the whole community stirred. We also secured some new subscribers to ADVOCATE. We expect to build a new church-house at this place soon. The third meeting was held at Acona, which lasted eleven days. I never saw greater power in my life than was seen and felt at this place. We have here one of the best communities to be found anywhere. Our people are a praying and working people. Rev. T. J. Newell was with us two days, and preached us two good sermons. We also had Bro. Tarlton with us five days. He did us good work. We had no other help except Bro. Perkins, who preached us three good sermons. I think I can safely say that I never saw such a revival. The whole community for five and six miles was in a stir. We had from three to eight prayer meetings through the country every afternoon. The people would come from these meetings to church, shouting and praising the Lord. There were about fifty professions, and thirty-three joined our church; eight new family altars. I am glad to be able to say that nearly all of our families at this church have altars, and are religious all the year round.

In conclusion, I will say that the Black Hawk circuit is moving upward. Collections will be full and running over. Collection week of prayer amounted to $36 55. I will begin a meeting, first Sunday in September, at Black Hawk. Pray for us.

R. A. BURROUGHS.

FRANKLINTON, LA.

MR. EDITOR: I will give you the result of my third Quarterly Conference, which was protracted until Wednesday, eleven o'clock. I was not able to attend Saturday, but was present on Sunday at eleven o'clock service, having been sick for several days. Bro. Lewis was on hand, and preached with great power. His sharp words penetrated the heart and conscience of all that were present. He also preached at night, but I was not able to go out. Three joined, and were received in by Bro. Lewis, Sunday night, and then Bro. Lewis left me, and I had no other preacher's help. But I, in my feeble state of health, continued the meeting Monday, but after preaching at eleven o'clock, I got to my room and fainted from weakness, but rallied again, and preached that night with power; had thirty-five penitents at the altar for prayer, and at the close of this service four young men joined. I preached Tuesday night, and the Spirit continued to move upon the congregation with great power, and others joined. I continued the services Wednesday, at eleven o'clock, and the Word of God was sharp as a two-edged sword, and many were slain by the Word and the Spirit—mourners crying for mercy, and Christians praying and exhorting in the Spirit's power. The result of this meeting was, seventeen accessions to the church, ten adults baptized and three children. If the services could have lasted a few days longer, the result would have been much greater; but I failed in strength. We give God the glory.

J. H. EVANS.

SATARTIA, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: The good work is still going on in this charge. I held a four days' meeting at Anding about the middle of July, which resulted in four accessions and the organization of a church with thirteen members. Besides, we raised $342 50 to build a church. I began my meeting at Dover, the second Sunday in August, which was continued five days, with fourteen accessions and the church greatly blessed. In these meetings I had no ministerial help. At Fletcher's Chapel, the third Sunday in August, I commenced a meeting, and continued six days. Great good was done, and thirty-one accessions to the church. Rev. H. P. Lewis gave me good and telling sermons in this meeting. May God bless him and his consecrated wife! But the grandest success of all was the Mt. Olivet meeting, which began the fourth Sunday in August, and closed yesterday, continuing eight days. Rev. W. W. Hopper was with us four days. He is a grand man in a grand work, and he did his work well, which the sequel will show. This was the most successful meeting I have ever held. Sixty-nine accessions to the church, and church abundantly blessed. This finishes my round of protracted meetings, with a total of 133 accessions, and the work in good condition. Old Mt. Olivet is on a boom.

J. J. LOVETT.

BELAN, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: When we came to this work, there was not a house for the accommodation of my family in Quitman county. We lived in cabins on farms until August 1—moving three times—when we succeeded in building a house in Belan of our own, and moved home August 1. I began my protracted meetings on the third Sunday of August in the north part of the county, or Gleeson Settlement, with quite a gloomy prospect—not a live Christian in the congregation, and but few professors. I was assisted by Bro. Nolen, local preacher from Carrollton, and Bro. Bolton, local preacher from Tunica county, who worked like men that expected a reward, and did me good service, which resulted in nine conversions, and eleven additions to the church, and quite a number of backsliders reclaimed; and before we closed we could get twenty-five or thirty to come and pray for mourners, and the hard hearts of raftsmen and stavemen were melted to tears of contrition. So I thank God for his abundant blessings to us. This work is a very hard one, and we have many hardships to undergo, though I am sure God will bless them that trust him. I look for a gracious revival at all points during the month of September. We are trying to build four churches. One is being built, and will be ready by September 1. The others are arranging to build. Brethren, pray for us, that we may succeed, and that we may have a great ingathering of souls into the kingdom of Christ.

D. M. MILLER, P. C.

GRENADA CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: It affords me very great pleasure to send you glad tidings from this portion of the Lord's vineyard. Three meetings have been held to date in my charge, resulting in eighty or more conversions, and an addition to the membership of the church of fifty-four by profession of faith and baptism.

Our meeting at "Spring Hill" deserves more than a passing notice. It began on the first Sunday in August, with a sermon from Dr. E. W. Curle, local preacher. I reached the church on the evening of the first day, and pressed forward the work under the leadership of the Holy Ghost. Bro. E. G. Kilgore joined me on the third day, and remained with me until the close. The interest was good from the first, and continued to increase until it had assumed cyclonic proportions. In answer to faithful prayer, men were impressed who had not before attended the services, and united with the church the first attendance. Those received ranged in age from ten to sixty-five or seventy. At least, fifty were converted, and forty-one joined on profession of faith. Two prayer meetings were organized. Bro. K. is not sensational; has no clap-trap methods, but is simple, earnest, plain and successful. "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow!" Yours truly,

H. C. MOREHEAD.

OAK GROVE.

MR. EDITOR: I wrote you last week of the work of our zealous and efficient brother, N. J. Roberts, and his assistants at Olive Branch. From this he and myself went to Oak Grove, and on Sunday, August 25, we opened the attack on the forces of Satan. The meeting closed Thursday with a glorious victory all along the line. It was one of the most gracious revivals it has ever been my good fortune to witness. The whole church was melted and cemented in the bonds of Christian fellowship and love. There are no better people, no community more attractive for nobility of character and a lofty type of religious spirituality, than at and around Oak Grove. There were twelve accessions to the church, some of whom are among the most influential citizens of the community—men whose hairs are frosting over with the accumulation of years. There were fifteen or twenty clear and bright conversions, and four infants baptized. The people hung about the church after the last service, seemingly loath to leave a spot made precious by the conversion of so many of their kindred and friends. J. M. WHITEHEAD.

P. S.—Bro. Parker, of Baton Rouge, came out on Wednesday to baptize all who had joined up to that time, and preached a very fine sermon, indeed.

BOOKS.

A GIRL'S JOURNEY THROUGH EUROPE, EGYPT AND THE HOLY LAND. By Lenamay Green. Printed for the Author. Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Nashville, Tenn. Price, $1.

Here is a book written by a girl, describing what was seen through a girl's eyes on the most wonderful journey anyone can take. Ireland, England, France, Germany, Italy, Turkey, Greece, Egypt, Palestine, with the principal points of interest in each, are seen and described with all the enthusiasm of a youthful pen. She seems to have kept her eyes open, and the consequence is, she has produced a very readable book of travels.

RANDOM SHOTS AT LIVING TARGETS. By H. W. Holley, author of The Politicians and The Heggepsville Papers. 12mo, 228 pp., cloth, $1. New York: Funk & Wagnalls.

Here is a book that illustrates and elaborates the elements involved in the temperance reform with great vigor and considerable ingenuity. Prose and poetry are commanded to do the author's bidding. Keen satire is employed to show the weakness of current arguments in favor of license. The author makes a strong case by applying the license-principle to various other evils.

THE GREAT EVIL AND ITS REMEDY; OR, PARENTAL RESPONSIBILITY IN THE MORAL AND RELIGIOUS TRAINING OF CHILDREN. By Rev. Samuel W. Cope, of the Missouri Annual Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Publishing House, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Nashville, Tenn. Price, fifty cents.

The author states "the great evil" to be "the state of moral destitution and spiritual death of hundreds and thousands of our race, even within the bounds of Christendom." This sad fact is emphasized with peculiar power. The starting-point toward the "remedy" is for parents to begin aright in the matter of training their children. Under this "second part," the author discusses these points in order: The Mother, the First Teacher; The Home Altar; The Sunday-school; The Living Ministry. These are all treated in a scriptural and practical manner. Part III. treats of the Possibilities, Obedience, Moral and Legal Rights of Children, with some other matters. This little book will do good wherever it is read. It is good seed, and will produce "good fruit." Bishop Hendrix has written a neat introduction, and our House has put it forth in good style.

PERIODICALS.

—THE KINDERGARTEN, for this month, is a magazine of interest to persons interested in that line of things. Alice B. Stockham & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago. Price, $2 per annum.

—THE METHODIST MAGAZINE has several interesting articles. Dr. Buckley, Dr. Tiffany, Mark Guy Pearse and Canon Farrar are the chief contributors. Shaw & Son, Chicago. Price, $1 50.

—THE BOOK BUYER, for September, has a fine table of contents. It is published on the first of every month, and will be sent, postpaid, for one year for $1. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

—GOOD HOUSEKEEPING is published by Clark W. Bryan & Co., Springfield, Mass. It is issued every two weeks, and is one of the best of its kind. Its bill of fare is always tempting. Price, $2 50 a year.

—SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE, for September, opens with Alexandre Dumas, by Andrew Lang. Robert Louis Stevenson continues The Master of Ballantrae. Prof. George T. Ladd, of Yale College, writes on The Place of the Fitting-School in American Education, and H. G. Prout considers the Safety in Railroad Travel. Other articles make up a readable number. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. Price, $3.

—WIDE AWAKE, for September, opens with a new serial by Susan Coolidge, a story for girls, entitled, A Little Knight of Labor. Margaret Sidney continues, Five Little Peppers Further On. Rose Terry Cooke, Margaret Eytinge, Olive Risley Seward, Susan Hartley Swett, and other prominent writers for the young, have interesting contributions in this number. This number compares well with any former number, and the Magazine is one of the purest and cheapest that we know. D. Lothrop Company, Boston. Price, $2 40 a year.

—THE CENTURY, for September, opens with Winged Botanists, by Hamilton Gibson, and is a study of butterfly and plant life. John A. Paine contributes an illustrated and intensely interesting paper on The Pharaoh of the Exodus and His Son, in the light of their monuments. George Kennan continues his Russian papers in an article devoted to the history of The Kara Political Prison. Joel Chandler Harris gives the second instalment of The Old Bascom Place. Other persons contribute interesting papers, while the editor writes of Ballot Reform Progress, and Eight Hours a Day. Century Company, New York. Price, $4.

—THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW. This monthly has passed under the editorial management of Lloyd Bryce. The September number has some capital articles. Senator Hawley writes on The Value of International Exhibitions, and James M. Hubbard brings to public notice some most important matters in discussing the question, Are Public Libraries Public Blessings? The sisters will be interested in, and many of them will agree to what Rose Terry Cooke says of The Real Rights of Women. Every layman and woman in the church ought to read Ministers' Wives, by Marion Harland. Archdeacon Farrar has written upon, Why I Am an Episcopalian, in a way that will not please many "high-church people." The Review is published at 3 East Fourteenth street, New York. Price, 50 cents a number, or $5 a year.

—The September FORUM begins a new volume of this popular and growing monthly. This number gives some exceptionally fine articles. The contents are: The Lost Leader, by Judge Thomas Hughes. We know some who will entirely agree with this castigation of Mr. Gladstone. Washington Gladden writes on, Can Our Social Ills Be Remedied? The Spoils of Office, is by Prof. Goldwin Smith; Henry George's Mistakes, is from the pen of Thomas G. Steadman; Prof. A. T. Hadley contributes a paper on The Outlook for Industrial Peace; Charles F. Beach, Jr., writes Facts About Trusts; Dr. Kendrick, about Romanizing the Public Schools; James Sully contributes an article on The Luxury of Pity; Prof. Lester F. Ward, on Causes of Belief in Immortality. The article which interests everybody is by Helen E. Starrett, on The Housekeeping of the Future. Forum Publishing Company, New York. Price, 50 cents a copy; $5 a year.

The opportunity and ability to repent is one of the highest privileges that God has granted to man.—E. Peabody.

LESSON XII.—September 22.

DEATH OF SAUL AND HIS SONS.

I. Sam. xxxi, 1-13.

GOLDEN TEXT.—The face of the Lord is against them that do evil.—Psa. xxxiv, 16.

TIME.—B. C. 1056.

PLACE.—Gilboa (bubbling fountain).

PARALLEL PASSAGES.—1 Chron. x.

1. The Philistines—Origin of this famous people uncertain. Some are of the opinion they were descended from Shem, and migrated from Crete to Palestine, passing through Egypt. According to Genesis x, 13, 14, they were of Ham. Others who accept this view regard them as a branch of the Rephaims. They were in "the south country" in the time of Abraham. (Genesis xxii.) By the time of Joshua they had increased into a nation, and thence of all the occupants of Canaan offered the stoutest and longest resistance to the Hebrews. Israel fled—It was probably whispered among the Israelitish troops that Saul had received a communication from Samuel, and that their defeat and their leader's death had been foretold. This would unnerve their bravest heroes, and spread terror among all. And after his return from that midnight conference with the witch of Endor, Saul himself could have had no spirit to fight. Whether the battle took place in the valley of Jezreel, and the Israelites, being worsted, fled to Gilboa and were pursued, or whether their positions on Gilboa were stormed, does not appear.

2. Upon Saul and upon his sons—When Saul and his sons saw the people flying, they probably placed themselves in the thickest of the battle and sought, as by the last efforts of despair, to turn the tide of the Philistines' victory. Thus they exposed themselves to death. Abinadab and Melchishua—On the three sons of Saul (see xiv, 49).

3. Battle went sore—After his sons had fallen, Saul was in worse straits than ever, for now the brunt of the battle came on him. Archers hit him—The bow was one of the most ancient and important of weapons, made sometimes of steel or brass (Psa. xviii, 34); arms kept in quiver (Psa. cxxvii, 5); sharpened (Isa. xlix, 2); barbed (Psa. xxxviii, 2); poisoned (Job vi, 4); tipped with fire (Psa. cxx, 4). Sore wounded—The Hebrew may also be rendered, "and he was sore afraid." Despair and the fear of insult paralyzed his courage. His army is routed. His trust is gone. His troops have melted away. His three sons are slain. He looks over the field of conflict, the scene of the battle, from the heights of Gilboa. God has forsaken him. He saw that he was the mark of the Philistine sharp-shooters, and he, therefore, writhed and quaked with terror at the thought of falling by such hands. A horror seized him that if once the enemy got possession of him alive they would subject him to some nameless mutilation or horrible humiliation too terrible to be thought of.

4. Lest these uncircumcised—It is remarkable that the epithet uncircumcised, used as a term of reproach, is confined almost exclusively to the Philistines. This is probably an indication of the long oppression of the Israelites by the Philistines, and their frequent wars. Abuse me—Lest they take me and put me to some shameful and cruel death. Would not—He dared not stretch forth his hand against the Lord's anointed; the very thought of such an act filled him with fear. Fell upon it—That is, having set the hilt on the ground, he threw the weight of his body on the point, and thus killed himself.

6. All his men—(For which we have "all his house" in the Chronicles.) That is, not all the warriors who went out with him to battle, but all the king's servants, or all the members of his house, to wit, who had taken part in the battle. Neither Abner nor his son Ishbosheth was included, for the latter was not in the battle; and although the former was Saul's cousin and commander-in-chief (see chapter xiv, 50, 51), he did not belong to his house or servants.

7. Men of Israel—A distinction is here made between the "men of Israel" who were non-combatants and dwelt east of the field of battle, and the "men of Israel" who formed the army. Came and dwelt in them—The whole of the country round about the valley of Jezreel the Philistines took possession of, so that the whole of the northern part of the land of Israel—in other words, the whole land with the exception of Perea and the tribe-land of Judah—came into their hands when Saul was slain.

8. The morrow—Night had probably put an end to the battle which Saul had continued with desperate courage to the last. The Philistines were not aware till the next day of the full extent of their victory. Came to strip the slain—They did not pause in the heat of battle or in the first flush of victory to gather up their trophies. A wandering Amalekite, who had, perhaps, been seeking spoil on the battle-field, found the dead body of the monarch, and taking from it the crown and the bracelet by which it was distinguished, had hastened with them to Ziklag and given them to David. Publish it in the house of their idols—That is, to the priests serving in the temples.

10. Armor in the house of Ashtaroth: and ... fastened his body—The practice of dedicating the spoils of a conquered enemy to the gods is very ancient. Homer makes Hector promise that if he conquers Ajax he will dedicate his spoil to Apollo. Together with the bodies of his sons. (Ver. 12.) They were hung on the wall in the "open place" by the gate, that all passersby might join in exulting over the defeat and disgrace of Israel.

11. Inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead heard—Whoever preserved a tender and grateful remembrance of what they owed to the heroism of Saul. (See chap. xi.) A touching and rare example of national gratitude.

12. Burnt them there—The reason for the burning of the bodies was partly in the fact that the bodies were mutilated by the removal of the heads, and, therefore, a regular burial of the dead was impossible, and partly in their anxiety lest, if the Philistines followed up their victory and came to Jabesh, they should desecrate the bodies still further. But even this was not a complete burning to ashes, but merely a burning of the skin and flesh; so that the bones remained.

13. Under a tree at Jabesh—Under the tamarisk, some well known tree at Jabesh. Chronicles reads, "under the terebinth" (elah). Where their presence would be least likely to be suspected, should search be made. Fasted seven days—We must not understand this word of fasting strictly, as if they ate nothing for seven whole days, but in a more large and general sense, as it is used both in sacred and profane writers; that they did eat but little, and that seldom, and that but mean food, and drank only water for that time.

The only redeeming incident in all this painful narrative is the spirited enterprise of the men of Jabesh-gilead, coming to Beth-shan by night, removing the bodies of Saul and his sons from the wall, and burying them with all honor at Jabesh. ... It was highly creditable to its people that after a long interval the remembrance of Saul's first exploit, when he relieved them from the cruel threats of the Amorites, was still strong enough to impel them to the gallant deed which secured honorable burial for the bodies of Saul and his sons. We are conscious of a reverential feeling rising in our hearts toward this people as we think of their kindness to the dead, as if the whole human race were one family, and a kindness done nearly three thousand years ago were in some sense a kindness to ourselves.

Missionary.

The Training-School for Missionaries.

KANSAS CITY LIKELY TO BE CHOSEN AS ITS LOCATION.

As respects the proposed training-school for women missionaries, there can be but one opinion. Those who teach must both know what to teach, and how to teach. Whether our sisters go to care for the sick in the hospital, to visit and instruct the heathen woman in her home, or to teach in the mission school, a preparation is needed for the work. No less do they need preparation to teach the Word of God, for this, however else they may be employed, is a work which always devolves upon them, and their most important work. The end of all missionary labor is to preach the gospel, not always from the pulpit, but often in ways more effectual. To be thoroughly versed in the Holy Scriptures, and skillful in teaching the same, is an essential qualification for every missionary, male or female, sent into the field.

No one is considered fit to teach in our schools, at home, or administer medicine to our sick, or nurse in our hospitals, without previous training, and those whom the church sends abroad to represent her, and whom she supports in the work, should be eminently qualified, both by natural gifts and proper preparation. If we do not go beyond the mere financial question, the training-school is needed, for we shall secure the largest results for the money expended only by sending out our missionaries throughly equipped.

This demand for a training-school has come from our missionaries abroad. It is the fruit of experience. It is a need which the most experienced in the work acknowledge. They want no more raw recruits in the service—persons who have all to learn after reaching the field, and who learn, there, that they have made a mistake in undertaking the work at all, and so are sent out, maintained for two or three years, and brought back at the expense of the Board, without the least profit, save that the romantic visions of some young mind are dispelled and the person made sadder and wiser.

There is needed some means of testing fully, not only the ability, but the devotion of our missionaries. No one will be a true missionary abroad who would not be a missionary at home. It is not the love of adventure and romance, but the love of Christ and of souls that must prompt our young women to go in the service of the church to heathen lands. That spirit must be tested. In our large cities, where all classes and conditions of humanity are found, the means of such a test are provided. Two are three years' faithful and successful labor among the poor of a great city, is the best recommendation one can bring for appointment to labor as a missionary in the heathen cities of China or Japan, of Brazil or Mexico.

Our women to whom the church has entrusted her woman's work, have not been slow to learn these lessons, and we feel the more confidence in their wisdom and ability to discharge their high trust, because of this demand that they now make upon the church to build a school where those who think themselves called of God to go abroad as missionaries may be tested and trained for the work.

We are gratified to be able to announce that there is good prospect that the training-school will be promptly provided.

On last Monday evening Miss Belle Bennett, of Kentucky, to whom the Woman's Board has especially entrusted the presentation of the matter to the church, and the selection of a place to locate the school, met a number of our church members at Centenary Church, Kansas City. After singing and prayer, Bishop Hendrix introduced Miss Bennett to the audience. Her address was clear, condensed and convincing. We felt that the Board had made a happy selection in appointing Miss Bennett to represent their cause. Doctor Scarritt followed with a short speech, and then Bishop Hendrix.

At the close a proposition from Dr. Scarritt was read by Miss Bennett. It offers a beautiful lot of ground, 200 feet front and worth from $20,000 to $25,000, in Melrose addition of Kansas City, as site for the proposed school, also a subscription in money of $25,000 to be given on condition that $25,000 more is secured by the Board, and the $50,000 expended in a suitable building for the school upon the lot named. Five years are given the Board to raise the $25,000, and Dr. Scarritt will pay dollar for dollar as this amount is collected.

Miss Bennett stated that already about $4,000 had been pledged, and she had no doubt the Board would be able to raise the money to close this proposition.

So we think that it is not premature to announce the training-school movement a success. This generous offer of Dr. Scarritt insures it. If some other city offers better, well; if not, we shall have the training-school here in Kansas City. We shall count it a great blessing to the church here should we get the school. Moreover, all questions of local interest aside, we should deem the school wisely located in Kansas City. This city is the key to our west and southwest work, and will be in the near future the most influential center of our church west of the Mississippi river.—Southwestern Methodist.

Temperance.

Which Will You Take?

Entering the office of a well-known merchant, I lifted my eyes and found myself confronted with the brightest and most thrilling temperance lecture I ever steered myself against in the whole course of my life. It was an inscription marked with a pen on the back of a postal card nailed to the desk. The inscription read as follows:

WHICH?
WIFE OR WHISKY?
THE BABES OR THE BOTTLE?
HOME OR HELL?

"Where did you get that, and what did you nail it up there for?" I asked the merchant.

"I wrote that myself and nailed it up there," was his reply, "and I will tell you the story of that card. Some time ago I found myself falling into the drinking habit. I would run out once in a while with a visiting customer or at the invitation of a traveling man, or on every slight occasion that offered. I soon found that my business faculties were becoming dulled, that my stomach was continually out of sorts, my appetite failing, and constant craving for alcoholic stimulants becoming dominant. I saw tears in the eyes of my wife, wonder depicted on the faces of my children, and then I took a long look ahead.

"One day I sat down at this desk and half unconsciously wrote the inscription on that card. On looking at it upon its completion, its awful revelation burst upon me like a flash. I nailed it up there and read it over a hundred times that afternoon. That night I went home sober, and I have not touched a drop of intoxicating liquor since. You see how startling is its alliteration. Now, I have no literary proclivities and I regard that card as an inspiration. It speaks out three solemn warnings every time I look at it. The first is a voice from the altar, the second from the cradle, and the third and last from."

Here my friend's earnestness deepened into a solemn shaking of the head, and with that he resumed his work.

I don't think I violate his confidence by repeating the story of that card. In fact, if it should lead to the writing of similar cards to adorn other desks, I think he will be immeasurably gratified.—Saturday Evening Call.

Nature's Simplicity.

When nature does a simple thing she arouses wonder, because that which, with us, is difficult or impossible, with her is an achievement of ease.

The inference from this is to get near to nature's heart. Act in harmony with her kindly mood.

This is precisely the effect of Compound Oxygen as administered by DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, and here are some witnesses who testify to its value.

Heaven.

ENJOYMENT OR EMPLOYMENT?

Some people entertain this idea of heaven: There is located somewhere a vast amphitheater—large enough to hold all the saved; and in it the saints and angels are arranged around according to their various grades, and are all making most delightful music on golden harps, and all singing most delightful songs of unending praise to God! We believe that this is a very popular conception of the enjoyment and employment of the saved in heaven. Such a speculation is calculated to lower the grandeur of heaven in the estimation of some very good people. There are some good and true and pious people to whom such a heaven would be no heaven at all. They have no appreciation of music of any kind. They can not distinguish one tune from another. Harmony and discord are just the same to them. The whole science of music is unintelligible and unenjoyable jargon, and to confine them to that sort of a heaven would be like placing them in pandemonium.

Again, if we take people as they are now constituted, a constant, unceasing harping of harps and singing of praises would, to most persons, become monotonous and tiresome. The mind is so constituted that it finds its sweetest and highest enjoyments in variety, and God has recognized this feature of the mental constitution, and provided for it by "spicing the world with variety." Now, is it a reasonable supposition that death will work such a radical change in the mind as to completely destroy its constitutional characteristics? We think not. This notion of heaven springs from a defective conception of enjoyment. It is most true that enjoyment is the fundamental idea running through all the revelations we have of heaven, and the idea enters largely and predominantly into all our thoughts about the place; and yet there are myriads of people, as we have said above, who would find no enjoyment in such exercises as singing and playing upon instruments of music!

In order, then, that such people may have enjoyment in heaven, we must enlarge our speculations so as to realize such a conception of it as shall bring it before our minds as the one place in God's universe where all the inhabitants have the highest enjoyments of mind all the time. The general notion is, that the entrance of sin into the world interrupted man's enjoyment. This is true, but it is true because sin interrupted his proper employment from which his enjoyment came. In man's first estate his employment was to serve God with all the powers of his being, and his enjoyment was proportioned to the sincerity of that service. Sin interrupted his employment, broke off his service, and consequently destroyed the enjoyment which came from that service. What religion does for a man is, to reverse the order sin has introduced and bring him back to his proper employment of serving God, and then his enjoyment comes. And as the Holy Ghost operates upon him day after day, by means of the grace manifested in the gospel and in the ordinances of the church, he is strengthened in that service and gladdened by the enjoyments which come from it. Thus he goes on through life becoming stronger in his service of God and deeper in his enjoyment. Now, is death to turn back this mighty current of service and enjoyment, and land the soul, trained after this manner, into a region where there will be nothing to do but sing songs and play on harps. For one, we do not believe it. Speaking of the saints in heaven, the Scriptures say: "They serve God day and night." Then, as heaven is a place of unalloyed and uninterrupted happiness, and as this is an invariable result of the proper employment of the mind, we see that heaven is the place where each saved saint will be engaged in that service for which each has peculiar mental and spiritual aptitudes, and from that service will come the enjoyments of each. We do not see how universal enjoyment can be guaranteed on any other conditions. As there are varieties of service here and corresponding enjoyments, so it will be there. Praise will, no doubt, constitute a part of that service, but the praises of different saints will be as different as their mental characteristics. It will be most delightful to some saints to sit down on the sunny banks of life's river, and strike their harps in praise of God's grace. It will be just as delightful to others to travel out on voyages of discovery and revel with wondering awe among the glories of God's unbounded universe. To confine the mind to the same unceasing service forever would break up the employments of myriads of saints and destroy their enjoyments, and rob heaven of its attraction.

The reason that heaven is a place of infinite satisfaction and enjoyment to all its inhabitants consists in the fact that it is the place where each mind finds the employment that is exactly suited to its capacities and its training.

Then, reader, to reach a high sphere there, train high here!

Round About.

After completing my tour through Louisiana, Seashore Camp Meeting was next on my program. The camp meeting embraced two Sundays, and was good to the last. Bishop Keener's sermon on the second Sunday afternoon was worth going five hundred miles to hear; and all the sermons and services were edifying. At the invitation of Bro. Stuart I ran over and took a first look at Ocean Springs after the close of the meeting. Bishop Keener has here a summer home—a secluded spot, bordered on one side by the waters of the Gulf, and on another by the track of the railway, filled with shadowing trees and hanging vines and beautiful flowers; a place for rest, for study and for peace. Bro. Stuart has fine Jersey cows, and large "paper-shelled" pecans, which he sells for seed, and many other attractive things about his hospitable home. I must not fail to note with appreciation that Bro. Stuart promises that all his earthly possessions shall be the property of Centenary College when he and his wife shall cease to need them.

Returning to Jackson, Miss., wife and I took passage for Salt Springs, Ga., the seat of the Piedmont Chautauqua. At three o'clock in the night we were awakened near Birmingham to find ourselves surrounded by vast fields of fire and smoke. Blazing furnaces appeared on every hand, overhung by dense clouds of smoke, with here and there the figure of man made visible only as he crossed the paths of light or opened the mouth of an oven from which the flames seemed to leap into his face. In the distance tall columns of dense black smoke ascended heavenward, and often seemed to turn into lurid flames as they rose, as if bursting from the crater of a volcano. Silence reigned, save as it was broken by the now most awful roar of our train. Had we broken through the crust of the earth? And were we entering the world of fire? No; only passing through the fields of burning coke-ovens near Birmingham. Salt Springs is intended to combine the attractions of a watering-place and of Chautauquan literary culture. We found the lectures quite entertaining, and were specially interested by the proceedings of the Georgia Teachers' Institute, which met at the Chautauqua grounds this year. By persevering energy the hopes of the founders of this enterprise may yet be realized in profit to themselves, and high literary culture to the visitors.

Leaving this place, we passed through Carrollton, Newnan, Griffin, Atlanta, Athens, and many smaller places. Crops of corn and cotton are good—in places excellent. Apples, pears, grapes and melons are plentiful, and peaches superabundant almost to amazement. Thousands of peach trees have many limbs broken off by weight of fruit, and a number have lost their entire tops from the same cause. The sale of fruits and melons brings in money at a needy time, and increases the wealth of the State by several millions. Of course, some are tempted into brandy-making. Griffin and Atlanta are still under the curse of the whisky traffic, while in Carrollton, Newnan and the classic city of Athens, a high Christian intelligence is strong enough to keep the accursed trade under ban. Griffin is the centre of grape culture in Georgia, and good judges believe that the State will ere long produce more grapes and better grapes than ever grew on the vine-clad hills of France. Let grapes be cultivated. If they do not cure drunkenness, they will surely not make it worse. Besides, they will be a blessing to sober people, which whisky is not.

Atlanta still grows marvelously. One is almost amazed at the beauty and costliness of many recently built residences. Citizens seem to be rivaling one another in the expenditure of money upon their dwellings. Much of public spirit is displayed, and great preparations are being made for the coming Piedmont Exposition. Grant's Park, named for the citizen who gave a hundred acres to make it, is a thing of beauty, and promises to be a joy forever. An Atlanta man has invented an appliance for running sewing machines by clock-work, and a great corporation has been organized to supply the world with their machines, as the invention is to be applied only to machines of their own make. A newly established piano factory is turning out pianos at the rate of one a day. The Capitol of the State, recently completed, in Atlanta is one of the handsomest and best buildings in the United States, and cost one million of dollars. New railroads are being constructed in many parts of the State, and the Legislature is now laboring with a bill to lease the State road to an approved bidder for $40,000 per month. Georgia makes, sells and uses more fertilizers than ever; and fertilizers are the source of her large crops.

Athens, too, is a prosperous and growing city, as is plainly seen in the number and elegance of business houses now being built. The Young Men's Christian Association building, approaching completion, will be more than an architectural ornament to the city. The staple of Georgia civilization is Christianity; and Christianity never had a firmer footing among her people than it has now. Protracted meetings are among the Methodists the order of the day through these warm months.

The sadness of leaving my native State was mitigated by my receiving from my brother in Athens, on the morning of our departure, an endowment note of a thousand dollars for Centenary College.

W. L. C. H.

Gace vs. Grace.

The Rev. Frederick Aubert Gace, M. A., vicar of Great Barling, Essex, has published a a little volume with this title: "Some Questions of the Church Catechism, and Doctrines Involved, Briefly Explained, for the Use of Families and Parochial Schools." For atrocious trash and bigoted balderdash I have not found its parallel—no, not in all high-churchism. And yet this stuff is current in the Church of England, and finds endorsement in the Protestant Episcopal Church of America. In an admirable tractate on "The Apostolical Succession," published by the Wesleyan Publishing House, in London, I noticed liberal extracts from this graceless Gace. A few samples may be of interest:

85. We have amongst us various sects and denominations who go by the general name of dissenters. In what light are we to consider them? A.: As heretics; and in our litany we expressly pray to be delivered from the sins of false doctrine, heresy and schism.

86. Is, then, their worship a laudable service? A.: No; because they worship God according to their own evil and corrupt imaginations, and not according to his revealed will, and, therefore, their worship is idolatrous.

87. Is dissent a great sin? A.: Yes; it is in direct opposition to our duty towards God.

94. But why have not dissenters been excommunicated? A.: Because the law of the land does not allow the wholesome law of the church to be acted upon; but dissenters have virtually excommunicated themselves by setting up a religion of their own, and leaving the ark of God's church.

95. What class of dissenters should we be most upon our guard against? A.: Those who imitate most nearly the true church of Christ.

97. But are there not some dissenters who use the same forms of prayers as ourselves? A.: Doubtless; but the prayers of the church being, for the most part, for the priest to offer up in behalf of the people, it must be sinful and presumptuous for those persons who are called dissenting teachers to address the throne of grace, usurping the priestly office.

98. Is it wicked, then, to enter a meeting-house at all? A.: Most assuredly; because, as was said above, it is a house where God is worshiped otherwise than he has commanded, and, therefore, it is not dedicated to his honor and glory; and, besides this, we run the risk of being led away by wicked, enticing words; at the same time, by our presence we are witnessing our approval of their heresy, wounding the consciences of our weaker brethren, and by our example teaching others to go astray.

Mr. Gace seems to be an extremist, but he is a consistent high-churchman. The so-called doctrine of apostolical succession logically leads to the grace of Gace. Accept it, and you must pronounce all dissent sin, dissenters heretics, their worship idolatrous, and their teaching wicked. Mr. Gace is, therefore, no more graceless than the ecclesiastic who likened all non-Episcopal Churches in authority to baseball teams, and the sacrament of baptism (by them administered) to an ordinary morning bath.

Let Methodists read, and retain their self-respect.

Dr. Grace and the Standards.

In Dr. Grace's article on "Faith vs. Authority," in the ADVOCATE, of Aug. 29, I think the usually clear-headed and facile writer has things rather mixed. I suppose the thing that provoked the motion of his pen is the controversy going on in the Nashville, anent doctrinal standards, a hint of which was recently given in your columns by our Bro. J. A. Parker. The point of confusion in Dr. Grace's mind, if I may modestly suggest, is in identifying a human authority for "the faith once delivered to the saints" and standards of doctrine for believers. Most thinkers will agree with both Dr. Grace and Mr. Emerson that religion in its personal relations does "not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God." Men must for themselves "taste and see that the Lord is good." With the men of Sychar, they must say: "Now we believe, not because of thy speaking; for we have heard for ourselves, and know that this is, indeed, the Savior of the world."

But this is a very different matter from that of recognizing certain treatises as standards of doctrine for the church. It must not be assumed that a converted man may be independent of doctrinal teaching. It is true, we may conceive, as an ideal, one coming to the knowledge of the truth and ranging himself by his own investigations and conclusions by the side of those who have come to their religious status through the consensus of belief of a certain society to which they belong. But, practically, such is not the case in life. Men have usually recognized certain symbols of faith and certain interpretations of these symbols; and these interpretations have thus acquired the title of authorities or standards in the church. Hence there have been Calvinist standards and Arminian standards, etc. Has not each church its standards of doctrine to-day? As to what are these standards—the point at issue in the Nashville Advocate—that is a different question. It is also a different question whether standards of doctrine may not be revised. But admitting all this, is Dr. Grace's logical and philosophical mind ready to admit that we, as a church, have no standards of doctrine? Were there not certain histories, traditions and doctrinal statements which formed the nidus out of which has evolved his own intellectual status as a Methodist preacher? Else how came he a Methodist? And how does he remain a Methodist?

But I am persuaded better things of Dr. Grace, and things which make for more clear-sightedness on second thought. Let him move an amendment, and write us a dissertation on "the standards" as we have them.

J. W. MEDLOCK.

A New Church Started.

On last Sunday evening the corner-stone of our new church in Gretna was laid with impressive and imposing ceremonies. Dr. Ahrens made the prayer, Dr. Carter read the Scripture lessons, and Dr. Evans, our presiding elder, made an appropriate address. Within the stone were placed a copy of the Bible, Discipline, Hymn Book, CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, Familienfreund, and a paper containing the names of the pastor and trustees and Building Committee of the church. Quite a large crowd was in attendance, and a collection of $200 and a bell was taken. The committee have now on hand sufficient funds to complete the building, which will be finished in about sixty days. Bro. Henry Ahrens, the pastor, has shown great energy in pushing forward this important enterprise, and his co-laborers have faithfully held up his hands. No matter what outsiders may think, this is a substantial evidence of the growth of Methodism in our city which can not be gainsaid.

The church is a frame structure fifty-six feet by twenty-nine feet with a corner tower of sixty-six feet in height, and when completed, will present a beautiful appearance and add to the attractions of our little suburb on the other side of the muddy Mississippi. The ADVOCATE congratulates its friends over there on their success in this movement.

Boston University has graduated 478 doctors of medicine, and nearly one-half of them are women.

Notes.

Can't our brethren shorten their letters which give accounts of revival meetings? Nine such letters in one column appeared recently in the Raleigh Christian Advocate. Will you not condense by simply giving facts?

Dr. Hnygood, in the Wesleyan, says: In our undeveloped girls the South is richer than in undeveloped ore. I am thinking of those they call "the middle classes," where the best people of the world are. They need a chance they have never had. On the Sheffield heights there must be an all-around Christian university for women, where rich girls will be glad to go, and where poor girls can have a chance equal to anything money can buy.

The NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE says: "The one dollar bills are coming in beautifully in answer to Bishop Wilson's call for means to send another missionary to Japan." We would like to know that some of these "missionary notes" went from the Pacific Coast.—Los Angeles Christian Advocate.

We can gratify the editor by saying that we have received contributions from the Pacific Coast, even from Los Angeles, and expect to receive more, if they will be in a hurry about it.

There have been big gold nuggets found in various countries, but the largest that was ever discovered was found in New South Wales, Australia. Its weight was 640 pounds, height 4 feet 9 inches, width 3 feet 2 inches, average thickness 4 inches, and it was worth $148,800. It was found imbedded in a thick wall of blue slate at a depth of 250 feet from the surface. An interesting feature of its history was that the owners of the mine were living on charity when they found it.

It is said that the new postal cards soon to be issued will vary in size. There will be three sizes when the contracts are finally taken up—one a fine, delicate card, for ladies' use, much smaller than that now in circulation, and of much finer quality. Finely calendered paper will be substituted for the old buff blotting papers. An intermediate card, of the same size of the one now in use, will be retained, and a large card will be introduced that can be used for business purposes, and will be large enough to allow a bill head to be printed thereon, besides the other matter.

The statistics of the Montana Conference are as follows:

Local preachers, 10; members, 446; adults baptized, 23; infants baptized, 23; number churches, 11; value churches, $43,600; number parsonages, 6; value parsonages, $9,550. Total increase church property, $10,485. Number of Sunday-schools, 14; Sunday-school scholars, 675; officers and teachers, 89; money expended for Sunday-schools, $271 70. Amount of money raised for missions, $350. Money raised for church extension, $108 25. Total amount paid to date on the Superannuated Preachers, Widows and Orphans' Fund, $1,100 50; $267 additional subscribed.

The following are the statistics of the Brazil Conference:

The following are some of the statistics for this year: Local preachers, 6; members, 359; adults baptized, 65; infants, 39; Sunday-schools, 10; teachers, 26; pupils, 257; collections for all church purposes, $2,948 50. There are three churches, valued at $62,500. Other church property in the way of furniture for preaching-halls, horses for use of missionaries, etc., valued at about $750, and two girls' colleges, valued at $40,000; whole number of pupils enrolled during the year, 133. In many of the charges there are a number of probationers, perhaps not less than 85 or 100. Adjoining the fields occupied by these workers and members are many open doors inviting them to preach the Word.

Somebody in this country has been giving Canon Farrar some very curious information. In his article in the North American Review, for September, on "Why I Am an Episcopalian," the Canon has this remarkable sentence: "As regards the church of America, I am told that alone, or almost alone, of the religious communities on the Western Continent, it is steadily, if but slowly, adding to its numbers, lengthening its cords and strengthening its stakes." Where did the Canon get that extraordinary piece of information? The comparison is between the religious communities of America, and the result is that the Episcopal Church "alone, or almost alone, is steadily adding to its numbers." How any man, or set of men, could send such a misrepresentation of facts to the good Canon of Westminster is a puzzle. According to the year-books of 1888, there are a little less than 20,000,000 communicants in the churches; of this number less than 500,000 are Episcopalians, and yet the Episcopal Church began operations here as soon as any other church. That may be "steady growth," but it won't do to say that the Episcopal Church "alone, and almost alone," shows growth, when the additions to the other churches last year were nearly double the whole membership of the Episcopal Church! Bishop Seabury was consecrated 1784, the year the Methodist Church in America was organized, and the Episcopal Church at that time was as large, perhaps larger, than the Methodist Church; now the Methodist Church numbers ten times as many members! Somebody ought to disabuse Canon Farrar's mind of such erroneous information as he has received.

the Methodists of Mississippi.

At the request of the Joint committee of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, I am engaged in a canvass of the State in behalf of a new male college. One brother has proposed to give $50,000 for the endowment of such an institution if the church in the States will contribute a like sum. To secure that amount is the purpose of the canvass. About $30,000 have been subscribed, and only a few places as yet visited. It is very desirable that every member of the church in the two Mississippi Conferences, and every friend of higher education, shall have an opportunity to take stock in this great enterprise. To accomplish this, the committee request the presiding elders to arrange educational meetings in the several charges of their districts, and bring to their assistance such brethren as may be secured. I expect, personally, to give all possible diligence to the canvass. All other official work will soon call me away. My time is short and the field is large.

We have everything to encourage us. The two Conferences acted intelligently and earnestly in the matter, and never in my life-long acquaintance with Mississippi have I seen the people respond so liberally and enthusiastically to any call of the church. We hope to open the new college, next September, with more than an hundred thousand dollars in endowment. Presiding elders and pastors can get blank enrollment notes by sending a postal to me at Jackson. I expect the brethren to preach on "Education," as the Discipline directs, and present especially the great enterprise now so near the heart of Mississippi Methodism. If the preachers in the two Conferences will heartily co-operate in this movement for the next three months, the highest success will be amply assured.

Very truly and fraternally,

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

JACKSON, MISS., Sept. 7, 1889.

Our City Council last week passed the following ordinance:

Be it ordained by the council of the city of New Orleans, that from and after the passage of this ordinance it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to expose, circulate, offer for sale, sell or distribute or give away, or to paint, draw, print, write, make or cause to be printed, drawn, painted, written or made for the purpose of exposing, circulating or offering for sale, selling, distributing or giving away within the limits of the city of New Orleans, any obscene, scandalous, libelous book, print, newspaper, pamphlet, circular or periodical, caricature, picture, drawing, statue, or other object whatever, of any immoral or scandalous nature, or calculated to excite scandal, immorality or disturbance of the public peace or tranquility.

SEC. 2. Be it further ordained, that any persons violating the provisions of this ordinance shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to a fine of not more than $25, collectible before the recorder of the district in which the offense was committed, and in default of payment thereof to imprisonment in the parish prison for not exceeding thirty days.

The Brazil Conference, at its recent session, passed the following resolutions:

Whereas, God in his providence has taken Sister Clara Chrisman, missionary to Brazil, who at the time of her death was on her way to her chosen field;

Resolved, That we bow in humble submission to his will, and assure the family of the deceased and the Woman's Board of Missions of our profoundest sympathy and prayers in this great affliction.

Resolved, That the secretary be authorized to transmit a copy of these resolutions to the family of the deceased, and also that they be published in the Nashville Christian Advocate.

If the Louisiana Lottery would publish the names of those who buy tickets, but draw no prizes, "it would be interesting reading," but it might break the concern.

Personal and Otherwise.

Rev. F. L. Reid, editor of the Raleigh Christian Advocate, having worked himself down and sick, retired to Connelly Springs. He says, "The water acted like a charm. It dissipated gastric troubles, whetted the appetite, aided digestion and put flesh on my bones. For seven days I gained one pound a day." Now he has a "song of cheerful praise swelling in his heart to him who healeth all our diseases and redeemeth our lives from destruction." Connelly Springs is almost equal to Sour Lake, Texas.

The Montana Conference elected the following delegates to the General Conference: Rev. E. J. Stanley, clerical; Rev. R. S. Clarke, lay.

Montana Conference is now made up of one presiding elder's district—Helena—and E. J. Stanley is presiding elder.

Our old co-laborer, Rev. A. C. Couey, has been continued as editor of the Montana Methodist. Bro. Couey makes a bright little paper.

The Brazil Conference elected the following delegates to General Conference: Rev. J. W. Tarboux, clerical, and Dr. S. D. Rambo, lay.

Hon. R. W. Millsaps, of Jackson, Miss., has been elected presideal of the Monteagle Assembly. The assembly has complimented itself in that election.

A brother, who was present at the opening of the present session of Centenary College, reports that there were present eighty students. This is the best opening for years, and is most encouraging. Send on your boys right away.

Dr. David H. Moore, of Colorado, has been elected editor of the Western Christian Advocate, in place of Dr. Bayliss, deceased.

Rev. Walter Dunstan, on account of ill health, has been relieved from duty on the Trinity and Vidalia circuit. His address until Conference is 114 St. Charles St., New Orleans. See his card in another column.

A correspondent writes: "I see you are bound to have another missionary to Japan. The column of receipts grows gracefully. THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE practices missions." If the reader don't hurry up, he will have no interest in our next missionary!

J. T. M. Hancock, representative from Jackson parish to the Louisiana Legislature, in a late number of the Ruston Caligraph, defines his position on the Louisiana State Lottery in unmistakable language. The gist of his article is: "I say, swipe her up." Now, let some other legislators speak.

This item is from the Hattiesburg Courier, and is a good straw:

The members of the Colored Methodist Church at this place have fitted up an elegant parsonage for their pastor. Their parsonage and church would be creditable to many white congregations. They desire to return thanks for kindly help from white friends.

A number of stamp mills—great crushing machines—are being made at Lumberton, Miss., to crush the native ore at a gold mine, 700 miles in the interior of Africa. Camp & Hinton Bros. are certainly wide-awake young men.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. J. W. Poston, writing from Holly Springs, Miss., says: "We have closed the third meeting protracted; the last being a camp meeting at Lebanon Camp Ground. The result: 43 conversions, 10 accessions, 6 children and 7 adults baptized. Very many backsliders restored to their first love. Some have entered perfect love and are drinking freely at the fountain. Quite a number of family altars erected. Our Lebanon Camp Meeting was conducted on the self-sustaining plan, and it proved a grand success. Good order all through. Good preaching by the following brethren: Dr. T. L. Boswell, of the Memphis Conference; J. J. Smith, of Kentucky; J. W. Honnoll, P. E.; T. W. Dyo, H. B. Scruggs, of our Conference. To God be all the glory."

—Rev. J. P. Drake, writing from Shubuta, Miss., September 7, says: "We have just closed a fine meeting at Quitman, on 'Shubuta circuit.' It continued seven days and grew in interest to the last. The church itself was deeply stirred and strengthened, and received twenty-five accessions to its membership. Rev. J. W. Chambers was with us in labors abundant and effectual for three days toward the close of the meeting. To him we owe many thanks. But to God we will give all the glory. He has been wondrously good to us this year."

—Rev. W. J. Porter writes from Vienna, La., August 31: "After six days' duration we closed a glorious meeting at Antioch, Thursday, August 29. Bros. J. L. Williams and M. Delony rendered valuable service. Results: church greatly revived, eighteen accessions, several conversions, two infants baptized, and sixty communicants at the last service. Pray for us and our work. God bless you and the ADVOCATE!"

—A Methodist writes: "In the last issue of this ADVOCATE appeared two bulletins about the new college, and in the Nashville Advocate appeared one—all wanting to know what North Mississippi was doing to further the endowment fund. Now, Mr. Editor, North Mississippi is willing to do her share, and is doing it. Hence we do not understand the bulletins referred to. Will Bro. Mellen explain? Has the Mississippi Conference turned over its interest to North Mississippi? This is written in no complaining spirit, but simply because we do not understand Bro. Mellen's appeal to North Mississippi."

—Rev. T. S. West, presiding elder of the Seashore district, writes: "We understand Bro. J. D. Hays has had a good meeting at Lumberton, Miss. I began September 1; preaching twice a day, 11:30 A. M. and 7:30 P. M.; large attendance at each service. Those excellent millmen, Camp & Hinton Bros., gave the operatives three hours at noon, so that they might have the opportunity to attend the mid-day service. Up to Tuesday night, the third day, there were half a dozen accessions. Among others was Mr. Wood Hinton, the older brother of the firm."

—Rev. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, writing from Centenary College, Sept. 9, 1889, says: "We open with four times as many as last year, and with more than we had during all last session. Nearly all our students of last year have returned, and our number will probably reach a hundred next week. Several of our young married preachers are coming. They feel that efficiency in their calling demands more education. Some of them will rent houses and take boarders. We have had a pleasant opening, and hope to have a prosperous session."

—Rev. R. M. Blocker, writing from Prairie Hayes, La., Sept. 7, 1889, says: "We closed a revival meeting of seven days at this place to-night. Thirty-two joined the church, and many souls were converted. Several new family altars promised; and quite a number promised to take the ADVOCATE when the crop comes in. Land was donated, and $352 50 subscribed to build a church. To date we have an accession of 127 members on the circuit. Praise the Lord!"

—Rev. C. R. Godfrey, writing from Big Cane, La., September 7, says: "I began a protracted meeting here on last Sabbath. Congregations large and increasing. Many persons at the altar. Two have joined. A big stir. Bro. Wimberly, of Plaquemine, has been doing the preaching since Tuesday night. Hope and pray that the results may be astonishing to the adversary of souls and these wicked, but clever, people of this place."

A Card.

The matter of procuring a teacher for the colored school at Bee Lake, Miss., has been placed entirely in the hands of Bishop Galloway and Dr. A. G. Haygood. Communications addressed to other parties will not be replied to. D. A. LITTLE.

A living Bishop defines perfect love in this way:

Perfect love is perfect love. It is not acidity, acridity, acrimony, criticism. Perfect love abides in sweetness, gentleness, sympathy, and helpfulness. It is simple and strong.

The Rev. Walter Dunstan, who was so successful as a teacher of shorthand and type-writing in this city, has been compelled by sickness to take a temporary vacation, and during that time will receive a limited number of pupils. Classes will commence on the seventeenth instant. Tuition will be ten dollars per month (including books) payable in advance. Classes strictly limited to six. Address 114 St. Charles street.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhœa. 25c. a bottle.

Notice.

To Brethren of North Mississippi Conference:

This is to inform the brethren who subscribed at Starkville, last December, to the fund for Payne and Lane Institutes, and have not paid their subscription, that Bro. Dunlap writes me that they are greatly in need of money to pay their teachers, and requests me to ask you to send in your subscription as soon as possible. Send money to me at Holly Springs, Miss. Brethren, please let us hear from you.

THE CENTURY DICTIONARY.

THIS great work, which has been in active preparation for the past seven years, contains a number of novel features, and combines in one a dictionary and a condensed and usable encyclopedia. It does not stop at mere definitions of words, but goes into particulars about things. The spelling, while resting on an independent basis, is essentially the so called American; the system of indicating pronunciation is simple and easily understood, and the etymologies are treated more fully than in any dictionary yet published. It is a reference book, not only for the casual reader, but for the specialist also—the biologist, the architect, the electrician, the musician, the mineralogist, etc.—and for the business man.

We would like to make every reader of this paper acquainted with the plan of The Century Dictionary, and for this purpose we will send descriptive circulars free of charge, upon request, or for ten cents in stamps (the cost of manufacture) we will mail to any address a large pamphlet containing a number of specimen pages of the Dictionary, showing sample definitions in various subjects, as anatomy, law, botany, theology, gems, games, mechanics, physics with specimen illustrations, etc., etc. Address

Our Young People.

OUR LITTLE CHEMIST.

BY CLARA BROUGHTON.

Yes, that is the name that we call him,
Our Jack with the curly brown hair.
He has a snug nest in the attic,
And tries his "experiments" there.

His mother, half scolding, half laughing,
Declares she shall surely go wild.
And is thankful that out of her seven
She has only one "chemical" child.

When he comes down, he's all sorts of colors—
Red, grass green, and purple, and black—
You'd think a wild savage had painted
That dear little chemist called Jack.

We're in dread all the time of explosions,
That he'll blow us all up some fine day,
Since he came down, his rosy face blackened,
And half of his curls singed away.

Yet his mother, in spite of her chiding,
Says oft, with proud, motherly air,
That the world will yet hear of our chemist,
Our Jack with the curly brown hair.

—Harper's Young People.

Science, Homeopathically Prepared by Uncle Carlos.

Then our uncle proceeded in his lucid and delightful manner (to which I can only approximate) to tell us that the "hypothesis," or supposition, was, "that the entire mass of the solar system was created in gaseous form, filling the whole space now occupied by that system. To this immense mass motion was imparted; this caused light and heat. (As you read in your school-books, 'light and heat are modes of motion.') Then revolution began; in consequence of this, the outer planet, now named, what?"

"Neptune," again shouted the irrepressible, "was thrown off as a ring like those of Saturn."

"This ring in time changed into a spheroid, and was named Neptune, as we have been informed. In the process of years the next planet in order was evolved. What is that called?"

"Uranus," again, but more quietly answered Ralph; being somewhat awed by the grand ideas now dawning upon his mind.

"Ages pass on; then Saturn follows, and he is supposed to be giving us an illustration of the manner in which the planets have furnished themselves with satellites, he having supplied himself with eight glorious moons. Next followed Jupiter, who has in a similar manner supplied himself with four shining attendants. Neither Jupiter nor Saturn are supposed to have cooled sufficiently to form a dark crust; their 'everlasting hills' being yet in a fluid state. Mars next followed; then our own planet; then Venus, succeeded by Mercury, the name given to the messenger of the gods, as your mythology informs you."

"Oh! yes, I remember about him," said Ralph; "and it is thought there is one inside of this named Vulcan, in honor of that old fellow who forged thunderbolts and had those one-eyed giants as his workmen? What were their names? Had just one eye in the middle of their foreheads!"

"Cyclops," coolly replied Alick, who, less impulsive than his younger brother, was always ready and accurate when called upon. "Cyclop or Cyclopes (as usual, the authorities differ) Webster using 'cyclops' for both singular and plural, and Leverett using 'Cyclopes' in the plural, which is the regular form," explained the clear-headed, studious boy.

"Thank you, brother Alick," said Ralph; "I think it is so much more interesting to hear your clear explanations than to be 'looking up' things in dictionaries and encyclopedias."

"No doubt," replied Alick, with an appreciative glance at his sister Grace, who was diligently laboring—while assisting him in his daily tasks—to impress the importance of more careful study and research upon the mind of her younger brother.

Uncle, smiling at the little episode, brought our minds back to the subject under discussion by saying, "The remainder of this tremendous mass is now known to us as the 'glorious sun,' the 'orb of day,' the 'source of all life and light,' etc."

"But, Uncle, think of the ages and ages which must have elapsed while all these planets were being 'evolved,' as you call it, and our earth was being prepared for life upon its surface," said thoughtful Thomas, for the first time opening his lips, awed into an unwonted silence; "and how do you reconcile this wonderful 'hypothesis,' which requires ages and ages for its accomplishment, with the six days of the first chapter of Genesis?"

The clock now struck nine, and Uncle, quietly remarking, "that he feared losing his reputation for homeopathic doses if he gave us a larger one this evening," bade us good-night in his cheeriest tones, saying, "I will consider your question in my next preparation, my 'doubting Thomas;' but will suggest for your comfort in the meantime that the works and word of God must be in harmony, and if we fail to make them agree, the fault must be in us, not in them. I also agree with him who says that science for the first time in the history of our race has come up so nearly abreast with the Mosaic account as to permit comparison."

"Thank you, Uncle," replied the boy, who was decidedly disposed to "prove all things, and hold fast" only "that which was good" and true, being emphatically a seeker after truth. "I shall await with interest your next preparation."

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl nine years old, and it has been a long time since I wrote to your valuable paper. I thought I would write to you again. My teacher's name is Mrs. Lou Row, and I love her very much, for she is so good and kind to her little scholars. I took a trip to the pine woods this summer to see my Grandma Norton. It was the first time I ever saw her. You can imagine how glad she was to see me. I had quite a nice time with so many of my little cousins. I will answer Bettie Pipkin's question, "Where is 'money' found in the Bible?" It is found in St. Mark xi, 15. I will close by asking the little cousins a question: Where in the Bible is the word "razor" found? For fear of tiring you, Mr. Editor, I will close, with much love to you and the little cousins.

Your friend,

IDA S. DAVIS.

ROW'S LANDING, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl eleven years old, and have no brother or sister. I live with my grandfather. He is sixty-five years old, and has been sick one year. He was superintending a Sabbath-school last year, and had to leave off on account of his health failing. My father was a Methodist preacher; he died early in life. I have no pets, only the fish in the brook near our house. I often enjoy myself looking at them, and the birds in the orchard, and my flowers. Can any of the little cousins tell where the Lord told Moses to be ready in the morning? Pray for my grandpa to get well.

From one who loves to read the children's letters.

MARTHA DENHAM.

MR. EDITOR: Here is another little girl who wishes to join your glorious band. I will be eleven years old on December 9. Bros. Anders, and McDonald, presiding elder of Woodville district, are holding a protracted meeting. Everyone seems to take great interest in the meetings. Mamma has five children besides myself, two boys and three girls. For fear my letter will be too long, and reach that dreaded waste-basket, I will close, wishing much success to the dear old ADVOCATE. I am,

Your true friend,

WILLIE SCHWING.

Household.

Housekeeping of the Future.

In cities and villages the kitchen and cooking stove and hired girl are all to be banished from the home. Clothes-making, soap-making, starch-making, laundry-work, coffee-browning, yeast-making, butter-making—all are gone. Send after them (or rather say that organized industry is already taking along with these) the remaining work of cooking and cleaning. This state of things is coming as sure as fate; and when it comes the deliverance will be so great that generations yet unborn shall rise up to bless the workings of this beneficent law.

The city of the future will not build houses in squares, giving to every house an individual kitchen and prison-like back yard. It will rather build them all around an open square, and the part now disfigured with the kitchen will be given over for a household sitting-room or nursery, opening into a great, green space, where children shall play in safety, and through which the free air of heaven shall blow into the houses surrounding it. In every square will be found a scientifically-constructed building containing a laundry and a great kitchen, supplied with every modern appliance for skilled and scientific cookery, and also for sending into every dining-room any desired quantity or variety of food. The individuality of the home and the home table will be preserved, and the kitchen smells and waste and "hired girl" will all be banished. —Mrs. Helen E. Starret, in The Forum.

Education in the Home.

There is a process of education constantly going on in every dwelling which care and thought can make an unspeakable advantage, and at the same time contribute to make a happy home. To keep objects of pure and high interest before the children's minds, in a natural and suitable way—to have them supplied with such books as will occupy and interest—to talk not so much to them as with them about objects—to take note of and encourage any advance they make, and to direct the flow not of a part of, but of the whole of their lives—physical, mental, moral, without apparent interference or violence; this happy art—to be sought, prayed for, labored for under God's blessing, goes far to make a peaceful and happy home.

The tastes of children are naturally simple. Your child's wooden toy cut with your own hand, perhaps, and made a link of connection between your little boy and you, may be more to him, more influential over his character, more potent in binding his heart to you while living, his memory to you when you are dead, than a costly gift that you ordered at the store. And when you, living a loving, natural life before your children, and with them, bend the knee in their midst, and speak to God of them and yourself, there is a powerful restraint being put on natural evil, there is a pleasant type of heaven where the whole family that is named after Jesus shall be gathered together.—Dr. John Hall.

THE HOUSEHOLD ANGEL.—The glad-hearted, cheery woman who makes the best of every thing is a treasure in any home. She may make mistakes, she may forget, she may spoil a dish in mixing or in baking, but if, with the mishap, she sends in a gleam of sunshine, a smile, a laugh, or some gay and kindly word, people forget their disappointments and make the best of what they can not help. And how much better this is than the unvarying precision of one who has no faults and no patience with those who have; who never makes mistakes nor makes allowances for others who do. Accuracy and precision are excellent; punctuality and promptness are most valuable; but "love is the fulfilling of the law," and Christian charity is greater than faith, hope, faultless housekeeping, or anything else. If you're born with sunshine in your heart, thank God for it, and let it shine out. But if not, turn your gaze to the Son of Righteousness and catch the brightness that beams from his face. "They looked unto him and were lightened, and their faces were not ashamed." —Common People.

A Fact

WORTH knowing is that blood diseases which all other remedies fail to cure, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Fresh confirmation of this statement comes to hand daily. Even such deep-seated and stubborn complaints as Rheumatism, Rheumatic Gout, and the like, are thoroughly eradicated by the use of this wonderful alterative.

Mrs. R. Irving Dodge, 110 West 125th street, New York, certifies:—

"About two years ago, after suffering nearly two years from rheumatic pain, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months. I am pleased to say that it effected a complete cure, and that I have since had no return of the disease."

Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H., writes: "One year ago I was taken ill with rheumatism, being confined to my bed six months. I came out of the illness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon regaining my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."

"I have taken a great deal of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I know its beneficial effects before I had quite finished one bottle, and I can truly testify that it is the best blood-purifier I know of."—L. W. Ward, Sr., Woodland, Texas.

HENINGTON—THOMAS HENRY HENINGTON was born October 28, 1857, near Crystal Springs, Miss., and died, June 9, 1889, at Santarem, Province of Para, Brazil. He was a son of Rev. R. T. Henington, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, and a grandson of Rev. Henry Henington, one of the pioneer local preachers of Central Mississippi. When he was about eleven years of age, his father emigrated to Brazil. From that time on his surroundings were anything but favorable to piety. There was no Protestant Church within hundred of miles, and the semi-pagan character of the Romanism of that region is too well known to need description. Outside his own home all his environments were morally deleterious. Happily, however, the fires of Christian devotion still burned brightly on the family altar. So potent were these home influences, that by the time he had reached maturity he had developed a Christian character far stronger and more symmetrical than that of many who have the helps of the sanctuary and breathe the atmosphere of Christian civilization. Some five or six years ago he married a Romanist, and so strong was the impression made upon her by his consistent Christian life that she soon voluntarily renounced the religion of her ancestors for a purer faith. A little more than a year ago, while on a visit to the land of her husband's nativity, she died at Milan, Tenn., and was buried in the sepulchre of her husband's forefathers, at Crystal Springs, Miss. He returned to Brazil, and in a few short months fell a victim to the same disease which had carried her off—consumption. When first prostrated, he passed through a great conflict. Pecuniarily, he had exceedingly flattering prospects before him, and he had two motherless children for whose sake he felt he ought to live. But after a time faith triumphed. Some time before his departure he was enabled to say, "Thy will be done!" He was conscious to the last, and his end was exceedingly peaceful. He exhorted the friends at his bedside to meet him in the land that is fairer than day.

ECTOR—Sister SARAH J. ECTOR has entered into life by the way of death; death to sin, in early life, through faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, and through "the valley of the shadow of death," August 1, 1889. She was born, May 8, 1828, in South Carolina, of James and Ann Morrow. With her parents she removed to Pontotoc county, Miss., and was there united in holy wedlock to Mr. R. E. Ector, October 21, 1847. She was the mother of seven children, six of whom, with her husband, preceded her to the better world. She leaves one bereaved child, Sister Mattie A. Ashley, at whose home in Alexandria, La., she passed away. She was a resident of Louisiana from 1862 till her demise.

I was often with Sister Ector, from the time she returned from New Orleans (where she had gone for treatment) till God called her home. She was calm, tranquil, and full of faith in Christ, her Savior. Her last words, in answer to my question—"Do you still trust your Savior?"—were, "Oh, yes; and I will trust him to the end." Sister Ector was for many years a member of the Methodist Church. She has gone from the church militant to the church triumphant above. May he, who "tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," be the comfort and stay of the now lonely and bereaved daughter, and at last welcome her to the paradise of God on high! HER PASTOR.

SMITH—Mrs. ANNA SMITH was born in Newnan, Ga., February 4, 1825; was married in Columbus, Ga., in 1843, to Rev. John M. Smith. In 1860 they moved to Louisiana; in 1867 they moved back to Alabama, and settled in Green county, where her husband died in 1868. Sister Smith, with her orphaned children, after the death of her husband, returned to Louisiana, and settled in Ouachita parish. She was the mother of eleven children, nine of whom lived to be grown and married. One of her daughters, Mrs. Hinson, was run over and killed by the V., S. and P. train, near Arcadia, in 1884. Sister Smith died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Susie Clendonning, in Arcadia, La., on May 20, 1889, of heart disease. She joined the Methodist Church soon after her marriage, and ever lived a faithful, consistent Christian life. She was a warm-hearted, zealous Christian after the primitive Methodist style. May the bereaved children live so as to meet their saluted mother in heaven!

JNO. A. MILLER.

PIERCE—EVA GERTRUDE, the only child of Bro. J. B. and Sister Mary Pierce, was born February 14, 1887, and departed this life, May 24, 1889, making her stay with us only two years, three months and ten days. She was a bright, merry child. The pride and joy of father, mother, grandpa and grandma—the household pet. But God has taken her to dwell with him in his heavenly household, where we hope to meet little Eva when this life's labors are over. Yes, dear little Eva has gone, and my dear friends are deprived of having the sweet, precious child with them on earth; but God knows best, and the time is not far distant when we all shall be called from this life by death; and if we only spend our time for the Master, we will enjoy the beautiful home of rest with dear little Eva, to be separated from her nevermore.

J. F. ROBINSON, P. C.

SULLIVAN—Mrs. MELISSA G. SULLIVAN, wife of Rev. W. M. Sullivan, D. C., of North Wilkinson circuit, Mississippi Conference, died in the parsonage, August 12, 1889, after a painful illness of five months' duration. She joined the Methodist Church in 1871, and was converted in 1878. She was a sweet-spirited and consistent Christian, a true wife and a kind and affectionate mother. The sorrow-stricken itinerant and two small children—a son and daughter—and a large number of relatives and friends are left to mourn her departure.

She spoke of her death, expressed her readiness to meet it, and planned for a single sister of her husband to live with him, keep the house and care for the motherless children. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. E. A. Flowers and the writer, and she was buried in the cemetery at Mt. Carmel Church, near the parsonage. I desire to make record of the sympathy, kindness and material aid extended to Bro. Sullivan, during his long affliction, by his parishioners. May God sustain this zealous young preacher in this sore bereavement!

C. M'DONALD.

DRAKE—JOHN C. DRAKE was born in Northern Tennessee in 1812. He moved to Cherokee county, Ala., in 1833, and while living there was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the year 1842. In 1877 he moved to Lauderdale county, Miss., where he spent the remainder of his days among some of his children who were already there. He died August 19, 1889.

From the day of his conversion he lived a holy life. He assumed at once all his religious duties and became at once a very useful member of his church. His prayers were earnest and powerful, and his godly life and faithful warnings will long be remembered with love and gratitude in the community where he lived. Toward the last his mind failed; but in his lucid intervals all his conversation was of heaven and its glories. Thank God, who has realized for him those glories, and given him to see all the meaning of his favorite passage of Scripture—"Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel, and afterward receive me to glory."

HIS PASTOR.

DILWORTH—Sweet little GEORGE DILWORTH, the son of Bro. A. M. Dilworth, died at his home, near Rienzi, Miss., some time in July. Dear little George has left the fond embraces of his loving parents and grandparents, and has gone to heaven to live with Jesus and the angels. He was four years old and, I believe, the brightest boy of his age I ever saw. Sometimes he would go out in the yard and tell grandmamma he was going to "preach," as he called it, and would talk for about half an hour, as though he had a congregation before him. Really, it seemed to me, he was so beautiful and lovely in appearance and disposition, and of such intelligence, that he was too pure for earth, and is taken from its evils. May his father and mother be comforted with this thought: that their most precious jewel is with God in heaven, and that they can meet him up there, if they are faithful in this life!

A. B. DEARING.

BRADFORD—MATTIE, fourth daughter of Rev. D. P. and Mrs. Emma Bradford, was born in Fayette, Miss., August 9, 1880, and died, of congestion, in Jackson, La., June 27, 1889.

To those who knew this child these statements mean far more than the stranger will read in them. They bring before us a beautiful girl, bright of mind, vigorous of body, and having a "meek and quiet spirit;" a child in whose heart was written the law of love and reverence, and in whose deportment was the charm of shrinking modesty; a child found faithful in the home, in the school, in the Sunday-school. Such a child wins love and makes the world happier and better by her living, though all unconscious of her influence. The piety of Mattie Bradford's life will bear fruit on earth while she is "safe in the arms of Jesus." E. M. HUNNICUTT.

O'WIN—Little JIMMIE, son of E. J. and T. F. O'Win, was born August 27, 1888, and died August 19, 1889. He was taken from earth to heaven to await the coming of papa and mamma. May God comfort the parents, and at the last day bring them to an eternal life in heaven, where little Jimmie is waiting for them! We would say: Farewell, little Jimmie. No more will your bright face be seen here below; but we would only say farewell until the dawn of that eternal morn, when we expect to meet you in glory, where there is no more parting, but one eternal bliss. W. N. FORD.

RUNDLE—JOHN LINDIE RUNDLE, eldest son of Margaret Brodnax Lundie and David B. Rundle, was born July 14, 1886, and died August 11, 1889, in Vicksburg, Miss.—his birthplace and home—surrounded by friends and family, loved by all who knew him. The grief of his family, who are faithful members of the Methodist Church, was lightened by the knowledge of their loved one passing away in the faith of Christ and the hope of a reunion beyond this world.

Glass Houses and Other Possibilities.

The future of the glass industry in the United States is encouraging, for it is only since the war that the manufacture of polished plate has grown up; and there are now running, or building, enough furnaces to supply all that will be used in the country. It is within the last ten years that the manufacture of cathedral and rough plate has been thoroughly established, at first disputing and now controlling the home market against England and Belgium. The improvement in window-glass has also been great, and there are workmen and manufacturers who think they see the rising sun of much better days and a much better American glass. The concentration of capital in powerful concerns must certainly lead to changes in the system of labor that are bound to insure a more finished product. A new glass recently invented in Germany is said to add marvelously to the power of the microscope. A Yale professor announces the invention of a perfect acromatic telescope lens.

Legend tells of the lost invention of "malleable glass." Tiberius is said to have discouraged a genius who found the secret by beheading him, fearing the innovating would reduce the value of gold. It is also recorded that Cardinal Richelieu was presented with a bust of malleable glass by a chemist, who purposely let it fall into fragments, and mended it before his eyes with a hammer. The inventor was promptly rewarded by perpetual imprisonment, lest his ingenuity should ruin the "vested interest" of French manufacturers. But if glass may not ape the metals in malleability, it may imitate them in another respect just as important. A more fortunate Frenchman (M. de la Bastie) has within a few years introduced into Europe a transmuted glass which, he claims, may displace cast-iron. If it fulfills his expectations it will mark a new era in glass, and the old adage "as brittle as glass" will be superseded by a new one, "as tough as glass." By his process railway sleepers, fence posts, drain pipes, tanks, etc., are cast in moulds, and so toughened by a bath in oils as to be stronger than iron, though much lighter, and costing one-third as much. But it is questioned whether his results reach what is claimed for the process. These undeveloped toughening processes augur astounding changes in the future of glass. "Glass houses" may become the fashion, and we would have to reverse our proverb about them, for they would be bomb-proof. Already transparent glass bricks are made. Extending the possibilities of glass a little further, why may we not build the entire structure of glass? The walls might be cemented blocks cast like hewn stone, but translucent, and of any color. One could thus inhabit a huge pile of amber or of gigantic gems. The windows could be multiform, some of them telescopic, bringing distant things near, some with lenses or mirrors guiding the focussed sun's heat for culinary and comfortable purposes, others straining out the light or chemic rays. Tapestries, furniture, and utensils might be made of the universal material. The whole would be more endurable than granite. No fire could harm it; lightning would shun it. Such a dream, blossoming from this miraculous substance, may be realized by an Aladdin whose lamp is of glass.—Harper's Magazine.

CORK.—Cork is the bark of a small evergreen oak which grows abundantly in Spain, Portugal, the south of France, and the north of Africa. When the tree is from fifteen to twenty years old, a cut is made around the trunk just below the branches, and another at the surface of the ground; several perpendicular incisions are then made from one to the other, and the cork is removed by inserting a blunt instrument underneath it, care being taken not to injure the inner bark, which would kill the tree. This is done in July or August, and is repeated every eight or ten years as long as the tree lives, which is about one hundred and fifty years. When removed, the cork is slightly charred or scorched; this improves it by closing the pores and enables it more easily to be flattened by pressure.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The Old Long College celebration, under the auspices of the Presbytery of Philadelphia, North, was held, on September 5, on the old Tennent Farm, near Hartsville, Bucks county, Pa., where the college originally stood. President and Mrs. Harrison, with a large number of prominent people, were present.

Dairy Commissioners Thorn and Ives of Wisconsin and Minnesota, respectively, have decided to join in a call upon their fellow commissioners throughout the Union to meet in convention at Cleveland, Ohio, on Nov. 6, 7 and 8 of this year, and discuss laws against adulteration.

In a race war in Leflore county, Miss., last week, eight or ten negroes were killed and a white man was wounded. A party of negroes, being refused cartridges at a store, burned the building with its contents.

The New York Prohibitionists, in convention at Syracuse, on the fifth, indorsed the national platform adopted at Indianapolis. It declares that the prohibition of the liquor traffic, State and national, should be the dominating and dividing political issue until such prohibition shall have become the recognized and settled policy of the government; that license, high or low, is powerless as a remedy, that local option has proven unsatisfactory.

The Indian office has received a report from a special agent, in which he says that a majority of the male members of the Omaha tribe of Indians have signed an agreement to set apart 49.10 acres of land on their reservation for the use and occupancy of the Woman's National Indian Association for missionary and educational purposes.

Hon. Andrew Price, the Democratic nominee, has been elected to Congress from the Third Congressional District of Louisiana.

A National Convention of Charities was begun in San Francisco on the eleventh.

The new steam cruiser Philadelphia, was launched at Philadelphia, September 7, and was christened by Miss Wanamaker, daughter of the Postmaster General.

There will be no extra session of Congress. The matter was definitely settled in the negative at a Cabinet meeting called for the express purpose of considering the question.

The seventh of the series of tariff reform picnics being held in Missouri, occurred on September 7, at Cogswell. Ten thousand people were present from eleven counties. The delegations from several counties wore badges upon which were inscribed the words, "Cleveland, 1892."

The White Ash Coal Mine, near Golden, Colo., was flooded on September 9, and a party of ten miners was drowned.

A new business directory of Johnstown, Pa., the scene of the late flood, and surrounding boroughs, contains the names of over 500 business and professional men. It also shows that there are now 36 grocery stores and 51 saloons open in the place.

FOREIGN.

The Canadian Labor Congress passed strong resolutions calling on the dominion and provincial governments to abolish the system of subsidizing railways by land and money grants as detrimental to the interests of the country.

Preparations have been nearly completed for the construction of a telegraph line from Pau Ting Foo, near Pekin, through Shansi, to connect with the Russian telegraph system at Koakla.

General Boulanger has written Minister Tirard claiming the right to be tried by court martial and pledging himself to appear before such tribunal.

The coming German imperial budget will propose the creation of a colonial department, to be attached to the foreign office.

Five thousand steel workers in Wales threaten to strike. They demand an advance of 10 per cent. in wages.

An explosion of dynamite occured in a cartridge factory in Antwerpe, Belgium, on September 6. It is estimated that 2,000,000 cartridges were exploded. About 160 lives were lost. Two hundred and fifty persons were seriously and 300 slightly injured.

The Dominion Labor Congress passed resolutions approving the eight-hour movement, Henry George's land taxation schome, the appointment of a compulsory board of arbitration for settling all disputes between laborers and employer.

Heavy storms are reported throughout Switzerland and much damage has resulted.

M. Theyaet, Minister of Justice, has sent a circular to bishops of France, reminding them that the clergy are prohibited by law from taking part in the elections.

Legislation generally in favor of the working classes will play a leading part in the coming session of both the Reichstag and the Landtag, as a preliminary to forming a plank in the election platform.

The great London strike is drawing to a close. In addition to the dock companies which have already acceded to the terms of the strikers, a number of other companies have signified their willingness to grant the demands of the men.

COMPARISON SOLICITED.—A wise discrimination should be exercised by all who take medicine. The proprietors of Hood's Sarsaparilla solicit a careful comparison of this medicine with other blood purifiers and medicines, being confident that the peculiar merits of Hood's Sarsaparilla are so apparent that the people will unhesitatingly prefer it to any other preparation. Hood's Sarsaparilla is not a mixture of molasses and a few inert roots and herbs, but it is a peculiar concentrated extract of the best alterative and blood-purifying remedies of the vegetable kingdom. The enormous sales of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and the wonderful cures effected, prove even more than has been claimed for this medicine. If you are sick the best medicine is none too good. Therefore, take Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Annual Review of Education in the South.

EXTRACTS FROM TIMES-DEMOCRAT.

There has been a steady movement during the decade, but no greater progress made during any period than the past twelve months. The great needs of the Southern States in the matter of public schools are more money and better teachers. The many normal schools established are rapidly solving the last problem. The money problem is more difficult. It is the one demand in the report of nearly every Southern superintendent—more funds for the schools.

In 1870 the amount given for public schools in the various Southern States was $3,800,622.

The census returns gave the following:

EXPENDITURES FOR SCHOOLS FOR 1880.

By States	$4,468,807
By counties	1,138,774
Total	$5,607,081

Last year the expenditures crept up to $11,742,702.

This year, the school revenues and the value of school property were:

	School revenues.	Value school property.
Alabama	$ 713,892	$ 600,000
Arkansas	1,312,986	705,276
Florida	500,400	456,874
Georgia	788,500	780,000
Kentucky	1,764,107	2,896,549
Louisiana	666,206	800,000
Mississippi	1,096,084	850,000
North Carolina	700,945	735,510
South Carolina	541,600	593,933
Tennessee	1,330,339	1,934,375
Texas	2,885,695	3,500 000
Virginia	1,558,352	2,117,603
Total	$13,905,304	$15,969,590

There is an increase over last year of $1,983,098, or nearly 17 per cent., over 1880 of 145 per cent and over 1870 279 per cent.

The Southern States have increased their school appropriations four times as much as the population and nearly three times as much as their wealth has grown.

The effect of these increased appropriations upon their schools is well shown in the following statistics of schools, enrollment, attendance, etc.:

Scholastic population in 12 Southern States: Whites, 2,057,990; colored, 3,908,152—total 5,966,142. Number of teachers, 71,317; number of schools, 62,861. Number of pupils enrolled, 3,220,955, attendance, 2,085,032.

EDUCATION OF NEGROES.

Especially important is the work done among the negroes, to whom the difficulty of the Southern educational problem is largely due, constituting as they do so large a mass of illiteracy, and contributing so little to the schools. The present condition of the race today in the matter of public schools is as follows:

Number of schools of all kinds and grades, 19,634; teachers, 20,915; pupils, 1,000,434. Of the latter, there were enrolled in public schools, 985,022. Increase since 1882, thirty-four per cent.

Contributions of Southern States by school taxes, $37,377,673; contributions from societies and missions, $15,767,746—total contributions to colored schools, $53,145,419.

COLLEGES.

While improving their present school systems, the Southern States have endeavored to simultaneously organize colleges and improve the institutions of higher education also. The Southern colleges are numerous and good. The greatest improvement of the decade has been in the matter of normal schools, to supply the increased demand for teachers felt throughout the South, and in the manual training schools the result of the growth of manufactures and similar industries in this section, which demand skilled labor.

The condition of the Southern colleges is as follows to-day:

In our eighty-nine colleges there are 7,733 students; 1,761 attending the school of theology, 535 law schools, and 2,127 the schools of medicine. There are also 27 normal schools.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Tar has made a name and record for itself in the past fifty years that is enviable. Thousands of people having tried it for coughs, colds, catarrh, asthma, bronchitis and consumption know its value, and would not be without it. Why? Because it cures where other remedies fail. We recommend it for children subject to croup and whooping-cough. It will give relief and cause speedy cure. The medical profession recognize it, and physicians frequently prescribe it for lung troubles. These facts have pushed Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar to the front rank. It is the best remedy for coughs, colds, all throat and lung affections, and no family should be without it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

No one can be good, or great, or happy, except through inward efforts of his own.—F. W. Robertson.

The clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; but they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese of New York has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and The Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

From Rev. Dr. McAnally, editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate.

"I have tried J. & C. Maguire's Cundurango on myself and others, and it is my opinion that to produce a healthy and sane action on the Liver, Kidneys and secretions generally, there is not a better medicine known, and for persons of Bilious or Costive habits its action is most effective and salutary."

SEPTEMBER.

BY HARTLEY COLERIDGE.

The dark green summer, with its massive hues,
Fades into autumn's tincture manifold.
A gorgeous garniture of fire and gold
The high slope of the ferny hill imbues.
The mists of morn in slumbering layers diffuse
O'er glimmering rock, smooth lake and spiked array
Of hedgerow thorns, a unity of grey.
All things appear their tangible form to lose
In ghostly vastness. But anon the gloom
Melts as the sun puts off his muddy veil;
And now the birds their twittering songs resume,
All summer silent the leafy dale.
In spring they piped of love on every tree,
But now they sing the song of memory.

The Race Troubles in Leflore County, Miss.

BY REV. J. W. MALONE.

Although the negroes are, perhaps, the most humble, docile and forgiving of any race of people known to history, yet again and again since their freedom there have been uprisings among them, by which, doubtless, they mean to express to us a dissatisfaction with their present condition, together with a desire to place themselves on an equality with the whites.

Without stopping to discuss the great question of social and political equality between the races—a question, if settled at all, can only be done by time, education and religion—it will be sufficient to say that these disturbances have generally been instigated, directly or indirectly, by others.

The recent trouble in Leflore county has been greatly exaggerated; yet there has been real cause for alarm on the part of the few white people who live in this section. The facts are these: The negroes have been organized throughout this entire section in the last twelve months into the Farmers' Alliance. These Alliance meetings are held in perfect secrecy, and have been largely attended. The pledge taken on joining, as explained by themselves, is not only to help each other to get goods at low prices, which is perfectly legitimate, but to stick to and defend each other by force from any oppression which they might conceive to be inflicted upon them by the white people.

When in attendance at these meetings a large number were armed with Winchester rifles, and for months they have been buying up these guns. The seemingly inevitable issue between the races has been precipitated by factions among the leading negroes themselves. This led Cromwell, their main leader, to write himself a threatening letter—it is conceded now by the negroes themselves that he wrote it—but which they pretended to believe came from some white man. He did this to consolidate his people on himself and also, doubtless, to bring matters to an issue. In answer to this anonymous letter, one of defiance was sent to the white people, signed, "three thousand members of the Alliance."

It seems that it was the purpose of the negroes to kill and burn indiscriminately. Rev. W. S. Shipman, of Sunnyside and McNutt, and myself, together with the leading planters from Shell Mound to Black Bayou, a distance of over twenty miles, did all we could to keep the peace. Indeed, a body of over one hundred armed negroes, a mile back of Minter City, was prevailed on to disband and go home. But in a few hours after the band had dispersed one of the leaders shot and killed one of his men because he would not take up arms again and go with him. This, of course, stirred the whole matter up again, and at the call of our people there were not less than 500 armed men here at Minter City, on Monday, September 2. The militia, about 130 men in all, returned on the same day of their arrival, as the negroes had dispersed. By order of the governor and sheriff the negroes were to be deprived of their arms and the ringleaders brought to justice. All the leaders, I believe, have now been caught. When we remember the damning reports that had been given to the public, and the large crowd of volunteers that came, of course, excited in consequence of these reports, it is a marvelous providence that hundreds of those negroes were not hunted up and shot down. The whole thing has been well managed, and it is to be hoped it will result in peace between the races in this section for all time to come.

This disturbance will give to those so disposed capital to abuse the whites, doubtless. The whites, however, are not to blame. They have treated the negroes as heretofore only with more kindness and consideration. There is not a plantation in all these parts where the negroes do not have more money and live better than a large portion of the white people do in the hill country. Many of them have their own mules and buggies. They are provided with houses, and have them well furnished, and they eat the same provisions that the white people eat. The whites, moreover, have, in a great measure, provided for their educational and religious culture. Churches are built for them by the planters, and in these churches schools are annually taught. Mr. J. A. Townes, one of my members here at Minter City, is now having a church put up (he already has a half-dozen or more) for the negroes of one of his plantations. This church is to be a duplicate of our own Methodist Church at Minter City, and will be presented to the negroes by Mr. Townes for their exclusive use for church and school purposes.

The people of the South have done and are still doing a great deal for the mental and moral elevation of the negro race (they have never done more or even as much as they ought to); but it will be many generations yet before they will submit to social equality. Perhaps this will never be. This is a patent fact, known and read of all men. Hence, the negro problem is as great a problem as it has ever been. I believe they ought to be colonized. But they are now in our midst, and a large majority of them are illiterate and superstitious. What is our duty in the premises? There can be but one answer—namely, to educate and Christianize them. There is no more urgent call to-day from any mission field than from this one right at our door.

A Georgia Jeremiah.

BY "BARNABAS."

Those who look into the history of Methodism in the Southwest catch a glimpse, here and there, of a unique character who, on account of his sad spirit and unfortunate career, came to be known among his contemporaries as the "Weeping Prophet." Under this title he is alluded to in several publications relating to the time. The peculiarity of the title and the meagreness of the record concerning him, naturally excite our desire to know more of one who appears more properly in Conference Minutes as "Lewis Hobbs."

Nowhere else, probably, in the annals of American Methodism do we find a more unexpected call of the Spirit than that which resulted in the appointment of this frail, quiet and simple-hearted young man to service as a missionary in the Louisiana and Mississippi Territories. The other founders of our church in this country had many of the elements usually found in the successful pioneer in religion or civilization. Blackman was worthy in strength and courage, as well as in Christian character, to have been selected by the redoubtable Jackson as chaplain to his command in the campaign of 1812-13. Winans was already a hero, having faced Tecumseh, and stood by the side of the first Harrison in the historic interview between him and his distinguished Indian antagonist. Griffin, Shrock, and others possessed that rare combination of muscle and religion—or "grit and grace," as it is sometimes called—which we easily associate with the missionary to the frontier. Even the saintly Nolley satisfies by his stern asceticism our ideal of fitness for such a service. But we search in vain either in what has been written or told about Lewis Hobbs for any of the qualities of the conventional hero. All that is generally known of him is that he volunteered as a missionary to this remote region in 1811; that he contracted consumption in New Orleans, in 1813; returned to Georgia in June, 1814, and thence went to heaven in the following September. Beyond this, his only apparent claim to distinction is that he had an unusual capacity for shedding tears.

By a rare chance the writer has come upon a small package of letters, written in 1813 and 1814 by Lewis Hobbs, to his friend, William Winans, which, though generally of a personal nature, are interesting in view of the parties to the correspondence, and for the mention made therein of persons and places prominently connected with the history of the time. The selections here made embrace all in these letters that would be of general interest. The first of the series is headed, "New Orleans, March 23, 1813," and addressed to "William Winans, Natchez, Miss." This was not long after his appointment to the city which he describes as "a theatre of blood and wickedness, in which the devil has hoisted his black flag and marshalled his cohorts." "I feel," he says, "like a dry branch cut and thrown in this place, to be burned by the fire of persecution." * * * "The mayor and corporation forbade my preaching at seven o'clock, because the negroes would come. I told them I did not tell the negroes to come, and it was not my business to drive them away; that I should preach, and if they wanted them kept away, to come and do it themselves. After they found they could not do anything with me, they told me I might preach." * * * "I have sold my horse, and board is high. I have rented a room at $15 a month, to preach in. I am here with little money, few friends, and many enemies." * * * "Some are crying for mercy, and I hope some will be converted; and we shall at length be able to storm the devil's stronghold." * * * "I believe my heart would break if I could not pour my sorrows at the feet of my dear Jesus. O Jesus! sweet Jesus! He is my all and in all. I try to spend half my time in prayer, and the other half in reading and study. God fill your heart as full of love as mine is of sorrow."

A forlorn condition, truly! The prophet in Nineveh could not have been much more utterly desolate. With characteristic terseness Bishop McTyeire says of this later Jonah, "He walked the streets of the city and wept." There is small room for contempt in our pity when we think of New Orleans at that period, as it appears in the most friendly description of its morals, and of the saintly young missionary, friendless, poor, and alone, in the midst of this desperate wickedness.

LEWIS HOBBS TO WILLIAM WINANS.

NEW ORLEANS, May 31, 1813.

This letter opens with a playful reference to former correspondence in which W. W. has drawn a gloomy picture of the troubles of married life, and of the danger which threatens both of them in this regard. In spite of his tears, L. H. seems to have had the heart to enjoy a pleasantry now and then, for he adds: "Notwithstanding the terrific delineation you have given of the woful state, you indicate that the goodness of your heart might cause you to accompany your dear Lewis even into it." But the undertone of his life was always serious. "And now, my dear brother," he continues, "I bless God I am a little like Moses' bush—in the fire, but not consumed; for the fire of persecution can no more harm the soul than the king's fire could hurt the three Hebrew children. I pray to have a rod like Moses', which can swallow up all the rods of the magicians of New Orleans. Alas! my faith is so weak! But I creep along like a snail, and hope God will give me a few souls for my hire. The stream of vice rushes on with the impetuosity of the Mississippi, and bears away every good impression; yet I bless God we have made a small stand in this torrent of wickedness, and have a society of twenty members. I hope most of them are engaged in the salvation of their souls. I think the society will increase. I keep a tight rein of discipline, and make them toe the mark. I know not how long I shall stay in this place. It is owing to the work, and how my way will open before me. I don't wish to desert my post, and let the wolves kill the lambs, for I think God has converted some souls, and one soul is worth a great deal. I got a letter from Georgia today, filled with consolation. I have received letters also from Bro. Ford and Bro. Griffin. Bro. Harper was with Bro. Ford, and the work of God was going on well." * * * "Well, my paper is full, my head is empty, and my pen worn out, and I don't know as the name of Jesus is in my letter; but I hope his love is in your heart, and that it is sometimes in mine. Glory to his name! Let me have a place about your feet, while I love you much in Jesus. LEWIS HOBBS."

(To be continued.)

Texas Notes.

BY REV. H. W. WILLIAMS.

It is with pain and grief that I note the death of one of our most gifted and popular young preachers. Rev. R. M. Shelton, pastor of our church at Belton, died on August 22, after an illness of about three weeks. He was in the twenty-ninth year of his age, and had been preaching some nine or ten years. He was educated at Alexander Institute, and afterward graduated in the biblical and literary departments of Vanderbilt University. He had filled the stations at Graham, Jacksboro, Springtown and Marshal with credit to himself, with satisfaction to the people, and with honor to the cause of Christ. At one time he filled the chair of English literature in the Southwestern University at Georgetown. Could he have lived, I have no doubt that his name would have been made illustrious by his transcendent ability and greatness of soul. I have known Bro. Shelton for several years, and I do not think I ever knew a purer, nobler, more conscientious, more faithful, or more thoroughly consecrated young man in my life. He retained the full, unclouded exercise of his vigorous mind to the last, and, I am told, that in death the placid features expressed what the living soul had been by a heavenly smile of hope and confidence. He several times expressed his readiness to depart, and his last end was a complete triumph. Peace be to his ashes and love to his memory! Bro. Shelton had been married a little over one year. He leaves a grief-stricken wife whose sorrow is too deep to be assuaged by words of condolence. May God temper her affliction, and give her strength and fortitude to endure it!

I have been reading with much pleasure and profit a new temperance book, entitled "Broken Fetters: The Light of Ages on Intoxication," by Charles Morris. I wish to commend it to all who are interested in the study of the temperance question. It comprises a historical view of the ravages of intemperance among the nations of antiquity and the people of the middle ages, and a graphic description of the effects of drunkenness in modern Europe. Special attention is given to the temperance reform in the United States. The early temperance societies, the total abstinence movement, the various associations, the development of temperance literature, the subjects of license and prohibition, are all carefully and ably treated. The book is to be sold by subscription. For terms address W. H. G. Kirkpatrick & Co., Philadelphia.

Our Baptist brethren in Texas have had some trouble in their ranks of late. First there was a disgraceful affair at Dallas, growing out of some charges of immorality against Rev. R. T. Hanks, pastor of the First Baptist Church of that city. He was whitewashed, however, and allowed to continue his pulpit ministrations. More recently the Waco Baptist Church has tried Rev. M. T. Martin, and deposed him from the ministry. This was not on any charge of immorality, but for heresy. He was pronounced unsound on the doctrines of faith, repentance, regeneration, sanctification, prayer, rebaptism, etc. He has since joined the Woodstock (Ga.) Church.

Some time since the colored people of Texas held a convention at Waco, and issued an address to the people, in which they recited their alleged wrongs and grievances, and demanded their "rights." One would think it time to give us a rest on that subject for awhile. The unwarranted and inflammatory statements so often made in regard to the bad treatment of the negroes by the whites of the South are in many instances grossly and shamefully false. The blacks down here, as a general thing, are better off than those in the North. They have more political rights, exercise them more freely, and are making greater progress. In Texas they have had as favorable opportunities, perhaps, as in any State of the South. They say in their address:

We now own about 1,000,000 acres of land and we pay taxes on $20,000,000 worth of property. We have 2,000 churches, 2,000 Sunday-schools, 2,000 benevolent associations and 10 high schools, 2,500 common schools, 3,000 teachers, 125,000 pupils attending school, 23 doctors, 25 lawyers, 100 merchants, 5,000 mechanics, 15 newspapers, hundreds of farmers and several inventors.

"Faith vs. Authority."

BY JOS. B. COTTRELL, D. D.

That article by F. M. Grace, in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, of August 29, is so like utterances from the lips of my old-time associate, when I was made to realize that our engagement with "the world of mind" was a vital one, and one of delightful surprises, that I've read and re-read it; and it goes into a scrap-book of choice selections, to be read again and again, and to become the property of one of my children when I've passed out from scrap-books and whole books! Paul declared that "when he was weak, then was he strong." This is the experience of each one who, by the zeal of God's house, is eaten up. I heard Dr. Lovick Pierce preach from the text, "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up." His enumeration of the text was a revelation to me. It smote my mind and vibrated the cords of my moral or spiritual being, so that I felt the preacher to be en rapport with that kingdom which is rather in power than in word. How memory rints along the track made luminous by utterances of faith!—by scintillations and lightning-like gleams of truth, as men realized it!

I've just had a walk, to and fro, out on the verandah, in the third story of my boarding-house, to the eastward, in the glorious sunshine of this Monday morning. P. P. Neely's sermon, as he preached it from the text, "Hallelujah! for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth!" and Jefferson Hamilton's masterly arraignments of congregations and Conferences; Walter C. Harris' softly insinuating and insemina ting outflow of what he had verified through experience of his own soul, and other ministries of men who have been factors in production of my own ministerial manhood!—these gathered in upon me in an exceptionally fresh and powerful manner, protracting my walk, causing me assurance of the possessions of faith! "Faith cometh by hearing!" That was a seminal text with me at the opening of my ministry. I knew Dr. Thomas Cottrell was my father! How did I know it? They told me so. "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel!" Don't prove it!—preach it! Don't explain it!—preach it! And it is not the what, but it is the "Whom we preach!" And it is only as one lives Christ that he can preach him! To preach about him is quite other than to preach him!

But I merely took my pen to express gratification for what I've enjoyed in reading Bro. Grace's article. What he says is true. Yet there is nothing so true but that there is else just as true, seemingly the opposite of it. As two semi-circles, counter to each other, make the circle complete, even so is it in the range of metaphysical or spiritual truth. Paradox pervades the kingdom. "The action of the intellect is divisional—that of the heart tends to unity and harmony!" Well said! And yet that divisional effect of the operation of the intellect is just as essential as is the unifying effect of the operation of the heart. Wherein? Why, in affording variety, wherein is unity, as distinguished from mere oneness!—mere sameness! Infelicities inevitably arise from the imperfections of language, as essay is made to formulate, verbally, gospel doctrine. Calvinism is, chiefly, in assertion of the sovereignty of God. By implication—at least, to some minds—it denies agency in man and other moral subjects. Arminianism, in articulating such agency (and agency involves perfect freedom), seems, to many minds, to imply a denial of divine sovereignty. Thus have we this divisional result of the operation of intellect, of which Grace speaks. A theodicy would never be reached by operation of mere intellect; but it is so ordered, in the economy of the kingdom of heaven, that mere intellect is never singly operative. It is so correlate, or co-ordinate, with the moral sense as to be qualified thereby. Hence arises the possibility of our keeping "the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace," notwithstanding the variety of notional apprehensions. "Imputation of righteousness," properly considered, carries a powerfully effective influence; but, as boldly stated in Calvinism, no more palpable an absurdity is conceivable. To confound mystery with absurdity has been the infelicity of dogmatic theology.

Daily Bible Reading.

It probably is true of a great many regular readers of the Bible, that they lapse into a formal way of going over the chapters, one by one, and fail to drink in the spirit and deep meaning of the inspired words. Regular reading of the Scriptures is to be encouraged, of course. Every day ought to include an allotted time for communion with God, through the reading of his blessed book and through private prayer. But regularity may be mechanical, or it may be full of life and enthusiasm. When one reads simply to cover so many verses each day, as if he were discharging an obligation, his regularity becomes mechanical and, we are inclined to think, unprofitable. It is when one goes to the Bible daily to find something that he wants—goes as a searcher after the good things of God—and considers the meaning of what he reads with a lively and yet reverent interest, that he reads with profit and with sincere pleasure. A man, who has found the Bible to be the most interesting and helpful book in his house, states that he developed interest in it by reading one verse a day, at first—but he studied that verse in all its bearings and sought to discover its peculiar meaning for him. In this, as in other spiritual concerns, those who seek shall find. Another Bible lover keeps a small note book in his pocket, and in that book he jots down diverse topics of thought that occur to him as he goes about his work, or which are suggested by sermons or prayer-meeting talks. Thus he always has a small stock of subjects on hand. Daily he goes to his Bible and, selecting a subject from his list which needs some illumination, he hunts for scriptural light thereon. He rarely uses commentaries or "helps," except as a concordance may be called a help. The concordance helps him to get at the light, but the light is in and shines from the word of the Bible every time. Other men and women delight to memorize a portion of Scripture every day, so as to have it before the mind's eye when the book is laid away. But any plan is a good one, which will make Bible reading a part of one's daily joys; and any method of reading is unsatisfactory, which produces only the result of a certain number of verses, or chapters, perused within a given time.—Interior.

A HINT FOR PREACHERS.—The widow of a clergyman writes to the Albany Journal: "When I, with my husband, was living in a city not far from here, I noticed that a member of our church, a poor woman, was not regular in her attendance, and finally did not attend at all. I called upon her, and she said to me with the utmost frankness that her husband was inclined to be hard with her, that he did not go to church, and that if she was not home on Sunday in time to have his dinner for him very nearly at twelve o'clock he was abusive. She said that my husband preached such long sermons that she could seldom get home until after twelve o'clock, and that rather than have unpleasantness at home she had refrained from going to church any more. She said that she would not have spoken of the matter but for the fact that three other women of her acquaintance were also kept from attendance by similar circumstances. She gave me the names of the other women, and I called upon them and found her story to be exactly true. I laid the facts before my husband, and he determined to make a change in the programme. Instead of reading all the hymns, he merely read the first verse of each, and he began the service at precisely 10:30, whether the congregation were on hand or not. He shortened his prayer to eight minutes instead of fifteen. His sermons were commenced by eleven, never later than ten minutes after, and always concluded by 11:45. Within three months after he had made this change there was a revival in the church, and one of the first persons brought in was the husband of the woman whom I first met."—The Christian Union.

DIVINE ALCHEMY.

BY HANNAH CODDINGTON.

One morning, ardent fancy traced
A fairy picture. Interlaced
Were glade and forest, sylvan lair,
With castle, moat, drawbridge in air.
While pure and quick throbbed life-blood strong,
Eager to storm the gates of wrong.
Alas! my dream so tender, bright,
Faded beneath the rays of light.
No art availed; none could restore
The radiant vision once 'twas o'er
And though I grieved till set of sun,
It was undone, it was undone.

One day, sore wounded, stunned, and faint,
Too deeply hurt to make complaint,
I mourned a lifeless love and hope;
Nor cared to reach my hands and grope
For guerdon of some bliss to be.
The shades of death encompassed me
And all the sweetnesses of earth.
For those were dead who gave them birth.
And ill men labored, or they slept,
I sat beside the grave and wept.
But though I grieved past set of sun,
All was undone, all was undone.

I turned at last from vain regret—
Albeit my lashes still were wet—
And toiled, amid life's burning sands,
To heal sick hearts, fill empty hands;
And patiently the ground I tilled,
That other's hopes might be fulfilled—
When, lo! as sunlight on the sea,
Kindled an answering sympathy.
So eloquent each shining face,
Love, hope and courage grew apace,
Until resplendent in the sun
Glowed all that once I thought undone.

Twenty-Three Beautiful Years.

Twenty-three years ago rheumatism, in its most agonizing form, took possession of our dear friend, Mrs. Addie Latimer, of Canton, Miss., then a young woman of sweet, sunny disposition, full of enthusiasm, strength and energy, and altogether charming. Always busy, always helpful, ready to nurse the sick and help the needy; just the person to whom you would turn in sorrow, equally ready to rejoice in your joy. So useful and unselfish, it seemed strange that God should call her from active to prison life. But the patience and sweetness of those suffering years were a benediction, and made holiness more attractive and the power of religion more real than any life I ever knew.

At first it was hoped that after awhile she would walk; but, alas! the passing days only made the drawn limbs more rigid, and the rolling-chair became her only hope of ever joining the family circle at the table or around the fireside. Sometimes she would be rolled to the piano, and play with the two or three fingers of which she retained the use. Music was a passion with her, and she had a wonderfully sweet voice. She amused herself with fancy-work and writing, till increasing pain caused the hands to "lose their cunning," and the needle and pen to drop from the bent and useless fingers. After awhile the chair had to be given up for a few days at a time, then altogether; and for years she lay on her bed as helpless as an infant, unable to turn herself or lift a spoon to her lips, her limbs drawn up, arms pinned to her side, hands almost touching her chin, the bent fingers almost buried in the palm; yet, in looking at her, you lost sight of all this, so attractive was the beautiful face, whose expression told more plainly than words that her soul "dwelt in the secret place of the Most High." But words were not wanting. She seemed almost inspired when talking of heavenly things, and she cared for no other conversation. How often have I heard her, when talking of all God's mercies to her, stop, and cry out with extreme pain, that would cause her limbs to twitch and veins to stand out; and we would look on appalled at such agony and our utter inability to give any relief; but as soon as the paroxysm passed, she would go on talking of her blessings, and never allude to how much she had suffered. Often, when her friends expressed sorrow at her condition, she would look up with her sweet smile, and say: "I am happy in suffering as well as doing his will. I would not choose for myself. Jesus is always with me; and what more can I ask?" Not one word of impatience ever fell from her lips through all these weary, suffering years. Often she would ask her pastor and loved ones: "Do you think it wrong for me to pray for death? I do so long for release. I fear I may feel impatient; but if God still has work for me to do, I would live on, and not loose one pang."

Except during her severe periods of pain, her countenance had not a trace of suffering, but was always bright and smiling. It was beautiful to see that peaceful face light up with pleasure when you entered her room; her very welcome always made you feel glad you had come, and, before you were aware of it, her sympathetic nature would divine what you needed. If it were comfort, how sweetly she gave it! But one thing you never failed to receive from that pure spirit—strength for your spiritual life. She was especially charitable in her judgment. She would take no part in a frivolous conversation, but would lie with closed lips, unless some person was spoken of harshly. Then her sweet words would make you ashamed of any lack of Christian love. It seemed to be that the slanderer could never tell his tale before that face so beaming with good-will to all. Whenever she heard of a church member going astray, or of a person who was exerting a bad influence in the community, it would grieve her sorely, and she would say: "Let us take him to God. He can change his heart and remove his influence. Now, let us say nothing about him; only pray."

She was very fond of jotting down the impressions made by her readings, especially of the Bible; and she left one full of notes—the result of many hours of patient daily study—that is a treasure. Her diary, kept through many years, would be a valuable addition to religious biography.

She was always greatly interested in missions, especially the Woman's Missionary Society, and every year she kept a mite-box consecrated by prayer to God; and when the boxes were opened, hers had always gathered more than any other. One of her last acts was to remember the time of opening the boxes and send hers, but before the meeting was held she was at rest.

Last September her general health failed completely. The change was so gradual as to be almost imperceptible, till in the spring we realized the end was near. From this time her life was constant agony, yet through it all she glorified God. It was good to be there and hear her rapturous words in anticipation of the longed-for rest so soon to be hers. She said often, "My body is in torture, but my soul is in perfect peace." She only ceased her praises with her strength, and the last day only a few faint whispers could be caught by her loved ones, but quietly she fell asleep at the close of a beautiful June day. Her oft-expressed wish, that she might be buried at twilight of a peaceful Sabbath day, was granted; and she was followed to her resting-place by an immense concourse of people, for she was the beloved of the town.

Bereft of her husband in her youth, then her property swept away, then her health—a helpless invalid, dependent for everything; first in the heart of none, yet loved by all—she had one great comfort left—the love of many friends and perfect devotion of her family. Nothing was too much trouble that must be done for Aunt Addie, nor did money ever seem to be a consideration. She fully appreciated this devotion, and returned it with all the fervor of her loving heart. So, counting all her blessings, without one murmur at her trials, "rejoicing in hope, patient in tribulation," "instant in prayer," she lived twenty-three beautiful years.

A Halt Called.

MR. EDITOR: Will you give an old person a space in your columns, in which she may show her opinions and express her doubts?

It is now nearly a month since the Camp Meeting at Sam Jones Camp Ground came to a close. I have had time to ponder and cool down in that time. My opinion is, that it is decidedly wrong to give up nearly all the preaching time to any one man, even if he be as profound as Bledsoe, or eloquent as Munsey. If we believe that the work is God's work, we have no business to set up any one man as the power. My opinion is, that a diversity of gifts is needed; that the church should pray and work. Now, I am not a preacher who is sore because I did not get an opportunity to exercise my gifts, and I had no dear preacher of my own who was neglected. I am an old Methodist who loves the church, and who has heard preaching in her day from such men as Soule, Drake, Bascom, Kavanaugh, Matlit, Munsey, and a host of men, whose mantles missed many of the men who do what they call preaching these days.

I believe in plain preaching, but I do not believe in slang or vulgarity in the pulpit. Jo. Jones used language in the pulpit before innocent young girls and little children that I would be ashamed to repeat to decent married women. But if anyone says a word, the cry is made, "People can not stand the truth." I ask what good could come of a minister's saying, "There is not an old maid in this congregation who is fit for a good man's wife; she has been squeezed and slobbered over so much." Where was the spirit of Christ when the minister said, "If any man would take such liberties with my daughter, I would kill him as I would a rattlesnake." Is that the way to teach the people who are all too ready to take the law into their own hands? And yet good men endorse such preachers!

In Nashville, in McKendree Church, I heard a preacher say, "This is my opinion: and if anyone does not like it, he may lump it." I am old, and Jo. Jones says, "The old people ought to die off." He loves them, "but they are not up to the times." I am not up to the times; but I do not think everything ought to go on just as it did when I was young. Modes of action must be governed by the changes in circumstances and the progress of events; but oh! let us have what is pure, lovely and of good report in our pulpits!

I want you to publish this, on my own responsibility; so I sign my full name. MARY WINANS WALL.

CLINTON, La., Sept. 9, 1889.

The Question Settled.

I hereby announce to all who may desire to be relieved of all doubts on the long-debated subject of baptism, that I have a pamphlet now in the press, and, perhaps, will be ready for sale by the time this is published, that, as far as biblical testimony goes (and none other can be admissible as authoritative testimony), the question is settled at last.

1. I show that baptism for the remission of sin began with Moses, as an "ordinance of the law," in the church of God, imposed on the people until the time of reformation, or the coming of Christ, as a shadow. It was a trine baptism with unclean water.

2. That the ordinance of the gospel, as the introduction of Christ and of Christianity, proposed actually the remission of sins.

3. That as "the prophets wrote the beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God," the ordinance of the gospel is to be found there, in common with every other circumstance of his introduction, and was announced to be "with clean water."

As immersionists have assumed that John introducted baptism as by inspiration, without reference to previous revelation, I challenge them to disprove the position taken in the pamphlet, and the facts therein set forth.

To avoid "private interpretation" of either Testament, proof must be adduced from the two Testaments in harmony; otherwise the theory of immersion falls, as a victim of truth, to perish forever.

The pamphlet can be had at the Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Nashville, Tenn., at ten cents a copy, and postage. J. W. ELLISON.

From the Work.

SUGARTOWN, LA.

MR. EDITOR: During the month of August my health was not good; but have been able to meet all my regular appointments. Besides, I have held two meetings of several days each—one at Pilgrim's Rest, embracing the first Sunday in August; the other at Dry Creek, embracing the fourth Sunday in August. I was taken sick on Wednesday night before the meeting at Pilgrim's Rest was to begin on Thursday, and was not able to go out until Saturday night; but some of the good brethren were very much determined that the meeting should go on; so they met regularly at the appointed hour and held prayer, when a good Baptist brother came out on Saturday at eleven o'clock, and preached to a goodly number who had assembled to hear the Word. Bro. William Monroe, a local preacher from Spring Creek, arrived on Saturday evening just in time to preach for us, thereby relieving me of the task that I was so poorly able to perform. The meeting closed Monday night, resulting in three accessions to the church, the baptism of three children, and the church greatly revived. Thanks to Bro. Monroe for his efficient work. Owing to sickness in the community, and other causes, the meeting at Dry Creek was not as satisfactory as desired. However, there was one accession, a goodly number of the membership greatly revived, and pretty good feeling on the outside. We are not discouraged. We will try it over, commencing Saturday night before the fourth Sunday in this month. On last Sunday evening I preached at a wayside appointment; received five into the church. My health is greatly improved, for which I am very thankful. My heart is so bent on building up the Lord's cause in this part that I have preached several times when I ought to have been in bed. Brethren, pray for the work on Sugartown. H. M. BANKS.

CLARKE CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I closed on last Sunday night, September 1, a series of meetings of sixteen days; the first eight days at Liberty Church, eight miles northeast of Shuhuta. This meeting resulted in great good to the community. Twenty-five professed conversion, and quite a number of backsliders reclaimed, and the church powerfully blessed; fifteen accessions. The other eight days we held at Winnefred, four miles distant from Liberty. Here the Lord was with us in great power. Fifteen conversions, twenty reclaimed, four accessions, and a good revival in the church. I was assisted in the meetings by Bro. Alexander Trotter, and a goodly number of godly men and women of the church. Our camp meeting began September 6. We are expecting great results.

N. M. CLARK.

FUNNY LOUIS, LA.

MR. EDITOR: I rejoice to announce the result of a twelve days' meeting at Muster's Chapel. We had as ministerial helpers Rev. Amos Humphries (local), and the well-known veteran, Rev. E. W. Young, who did most of the preaching and all the baptizing. In anticipation of the meeting, the brethren built a large arbor near the church, and furnished seats, and made other necessary preparations, as if they expected great results; and they were not disappointed. The interest begun with the meeting, and continued until twenty or thirty persons were kneeling near the altar for prayer, most of whom seemed deeply convicted. This conviction grew deeper and seemingly unbearable with many; until pardon was abundantly obtained. More than once we have seen young ladies kneel as penitents, and, after a struggle, rise, proclaiming victory. Sons and daughters have come to the altar for prayer, and soon after a penitent, sinful father would be constrained to follow; and before the meeting closed, perhaps, parents and children would be abundantly saved. We had those old-time, but almost-forgotten, grove meetings. Brethren would accompany the young men, converts and penitents, and sisters likewise the young ladies. After that exercise all would march back to the arbor, singing that good old chorus, "Only trust him," or something similar.

But what about the results of the meeting? The dear Lord converted about thirty persons. There were thirty-five accessions and eighteen children baptized.

On the last day of the meeting, being the first Sunday in September, in the same place, under the same arbor, at my request, Bro. Yancy administered the sacrament to sixty-five persons, most of whom were converts at that meeting. The assistance rendered me by Bro. Yancy in his feebleness is beyond my power to describe, having baptized seventy children this year, together with helping me receive ninety persons into the church. I have more than half my collections up to date. Fourteen appointments, three of which were Bro. Dunstan's, will keep me at work. Pray for us.

J. J. KELLY.

WALTHALL CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: Our third Quarterly Conference for this charge was held at Long Branch, August 31 and September 1, presided over by our beloved presiding elder, Rev. W. T. J. Sullivan, D. D., who sowed the seeds for a gracious revival. The meeting was protracted to the eighth, resulting in thirty additions to the church—mostly new converts—and, I suppose, fifteen converts, who will join other churches. At the close a regular weekly prayer meeting was established; quite a number of family altars erected. The people rejoiced greatly, old feuds were settled, and love abounds. Rev. T. W. Castle, local elder, who was for many years a member of the Mississippi Conference, was present, and aided greatly through the entire meeting, displaying the same love and zeal that animated his heart while young and in the prime of manhood. Bless the Lord, O my soul!

J. W. PITTMAN.

SEPTEMBER, 10, 1889.

SPARTA, LA.

MR. EDITOR: The Ladies' Aid Society have organized, and raised over seventy dollars, and have purchased furniture and some other things for the parsonage.

On the night of July 14 our protracted services commenced. Rev. H. O. White, of Minden, reached us on Tuesday, July 16, and remained until Friday, eleven A. M. In this meeting quite an interest was manifested by the young people and those that were not members of the church at Sparta; but the membership took but very little interest.

On July 27 services began at Ebenezer Church, and continued until Thursday night, August 1. Here we had two accessions to the church, and, we believe, several conversions. The church was much revived. Bro. J. J. Spralls, a Baptist minister, assisted me the two last days of the meeting.

At Cnstor Church services began on the following Saturday, August 3, which were continued till Wednesday night, when I was compelled to close on account of being prostrated in the bed by an attack of bilious fever. There were four received into the church. My spell of sickness lasted until Sunday night, though services commenced on Saturday, August 10, at "Bear Creek" Church, Bro. McCoy, a local preacher, officiating on Saturday; Bro. Spralls, my Baptist friend, on Sunday, and Bro. Shepherd, a local preacher residing on the circuit, preaching Sunday night and Monday night. I was able to get there on Monday and preach at eleven A. M. The services moved right on and closed the following Monday night, August 19, with the following results: Ten joined the church, and thirteen or more conversions. A young men's prayer meeting was organized, and a ladies' prayer meeting; also the general prayer meeting more fully established.

Resting from Tuesday until Saturday, August 24, I commenced a protracted meeting with the Holder Church. Closed this meeting on Thursday after, preaching night and day, with the following results: Thirteen or more conversions, and nine accessions to the church.

So, Mr. Editor, we have been at work, and the blessed Lord has blessed our labors. To his name be all the glory. We have another important meeting to hold, which is our camp meeting, commencing on the thirteenth of this month. R. A. DAVIS.

SEPTEMBER 3, 1889.

MOORINGSPORT, LA.

MR. EDITOR: I have just closed my protracted meeting at Munerlyns Chapel—the place where I had such a glorious meeting last year. Since that meeting the brethren have been regular with their prayer meetings twice a week; and in these prayer meetings souls have been converted, and some led into the experience of perfect love. I have had conversions and accessions at that church all along through the year; have received into that church fifty-three members during the past twelve months.

I had in my meeting just closed the help of Rev. L. L. Pickett—a man mighty in the Scriptures and full of the Holy Spirit. The Lord honored his preaching in the salvation of many souls. May the blessings of God ever rest upon him! From the first to the closing service souls were saved. The doctrine of entire sanctification was taught in the power of the Holy Spirit, and some entered the precious experience by faith, after consecrating self and all to God. We do not know how many were converted or sanctified. We had eleven accessions, and others will join other churches. Nearly all of the leading members of this church are in the experience of entire sanctification, and the balance are seeking it. Bro. Pickett preached on the subject of missions at the close of the meeting, and God baptized the preacher and people in a most remarkable way; and he closed amid shouts of praise, and a time of great rejoicing followed. As soon as he could be heard, he presented the claims of the church, and called for free-offerings; and we soon had, in cash and subscription, $102 50; all said to be good.

This church proposes to guarantee the support of the preacher, if the Conference will send one to the Northwest Caddo circuit next year. The Savior said: "By their fruits ye shall know them." Praise the Lord for the Holy Spirit that beareth witness to mine that I have a clean heart!

J. S. SANDERS.

MONTGOMERY CIRCUIT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I returned from the Scottsville Camp Meeting, Monday, August 19, greatly strengthened for the Master's work. Bro. R. M. Horn (exhorter) had commenced a meeting at Dunn's School-house, which lasted more than a week and resulted in some happy conversions and an addition of fifteen members. Bro. R. M. Walker assisted us in a meeting at St. Maurice, which included two Sabbaths. Here we had some conversions and five added to the church. Bro Horn and I then went to Winnfield, where we held services, day and night, for a week, with glorious results. Ten were admitted to the church at this place, and quite a number converted. Bro. Walker is now assisting us in a meeting at "Glory Hill." Four have joined the church, and we are expecting a glorious harvest. At all of these meetings the church is greatly moved, and many of our members are seeking the experience of entire sanctification. One sister claims to have obtained the blessing. We will soon send up the remainder of our assessment for foreign missions. My own soul has been graciously blessed.

J. F. WYNN.

RINGGOLD, LA.

MR. EDITOR: We are now in the midst of a most wonderful meeting at Rocky Mount. The Lord is blessing us abundantly; sinners are trembling mightily under conviction and seeking pardon for sins. The church is greatly revived and at work for the Lord. Strong men trembled to-day, and came forward and promised to lead a different life.

We are closing the protracted meeting season here, and it has been a most wonderful year, indeed. Three years in succession God has blessed this circuit and its poor little preacher with a glorious revival in every church. Near two hundred persons have in these three years professed conversion, and many of them show it by their works. The number added to the church this year is not so great as the two former, but I believe the conversions have been brighter, and the work of grace in the church seems to be deeper; and I believe that this will be our most successful year, financially. God bless you in your work of love!

Yours in Christ,

HARRY W. MAY.

BOOKS.

SANT' ILARIO. By F. Marion Crawford. Macmillan & Co., New York. Geo. F. Wharton, 5 Caromdelet St. Price, $1 50.

Readers of "Mr. Isaacs" and "Dr. Claudius" will gladly welcome this new novel from the pen of Marion Crawford. It is the second part of the history of the Saracenesca, a truly noble family of Rome. The movements of Garibaldi and the Revolution of 1867 form an historic background for this delightful story. The love story of Gonache, the young Zouave, and the Princess Monterarchi runs through the whole book, but the main interest is centered in Giovanni and Corona. The author promises to renew this history if there are any left still interested in Giovanni and Corona; and who will not be touched by their beautiful lives, and want to know more of them?

LORA, THE MAJOR'S DAUGHTER. By W. Heimburg. Translated by Mrs. J. W. Davis. Illustrated with photogravures. Cloth, $1 25; paper, 75 cents. Worthington & Co., New York. For sale by Eyrich, New Orleans.

This author has written several stories of German life, and this is said to be the best of them all.

PERIODICALS.

—THE HOME MAKER, for September, comes laden with the best of matter in regard to the home and its surroundings. The contributors to this number stand at the head of the list, and they are headed by Marion Harland, editor, and Christine Terhune Herrick and Grace Peckham, M. D., associate editors. Home Maker Company, New York. Price, 20 cents; $2 a year.

—THE MUSICAL HERALD, Franklin Square, Boston. The September number has Musical Instruments and Their Epochs, Morality and Music, The Relation of Art to Life, and other valuable and interesting papers. Price, 10 cents a number.

—THE DRUNKARD'S VISION, is a song of great dramatic power. Words by A. W. Livingston; music by T. Martin Towne. Price, 50 cents per copy. Towne & Stillman, 1218 Wrightwood Ave., Chicago.

—BOOK NEWS, for September, contains much of interest in the notices and descriptions of new books. Winnamaker, Philadelphia. Price, 50 cents a year.

—NEW PUBLICATIONS is a monthly published by Dodd, Mead & Company, of New York. It gives notices of books and reviews, and criticisms. Price, 5 cents a number; 25 cents a year.

—VICK'S ILLUSTRATED MONTHLY, for September, is just the thing for all lovers of plants and flowers. This number opens the fall operations in that line. James Vick, Rochester, N. Y. Price, $1 25.

A Class Meeting in Mexico.

MR. EDITOR: We welcomed, last week, a copy of our dear old friend, the ADVOCATE. Its familiar face brought us greetings from the dear home-land. Supposing any tidings from this land of shadows and superstition will be read with interest by the Christians at home, I want to tell you that our man of all work is not idle, while we are hard at our studies. Bro. Watkins organized a class meeting three weeks ago. It was my privilege to attend the last, which was the third one held. Ah! how interesting it was! There strayed in a poor, desperate man, who had been ordered out of the Romish Church because of his ragged and uncleanly appearance. Taking this as an evidence that he was forsaken by God and man, he attempted to take his own life. Seven times he had made the attempt, the last that very day. Friendless and penniless, he found his way into our little chapel and heard the Christians talk and Bro. Watkins explain some Bible truths and pray. The man was moved to tears, arose and told his sad story, and said it might be that God had spared him for something. We contributed of our mites, that he might have a place to sleep that night and something to eat. Mr. Weems was so moved by the sorrows and desperate condition of the poor man, who, being a cripple, added to this sympathy, tears came in his eyes. The poor outcast perceived this, and cried out, "Let us all pray for the man who mingled his tears with ours." It was the only way he could express his gratitude. This last class meeting resulted in saving "one brand from the burning."

Yesterday our Bible woman spent the day with me. On returning home she sent me the following note, which I have translated, that the people at home may know how grateful are those saved from the idolatry of the Romish Church:

To My Dear Sister, the Senora Weems, who has spoken and manifested the desire, with love for us, to speak the Spanish:

I believe God will make you to be very useful to our church in the first place, and to me in particular, by giving your Christian counsel, and for the great interest that you and your husband have shown for the good of the Mexicans, in sharing with them the eternal treasures that never perish. I believe you and he, and the Senor Watkins and his wife, are of the same heart, willing to encounter dangers with spirit and courage for the good of my country. Although all of my church petitioned God with much patience, and with the light of the Holy Spirit, for you, we persevered until he gave us your life for his work. To-day I had great consolation, for I saw you spoke more words in my language, and when you comprehended me, your manner was as sympathetic as that of our dear Bro. and Sister Watkins, our instructors in the love of Christ. You gave me much joy, and you both seemed happy with us, and I pray God's richest blessings on all my brethren of the United States of America for having had pity for us, and spent their money on things so precious as the winning of immortal souls for Christ. For my part, there is nothing that expresses my gratitude for this great goodness to us; and when I think of it, tears of gratitude flow. I always remember the day Senora Watkins talked to me, and from that moment I have trod the earth of my country, telling these words, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want;" and that the Lord has said, "Go preach the gospel to every creature," etc. I remember the precious words of the Psalm, which our dear sister was inspired to tell me. The Senor Watkins has sung praises to our Lord, that he has not faltered in his promises for you. And they have done all they could to help you in your great suffering, and to save the multitude from idolatry, and have been, in truth, blessings from God.

PILAR ZUBIALLAGA.

Last night we attended our prayer meeting. I suppose there were, at least, eighty present, and more new ones than I have seen at one time. Bro. Watkins and the Bible woman rush to speak to the strangers before they can get out of the church. I looked round for him as I started home, and saw him bending over a young man who was weeping. He told Mr. Weems he would stay in the church to talk to him, while his family came on with us. I inquired, this morning, the results, and he told me. This man, who at home would be called a "rowdy," came with the crowd, I saw, for mischief, to create a disturbance. Bro. Watkins was enabled to send an arrow that struck his heart. He manifested a desire to be received into the church, which Bro. Watkins promised to do after he had remedied the evils he had done as far as was in his power. He said he would go to-day to look for his forsaken wife, and rectify the wrong done as far as possible; then present himself at God's altar for membership. While there is much that is discouraging in this field, our little church in the city is growing in membership and spirituality. So much for having a spiritual leader who loves the souls of these poor people more than his own comfort. As my letter is growing too long, I will wish the readers of the dear old ADVOCATE every needed blessing, and stop for this time.

Sunday-School Lesson.

(Hurlburt and Simpson's Lesson Commentary, Phillips & Hunt, New York.)

LESSON XIII.—September 29.

TEMPERANCE LESSON—NABAL.

I. Sam. xxv, 23 31; 36-38.

TIME.—B. C. 1060.

PLACE.—Carmel. Not the Carmel on the seacoast, celebrated in the history of Elijah, but in the hill country of Judah, about a mile northwest of Maon.

23. Fell ... on her face, ... bowed herself—Respectful salutation. A still stronger expression than that used by David to Saul (xxiv, 8). (See II. Sam. 1, 2; Gen xvii, 3; Luke xvii, 16.)

24. Thine audience—Hebrew, ears.

25. Man of Belial—Man of naught. A weak creature. Nabal is his name, and folly is with him—Abigail apologizes for her husband, and represents him as offending out of stolidity and silliness, rather than of malice prepense. ... Job applies the word Nabal to his wife (Job ii, 10) as Abigail does to her husband.

27. This blessing ... unto the young men—She does not presume to offer it for the use of David himself.

28. The trespass—The trespass of coming unbidden into thy way and opposing thy purpose.

29. A man is risen—Saul. All David's persecution and his royal destiny seem to have been fully known to Abigail. Bundle of life—The metaphor is taken from the custom of binding up valuable things in a bundle to prevent their being injured. Sling out—Hurled away and scattered where they may not be found. Vivid contrast to being gathered and bound together in "the bundle of life."

31. This shall be no grief unto thee—So will this (that is, the forgiveness of Nabal's folly) not be a stumbling-block (pukoh, any thing in the road which causes a person to stagger), and anguish of heart (that is, conscientious scruples) to thee, and shedding innocent blood, and that my lord helps himself.

37. As a stone—Probably his violent anger at hearing it brought on a fit of apoplexy to which he was disposed by the drunken revel of the night before. After lying senseless for ten days, he died.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

The character of Nabal as given by Abigail, who probably knew him best, is precisely that which belongs to intemperate men generally—physically, mentally, and morally weak.

The same fruit belongs to Nabal also which almost always belongs to what we call intemperate men, or those addicted to the excessive use of intoxicating liquor, namely: profound and prominent selfishness.

There is no greater mistake than to suppose that men who drink are generous, and what people call large-hearted. The selfishness of such men is of an unmitigated sort. The comfort, interest, respectability, peace of mind, property rights, proper maintenance and support of others, is of no consequence when compared with the single brutish habit which ignores all rights and claims opposed to its indulgence.

Abigail, like thousands of the wives of other more modern drunkards, was able by the exercise of care and tact to save her wretched husband from a violent and swift punishment at the hands of others; but she could not save him from the inevitable consequences of his own indulgence. If he was not drunk when the young men of David came to him, he was soon afterward, and his rage and dissipation brought on an attack which soon ended his miserable existence.

If the same will-power which men exert to gratify their evil propensities were exerted to resist evil, the result would be victory, and less would be heard about what are sometimes called victims of intemperance. Perhaps, sometimes the conflict with passion and appetite and habit might, because of its horrible fury, result in death. Such a death would be glorious and honorable in comparison with that which results from deliberate surrender to all the worst and basest of motives and tendencies.

Nabal is an example to be despised and shunned, being a bad husband, an ungrateful neighbor, a thoughtless husbandman, a selfish master, an unworthy citizen, and an insulting as well as a cold-hearted rich man.

Temperance.

Mrs. Zereida Wallace will begin a series of addresses in Mississippi on October 1st, to continue through the month. Her itinerancy will be published in the State and county papers. She is of slight figure, not over five feet three inches in height, but with a face and head like some of the relievos on the old Roman coins. Her face is at once "singled out" in a crowd of her peers and involuntarily a sense of power is upon you. Mrs. Wallace is the mother of Gen. Wallace, the author of "Ben Hur." She is a venerable mother in Israel, termed by the sisterhood—venerable in years; but Miss Francis E. Willard says, "with natural strength unabated," a clear, vigorous brain, and that gentle reasonableness toward all humanity that only comes with a long and rich experience.

Some of the topics on which "Mother Wallace" will talk are Prohibition versus High License; Is Woman Suffrage Essential to a True Republic? Woman's Position, Social, Civil and Religious, from a Bible Stand-point.

The Swedish government has appropriated £1000 a year for the promotion of temperance.

The Wisconsin W. C. T. U., in co-operation with the Chicago "country-week" workers, during the summer secured the delights of country air and sunlight for several hundred poor city children, one young woman's union finding places for fifty of the little ones, and another for sixty-three.

The high license law in Pittsburg, Pa., has produced a large number of illegal places called "speak easys." One saloon-keeper in that city recently told the assessor, under oath, that he was making $40,000 a year. Mr. Houston and Supt. Weir, of the police bureau, agree that drunkenness is on the increase.

Politicians in dealing with temperance questions are recommended to take as their maxim the words of a great American statesman, who said: "A politician is like a pillar: he is only strong as long as he is straight."

Mr. Labouchere states the almost incredible fact that in the accounts of the expenditure of the British sovereign liqueur are set down as costing £9,583; ale and beer, £14,642; wine, £35,888; altogether, £50,113 for intoxicating drinks. So much for the social example of the royal family.

A flag for every school-house. The W. C. T. U. department for soldiers and sailors has prepared an original program for an entertainment, the proceeds of which are to be used to buy a flag for the school-house in the vicinity where the entertainment is held. This plan suggests a delightful and profitable branching out of local unions, and would, doubtless, find favor in thousands of villages where the people might yet be shy of more radical methods of work.

Mr. Wm. T. Stead, editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, upon being asked whether women would probably do important work on the newspaper of the future, said: "Women in the future will take a more important part in everything. The question of the slaves was a great one, that of the emancipation of women is greater. In the lower callings of life—where there is the carrying of heavy weights and that sort of thing to be done—we see very little difference made between the sexes. It is only in the higher callings that there is better pay, that the difference comes in and women are barred out."

Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, the indefatigable W. C. T. U. missionary, whose arrival in London was recently noted, has planned another long itineracy, to begin this next November, taking her first to the west coast of Africa, then through continental Europe, Portugal, Spain, France, Holland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Turkey, the Holy Land, Egypt, Greece, Italy, the British Isles and South America, bringing her back to her native land in the spring of 1892.

Notice from the Publisher.

The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE will be furnished new subscribers for $2 from date to January, 1891. This gives the paper free for three months. The money may be handed the preacher in charge, who is our authorized agent, at any time prior to the meeting of the Annual Conference.

J. G. GRANT, Publisher.

The editor calls special attention to the above card of the publisher. There are two months till the meeting of our first Conference, December 4. If the preachers will go earnestly to work and persistently persevere in it, that ten thousand subscribers may be obtained in that time, and then the publisher is ready with his two thousand dollars for the widows and orphans and superannuates. What say you, brethren?

Briefs.

Hugh Price Hughes, of the London Methodist Times, says: "It is the business of faithful Christian Churches to utter unpleasant truths, and to make the devil and all his servants very uncomfortable."

The Baptists are to open in Boston, early in October, a training-school for missionary service, in which both young men and young women will be trained for missionary work. Ahead of us again!

Emerson says: "If we live truly, we shall see truly. It is as easy for the strong man to be strong, as it is for the weak to be weak. When a man lives with God, his voice shall be as sweet as the murmur of the brook and the rustle of the corn."

On sending out the gospel message, Dr. Pierson says: "If Ahasuerus could send a decree through 127 provinces (2,000 miles by 1,200 miles) in less than nine months, surely we can cover thirteen times the space in eleven years." We can do it if we will. It simply depends upon the will of the church.

The Woman's Missionary Advocate, in September number, begins a series of articles on "Mission Studies," which will prove of great interest and value to the readers of that excellent paper. They will be, "Early Christian Missions," "Modern Protestant Missions," and "Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South."

A two days' meeting was held recently at Saratoga, composed of prominent men from various parts of the country interested in resisting the aggressions of the Roman Church upon American institutions. A National League for the Protection of American Institutions was formed, with Hon. John Jay, of New York, as president, and Dr. J. B. Dunn, of Boston, secretary.

The Independent gives this description of a bigot:

A characteristic mark of a bigot consists in the fact that he condemns others who differ from him, in either opinion or practice, with respect to matters that are of but trifling importance. He has a narrow soul, exaggerates little things, and is always sure that he is right. Set down such a man for a bigot.

Haven't you "run across" him occasionally?

The Revelations of God.

You may discourse most beautifully to a blind man about the composition of light; about the supposed ether and its conjectured undulations—and all this with the strictest scientific accuracy and without a single error in your teaching; and, when you are done, the result is, he positively has no clear idea of light. The man does not need a description. It is a case where a declaration, no matter how full and clear, can not give a definite idea of what it seeks to give. It is not a declaration as to what light is that the blind man wants. He wants a revelation of what light is. Let the veil of blindness be removed and the sun shine out; then he will know something about light, and can appreciate all you say in explanation of its philosophy. The sun don't reveal himself by messages couched in words teaching the scientific theory of light. Men could never learn much about the sun by such a revelation as that. Indeed, that is no revelation at all. The sun reveals himself by coming up above the horizon and shining, and then men go to work and formulate the laws of light.

So God's revelation of himself is not by words and messages, but by appearances. He appeared before he spoke. He manifested himself to men long before anything was written concerning his character. Job, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses—all had revelations of the Divine Being before any written declarations of his nature and character were thought of. And when we read what is written, we find it more a history of God's actions than a revelation of his character. He emerged in history upon the plane of human action, and men saw him, and then heard him, and then written theology—that is, the science of God—became possible. God had been revealing himself to men for hundreds of years before a word was written about him. And when the writing began, it was to explain the continuousness and progressiveness of those revelations.

God's revelations of himself have been progressive. God putting his hand over Moses' face to curtain from his view the ineffable glories of the face-to-face interview, and then withdrawing his hand that his servant might see the lesser glories of his departing presence, is an object-lesson of his method of revelation. "The glory of God" manifested in olden time to his people was both a revelation and a hiding of the Divine Being. The splendors that accompanied the revelations were also a curtain of light to conceal the full glory of Godhead until man was ready for the clearest and fullest disclosure. The Shekinah, the symbol of the divine presence, was hidden in the "holy of holies." To the old Jew, that was the concentration of the divine glory. Since the Gospel of John was written we have learned that all those "lights and splendors" which accompanied God's appearances, from the time of Moses down to that of Ezekiel, were but the premonitory flashes of the fullness of glory that should beam upon the world. There were men, too, who regarded them as but signs of a fuller revelation, and their hearts cried out in earnest prayer for that fuller revelation. After the sublimest manifestation God ever made of himself in the olden time, we hear Moses, who had witnessed the wonderful spectacle, in an agony of prayer, crying out: "I beseech thee, show me thy glory." To him there was a "glory of God" not yet revealed. He wanted something else besides the smoke and the fire and the splendors that drove men to distraction and overwhelmed them with terror. His soul cried for something else besides infinite power and consuming grandeur. The revelation of that "something else" has been made, but made progressively. Gradually we see those strange "lights and splendors" fading away, and God emerging into fuller view, and in a character nearer to humanity. In Ezekiel's wonderful vision this fact is clearly stated. In regard to the "living creatures," he says: "They had the likeness of a man." He saw "the likeness of a throne," and upon it "was the likeness of the appearance of a man." And in explanation of this wondrous scene, he says: "This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the Lord." In other words, "The glory of the Lord" appeared to the Prophet Ezekiel as having assumed the human form. That appearance indicated progress toward humanity, and was a prophecy of the nature of the final revelation of the Divine Being.

The full disclosure of God's glory and the nature of the final revelation of himself was made when he entered humanity in the person of Jesus with all the boundless wealth of his redeeming grace. In all the former revelations God appeared outside of the human circle. In this last revelation he appears as united with humanity in all its essential attributes. And this is his glory. St. John, after a lifetime of study on the great subject, deliberately connects the glory of God with the incarnation of his Son. He says: "The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory: the glory as of the only begotten of the Father." God manifest in the flesh is the full and final revelation of his glory to men. Moses prayed: "I beseech thee, show me thy glory." John wrote: "And we beheld his glory, full of grace and truth." The prayer has been answered, "for God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ."

Canon Farrar on Episcopacy.

The celebrated Archdeacon and Canon of Westminister, Frederic William Farrar, D. D., F. R. S., a man whose name is foremost in all the world as a Churchman and writer upon theological subjects and church history, has contributed an article to the September number of the North American Review, which will certainly prove refreshing reading to most of the Episcopalians in this country! In this article he seeks to set forth the reasons "Why I Am an Episcopalian." From the usual standpoint occupied by the Churchmen in Mississippi and Louisiana it is certainly a remarkable paper, and we much doubt if our friends of the Episcopal Church in our midst will agree to his position. Indeed, they can not do it without contradicting all their previous teachings. But, then, if a man finds out that he is wrong, manhood and Christian conscience say he should acknowledge his error and turn away from it. The sects have been trying for a good while to show our Episcopal friends their error on the subject of episcopacy, but they will not hear us. We look now to see if they will listen to one of the foremost men of their own denomination emphasizing the truth of the teaching which we have been giving them for years.

The Canon begins his paper by an assertion which overturns the whole theory of the Episcopalians in regard to the true church; and it must sound in their ears as the notes of a most horrid heresy. He says:

Let me begin, then, by saying that, though I am a convinced Episcopalian, I hold the question of church organization to be altogether secondary and subordinate, and in no sense essential to morality or salvation. I consider episcopacy to be, in most cases, the best, the most authorized and—in its rudiments, at least—the most ancient form of church government; but I do not regard it as one of the necessary notes of a true church, nor do I consider it to be at all indispensable for the esse, or even for the bene esse of any church. The thirty-nine Articles define the "visible church" to be "a congregation of faithful men in which the pure Word of God is preached, and the sacraments duly administered according to Christ's ordinance in all those things that of necessity are requisite to the same." The prayer book in its most solemn service speaks of Christians as "very members incorporate in the mystical body of Christ, which is the blessed company of all faithful people." Neither here nor in any document of the Church of England is episcopacy insisted on as a thing indispensable.

It occurs to us that such language as the above about as effectually cuts the ground from under the High-church notion of episcopacy as any we have ever seen, even from the opponents of that huge heresy. We could hardly imagine anything left to be said that could add to the strength and vigor of the argument. The Canon, however, who is a master in the use of English, goes on, in what seems to us to be a cordial cold-bloodedness, and knocks every prop from under the fanciful structure, and then stands in complacent attitude and views with satisfaction "the ruin he hath wrought." Hear him:

Do we or do we not believe that there is a church of the redeemed in heaven? And is there a human being who supposes that the soul of any man which is admitted into that beatific communion will be questioned whether on earth he accepted or not an episcopal government? Let us avoid the arrogant nonsense of extremes. Let us shun the pompous platitudes which can only be saved from intolerant and extravagant absurdity by first being emphatically asserted and then ridiculously explained away. Such a platitude is that which first identifies the church with one of its component bodies and then says, with St. Cyprian, "Extra ecclesiam nulla salus." The assertion sounds very grand, very orthodox, very faithful; but when you come to question even the Romish casuists, they are constrained to admit that even Jews and Pagans may be saved, so that unless they stretch the meaning of the word ecclesia till its whole meaning cracks, their platitude becomes an empty phrase. Churches will not be estimated hereafter by the boastful arrogance of their claims or the narrow and bitter exclusiveness of their champions, but by the fruitfulness of their works and the beauty of their holiness. The revival and exaggeration of Romish principles in reformed churches may make these views appear lax to some; yet they are almost totidem verbis et litteris the views of some of our most honored divines.

Such sentiments from the Archdeacon and Canon of Westminister are enough to take the breath out of the ordinary Mississippi and Louisiana Episcopalian. But the ruthless Canon, standing amongst the ruins of the temple of High-church episcopacy, gives a blow which so scatters the fragments that the most astute and Jesuitical prelacy will never be able to gather them together again. Hear him:

Though episcopacy seems to me to have the divine sanction, I do not in any sense regard episcopacy as a thing of immediate divine institution or universal obligation any more than I regard monarchy. A state may be blessed and flourishing without kings, and a church may be blessed and flourishing without bishops. I do not believe that our Lord in founding upon earth a divine society meant also, of necessity, to establish an unvarying organization. Under the guidance of the Holy Spirit it was and is perfectly competent for every nation and every separated community of Christians, under the stress of circumstances, to adopt that form of church government which was or is best suited to its needs.

Thus on and on the good Canon sweeps, and leaves not even the ghost of prelatical presumption standing on its feet. His characterization of the whole thing as "arrogant nonsense," "pompous platitudes," "extravagant absurdity," is surely very hard on our High-church friends. But when he says: "I hold that episcopacy is lawful in its use and primitive in its origin, but I do not maintain for it any indefeasible divine prescription, nor do I regard the bishop as being of an essentially different order from the presbyter, but only as a president among presbyters, endowed with one or two special functions, and with a limited, but neither absolute nor infallible authority," he deliberately lays the "last feather" upon the poor camel's back, and that vertebra crashes right down in the middle with a "compound fracture" that is "past all surgery."

We would be glad to quote more from the Canon's paper for the benefit of our friends, but our space is all taken.

The Japan Mission.

In a private letter, Bishop Wilson, who has charge of the Japan Mission, says: "I have three or four men and one, perhaps two ladies on hand for Japan; but have had delays in almost every case. One lady goes the last of this month—a woman of exceptionally fine character and abilities. For her support I am responsible. Two young men are now before the Board for acceptance. For one of them I am responsible. The other, as Bro. Newton's assistant, is provided for by the Board. I want two more men and one woman. I hope to get them, and must raise the money for them. I am very thankful for your help in the matter."

Now, friends, can there be any louder call than that? Have you sent your contribution to answer it? Don't you hear the undertone of Christ's voice in this piercing cry from Japan? Will you still turn a deaf ear to his pleading, or will you help immediately and cheerfully and bountifully? Look at our list. It is growing gradually, but your name—has it appeared? The cry from Japan is, "Send us men and women of God who can lead us to the light and show us the way of salvation!" Our Lord is pleading in that cry.

The Civil Sabbath.

Rev. Josiah Strong, secretary of the Evangelical Alliance, in the course of an excellent discourse on "The Civil Sabbath," recently delivered, has this to say regarding the grounds for its observance:

"We observe two Sabbaths, entirely distinct in origin, character and authority; the one civil, the other religious. The latter is divine in its origin and authority, and sacred in character; the former—the civil Sabbath—is wholly human in its origin and authority, and secular in character. Because these two Sabbaths coincide they are very easily and commonly confounded, and there results much popular misconception as to the meaning and value of Sabbath laws. * * * Much bad blood and much injury to the cause of Sabbath observance result from the common failure of both the enemies and friends of Sabbath laws to perceive that they are wholly secular, and that they in no wise depend for justification on the divine authority and sacred character of the religious Sabbath. If the words, 'Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy,' had never been uttered, there would be exactly the same ground for Sabbath legislation which now exists; a ground, full, broad and solid."

The tenable grounds, therefore, on which legislation regarding Sabbath observance rests, are these, namely: "First, the duty of the State to secure to every man the right to rest on the Sabbath, and, second, the duty of the State to guard the leisure of the day from uses subversive of its object as a day of rest, and uses dangerous to public morals.—Standard.

Dr. Whately was Cardinal Newman's teacher, and the Cardinal bears this testimony to the efficiency of his teacher: "He taught me to see with my own eyes and to walk with my own feet." We take it, that is the perfection of teaching.

Notes.

In regard to the abolishment of the death penalty, the New York Observer says truly:

Abolishing the death penalty does not indicate an increase of the sense of the sacredness of human life, but exactly the contrary. It is a great appreciation of the value of the criminal's life, and a comparatively small appreciation of the value of the life of his victims.

The Pacific Methodist contains this characteristic note from Dr. John Hannon in regard to the week of prayer:

The week of prayer was observed at Centenary; $50 was the offering which like a big postage stamp we put upon the letters of our prayers. I think we ought to have paid more postage. Christians run the "franking privilege" of the gospel and free prayer too far.

One of our amusements is to study the efforts of our Northern friends to print the negro dialect. The effort always results in a most conspicuous failure. No Southern man ever heard a negro speak as the Northern papers make him speak. Where they get the gibberish they put in the negro's mouth we can not conjecture, or how any man could invent such stuff nobody can tell. The negro himself repudiates such a caricature of his talk with disgust. It seems cruel for them to misrepresent even his language.

The ambition of men to make faster time is manifested especially in regard to travel by land and by sea. The time is being continually shortened. Forty miles an hour by rail is now considered not very fast. In crossing the Atlantic the record has been continually broken, until now the "City of Paris," the fleetest of the "ocean greyhounds," has brought the time down to 5 days, 19 hours and 18 minutes. Wherennto this matter will grow, no prophet can tell. A trip to Europe now means very little as to time. Our friends go and return before we think they are cleverly on the way.

"Thou, therefore, which teachest another, teachest thou not thyself?" The apostle's question is a very close and searching one. A man's actions should agree with his own teachings. If he is endeavoring to bring others to obedience to the law of God, he must himself be obedient. If he is endeavoring to uphold the law of the church in the maintenance of discipline, he must not be a violator of the church law. This is intended as a hint to those young preachers who are exercising functions which the church has not yet authorized them to exercise. We hope this hint will be heeded.

No less an authority than Prof. Geo. D. Ladd, of Yale College, makes the following extraordinary statement in the September number of Scribner's Magazine:

I have personally been cognizant of a system of public education, inaugurated in a large city, where, in the higher grade of instruction, the pupils were taught at the public expense to dissect cats, to accept in toto Bain's psychology, and to deride the Christian religion; but not one of them could learn a word of Greek without the expense of a private tutor.

It is high time the church everywhere was paying more attention to this all-important subject of Christian education.

Through the courtesy of Mrs. J. B. Stone, we have received the Minutes of the tenth annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference, held in Greenville, Miss., June 6-9, 1889. From this report we are glad to note that the mission work is growing in interest and efficiency under the management of the Methodist women of North Mississippi. The collections the past year, ending March 30, 1889, amounted to $3,236 25, contributed as follows: Winona district, $503 35; Aberdeen district, $393 35; Sardis district, $340 27; Columbus district, $505 42; Corinth district, $253 39; Grenada district, $351 77; Greenville district, $338 45; Holly Springs district, $550 25. This is a fine showing, indeed!

Farmton has this little story in the Advance, and we like it so well that we transfer it to the ADVOCATE for the benefit of those whom it may concern:

A young man wanted to go to college. He was fatherless. His mother had a few hundred dollars. She felt that by great economy she might have enough to put him through the four years without debt. A friend of his father heard of his purpose. He casually asked him, "How much money, John, do you think a man ought to have to get the most out of his college course?" He replied, "$500." The friend followed up the answer with a further question, "How much money do you plan to spend?" "$250," he replied. "Very well, you can draw on me each year for another $250." The boy was in tearful gratitude. "But I don't know as I ought to accept, it is too much." "Yes, you must. It is a loan, and you can so regard it; you can repay it; if ever you become a rich man you will pay the money back to some poor boy who is trying to get an education." The young man is now in college. I could not but admire the wisdom of this benefactor. I respected his generosity. He helped the worthy, needy man; he thus helped the cause of all righteousness; but he helped the young man in a way to leave his self-respect not simply untouched but even ennobled.

Personal and Otherwise.

The postal service of the world is now so perfect that a letter can go around in sixty-nine days.

Since 1861 the United States government has paid out ten hundred millions of dollars in pensions. And yet republics are ungrateful!"

It is strange to read in the newspapers that a son of Canon Farrar, of Westminster, has come to this country to perfect himself in mechanical and scientific knowledge at Lehigh University.

The Western Conference elected as delegates to the General Conference Rev. J. M. Gross, clerical, and J. K. P. Parker, lay.

Rev. William Stoddard, of Moderty, Scotland, is 102 years old, walks a mile to preaching every Sunday, preaches an hour, does all his pastoral duties, and is the efficient chairman of the School Board.

There are forty-seven organizations engaged in the evangelization of the Jews, with 377 workers in 195 stations. At least 150 of the missionaries are converted Jews.

It can now be said of our country that "the sun never sets on our dominions." The sun rises in Maine before it sets in Alaska.

A man 104 years old has been admitted to church membership in Elgin, Indiana.

"While the lamp holds out to burn,
The vilest sinner may return."

At a cost of $100 000 the Bible House in New York is to be remodeled into a ten-story building, 80 feet high.

Dr. C. O. Waters has been a continuous correspondent of the Presbyterian for thirty years.

Besides his other work, we hear of a recent in Mississippi that has bought a parsonage for $500 cash, built a church for $100 cash, bought a horse for the preacher for $125 cash, besides sending help to the Johnstown sufferers. That is a helpful people.

Hon. H. Skipwith, of Clinton, La., has begun in the Wilson Sun a history of the parish of East Feliciana. There is no more interesting history than that of the "Florida parishes," and we know of no one more competent to write it than Mr. Skipwith.

Sullivan wants to run for Congress. When he gets out of Gov. Lowry's jail, he will be an immensely popular man about Boston, and he wants to represent Boston.

A private note from Bishop Wilson, dated Paris, Ky., September 11, says: "I am still in a measure disabled by a mishap on the railroad, but am getting along with my Conference work fairly well."

A note from Dr. J. B. Walker, dated September 13, says: "I have improved and feel much more comfortable. My rheumatism pains and annoys me. It is not violent nor continuous. I will be home by first Sunday in October."

A private letter from Rev. P. H. Loffenwerth, a superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, now residing near Clear Water Harbor, Fla., says: "The operations of my physical system are regularly moving, but with diminishing force. Sometimes it seems that the end is near. I make my Savior my trust, and my efforts and prayers are that I may be ready when the change shall come." The good old patriarch has the prayers of all his brethren.

Rev. Dr. H. H. Tucker, editor of the Christian Index, accidentally fell from a window of his room recently, and received such injuries as resulted in his death. "In the midst of life we are in death."

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. J. E. Denson writes from Abbeville, La.: The "third Quarterly Conference just closed. The presiding elder, Rev. S. S. Keener, was present, and preached for us both Saturday and Sunday morning. We also baptized five infants, which, added to the twenty-two previously baptized, makes twenty-seven children he has dedicated to God on my work this year. We protracted this meeting eight days, being blessed with the grand sermons of that old veteran preacher, Rev. S. H. Cooper. There was also present with us Bro. L. Fenner, exhorter from the Alexandria District. The meeting was a perfect success. Ninety accessions, twelve conversions and seventeen baptisms. Praise God for the shouts once more heard in the camps of Israel!"

—Rev. J. F. Evans, presiding elder of the Grenada district, North Mississippi Conference, writes from Hot Springs, Ark.: "Please say to the brethren that I am at this place for the benefit of the water. I hope to be able to take charge of the district again by October 1. The pastors will continue to send their reports to Water Valley: I take this means of returning many thanks to the brethren and pastural charges helping me to this place. May the good Lord reward them a thousand-fold! My present address is 910 Central avenue, Hot Springs, Ark."

—Rev. H. T. Cunningham writes from Del Rio, Texas: "Am closing out my first year in the itinerancy away out on the frontier. Del Rio is a thriving Western town of 500 inhabitants, situated in sight of Mexico. The ADVOCATE'S visits are refreshing. Closed a good meeting August 22."

—Rev. R. A. Burroughs writes September 12: "We have just closed a gracious revival at Black Hawk, Miss. A large number of conversions and twenty-three additions to our church. We had the Rev. T. B. Malone the first week, who gave us fine preaching. He is one of our best men; his preaching is of that character that will always bear fruit. The last week we had with us Bro. D. L. Cogdell, who did good work. The church is greatly revived. We expect to have a good report by Conference. Have received ninety-five in the church this year. All the glory to God!"

—Rev. G. W. Gordon writes: "During the week of prayer Carrollton and Greenwood raised $59 20 for foreign missions. Our Conference is drawing nigh, and we are beginning to wind up and be ready for it. I think there will be a split in my work, and happy shall he be who falls on either part."

—Rev. R. S. Isbell writes from Opelousas, La.: "We are in the midst of a glorious revival at Bellevue Church, a few miles below Opelousas. Large congregations attend at night each day, and the interest is increasing all the time. Quite a number of penitents at the altar at each service. Bro. H. S. Johns, of Washington, assisted me very efficiently several days last week. The meeting is still progressing, and will continue as long as favorable indications suggest. Have received several accessions to the church up to date. Have also had several accessions to the church at Opelousas. Expect to begin a protracted meeting at Opelousas on the fourth Sunday of this month, and will continue as long as indications are favorable. Have assistance promised for this work. Pray for my success here."

—Rev. H. M. Banks writes from Sugartown, La., September 13, 1889: "I have just closed a meeting of several days at Sugar Creek. It was a time of refreshing to me. The eleven o'clock service on Sunday was a delightful one to many. It was a regular camp-meeting time. Two joined the church, and several penitents gave their hearts to God who did not unite with the church. It may be they will join the Baptist Church. Many of the Baptist brethren enjoyed our meeting, which did my soul good."

—Rev F. M. Keen writes from Amite City, La.: "I have just closed a two weeks' meeting at Oyka, which was a decided success. Sinners were converted, penitents converted, and Christians—not a few—were quickened and strengthened; nine accessions and several conversions. Ten persons professed conversion at one service. Bro. W. W. Hopper spent a week with me, and many testify that they are better men and better women since hearing Bro. Hopper. Bro. McDonald was with me two days, it being the occasion of my third Quarterly Conference. His preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power. His sermons made a profound impression on the people. I reported to the Quarterly Conference twenty-five accessions, eleven children baptized, and finances pretty well up. We are taking steps towards building a new parsonage at Amite City."

—Rev. H. J. Boltz writes from Marthaville, La.: "We have just closed two very interesting meetings which resulted in twenty-seven accessions to the church and the church greatly revived. The local brethren rendered valuable service in these meetings. Quite a number of new family altars promised, and some have promised to take the ADVOCATE soon. Pray for us and our work. God bless you and the dear old ADVOCATE!"

—Rev. A. C. Flowers writes from Montrose, Miss.: "Our protracted meetings are about over. The church has been revived and blessed. Several family altars have been erected since our meetings. Ten accessions to the church and as many conversions. Nearly all who attended claimed the meetings a spiritual blessing to them. I have got seventeen new subscribers this year, and expect to get more. Subscriptions are slow coming in now owing to the short cotton crop. Pray for us."

—Rev. B. M. Drake writes from Daleville, Miss.: "I have just closed a meeting at Linwood on the Spring Hill circuit, which was blessed of the Lord. Bros. Backus and Howse rendered efficient aid. Praise the Lord for his faithfulness in keeping his promise, 'Lo! I am with you alway.'"

The college has opened better than it has for many years of its history, and has already a larger number of boarders than at any time last session. Students are coming from different sections of this State and Texas, and a large increase is still expected. This session will be a grand success. Those who contemplate coming ought to write immediately to secure accommodation. A. D. M'VOY.

A Good Letter.

At the last meeting of our Juvenile Missionary Society, in this place, I read before them Dr. Lambuth's touching letter from Japan, and all hearts were moved at his stirring appeal; so after collecting this month's dues from the members present, it was decided to send on to you for the Japan Mission all the money in the hands of our secretary. Agreeable thereto, please find enclosed in this a post office order for $3 50, donated by the "Saturtia Juvenile Missionary Society" for the Japan mission. Wishing it may accomplish much and lasting good, it goes freighted with the prayers of a noble little band of workers for Christ and God's glory. May he accept the offering, and bless all efforts in his behalf, and all his laborers. Your good paper, which cheers my home each week, is often read in the missionary meetings, and encourages and comforts many of us. Wishing it great success, and you abundant blessing, I remain,

Yours in sincere and Christian love and respect,

MRS. ELLA F. DUNN,
Pres. Saturtia Juv. Miss. Society.

If that lady at the lecture the other night only knew how nicely Hall's Hair Renewer would remove dandruff and improve the hair she would buy a bottle.

The clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese of New York has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and The Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

Publisher's Department.

Advertising is evidently becoming an art, and its development may yet lead to the establishment of special courses of training in business colleges. Already nearly $25,000,000 are spent annually in the United States in newspaper advertising, every dollar of which if used judiciously has returned a large interest to the investor. One feature of the advertisements of to-day forms an agreeable contrast to the advertisements of a generation ago. It is the evident sincerity in which they are written and the consequently greater confidence the searcher after information can repose in them. That the advertising page is becoming one of the most interesting pages of the daily newspaper is one of the striking proofs of the growth of intelligence and refinement among the people.—Philadelphia Press.

Mrs. Blotterwick—"Joshua, there was a tramp here this afternoon, and he looked so hungry that I gave him a large piece of gooseberry pie. I wonder how he feels now?" Blotterwick (gloomily)—"I know how he feels. I had a piece of that pie at dinner, you remember."

Next to your subscription the greatest favor you can extend the ADVOCATE, in a business point, is to mention the paper in writing to advertisers.

THE CENTURY DICTIONARY.

THIS great work, which has been in active preparation for the past seven years, contains a number of novel features, and combines in one a dictionary and a condensed and usable encyclopedia. It does not stop at mere definitions of words, but goes into particulars about things. The spelling, while resting on an independent basis, is essentially the so called American; the system of indicating pronunciation is simple and easily understood, and the etymologies are treated more fully than in any dictionary yet published. It is a reference book, not only for the casual reader, but for the specialist also—the biologist, the architect, the electrician, the musician, the mineralogist, etc.—and for the business man.

We would like to make every reader of this paper acquainted with the plan of The Century Dictionary, and for this purpose we will send descriptive circulars free of charge, upon request, or for ten cents in stamps (the cost of manufacture) we will mail to any address a large pamphlet containing a number of specimen pages of the Dictionary, shewing sample definitions in various subjects, as anatomy, law, botany, theology, gems, games, mechanics, physics with specimen illustrations, etc., etc. Address

ROCKING DOLLY TO SLEEP.

BY CALLIE L. DONNEY.

Ah, dear little girl, in the gloaming,
With dolly held fast in your arms,
And you hush her with loving assurance,
And quiet imagined alarms,
Do you dream of the future before you,
Of the tears that your blue eyes must weep,
Or think you will have few such pleasures
As rocking your dolly to sleep?

What fancies like song birds are flitting
As you softly croon sweet lullaby,
The beautiful mother-love showing
As you sing, "Hush, baby, don't cry.
Ah, dear little golden-haired darling,
May angels your loving heart keep
In all of its innocent beauty,
While rocking your dolly to sleep.

And should, in the years that come after,
You weary of trouble and care,
And think of this low willow rocker,
And wish that again you were there,
Be patient, my golden-haired darling;
No sorrow or trial so deep,
But will fade in the glories of heaven,
When angels have rocked us to sleep.

Science, Homeopathically Prepared by Uncle Carlos.

The circle being again assembled in the quaint old library, and our wise and reverend uncle "in position," in order to test our interest, he calmly enquired, "What is the subject to be discussed to-night?"

Ralph, who like Simon Peter, always "answered and said," immediately responded, "Those days that puzzle our logical Cousin Tom so much. Is that the proper adjective, Uncle—'logical'? I don't know exactly what it means, but I thought it sounded well when I heard brother Alick use it the other day?"

"Yes, that is a very correct adjective to apply to Thomas. Who can tell us exactly what it means?"

"'Versed in the art of thinking and reasoning, discriminating,' Webster says," replied the accurate Alick. "Yes, that is what Thomas will become, if he continues to investigate as he has begun."

"But, Ralph, do you not feel any interest in 'those days?'"

"Not a particle. I don't care even a croquet ball"—Ralph belonged to a baseball club, and felt little respect for croquet—"whether 'those days' were twenty-four hours long, as they should be according to arithmetic, or twenty-four billions or trillions of years long, as your scientists say they are. The earth is made, and I like it just as it is. It was pronounced 'good, very good' by its Maker, and I think that decision ought to satisfy everybody that it was made just right; and as to the time taken to do it, who cares about that? I am sure I don't."

"I do," said Thomas; "I would like to know just how it was made, and how much time was occupied in making it."

"Very well, Cousin Tom; but I think you will have to wait awhile until, as St. Paul, I believe it is, says, 'we know even as we are known,' not 'while we see through a glass darkly,'" said the boy who, although he did not care about the length of "those days," studied his Bible carefully to know how to spend his days.

Uncle, who had a keen appreciation of the boy, also of his rights and privileges, and enjoyed a free discussion of a reasonable length, now quietly assumed the mentor, and coolly remarked: "We will see, Thomas, what the latest developments of science will do towards satisfying your mind, as I believe you are disposed to regard the scientific records of higher authority than the Mosaic."

"Hardly. I desire most earnestly to see clearly that they are in harmony, but must confess that as yet I have failed."

"In examining into the subject, let us first look at the Bible record," said our uncle. "Let me ask where is the word 'day' first mentioned in that record?"

"Genesis, first chapter, fifth verse," quickly replied Alick.

"Please read it."

"'And God called the light day, and the darkness he called night. And the evening and the morning was the first day.'"

"Does the word 'day' denote the same length of time in each clause?"

"Certainly not," said Alick, somewhat excitedly; "the first must mean simply the opposite of night about twelve hours, and the other can mean only a diurnal revolution of twenty-four hours."

"Do you find the word used in any other sense?"

A pause; then Grace, whom all had recognized as a practical student of the Bible, but who had not been considered especially critical, diffidently said: "The fourth verse of the second chapter reads, 'In the day that the Lord God made the earth and the heavens.'"

"Well," said Thomas, rousing himself; "this is becoming decidedly interesting. Here are three distinct periods of time expressed by the word 'day.'"

"Certainly, and the last is the only place in either chapter which purports to tell us how long was the time in which God created the heavens and the earth, says one who in my opinion has studied this record most carefully," our uncle gravely replied; "and I think we are obliged to conclude that the word 'day,' as used in the Bible, denotes an indefinite period of time."

All, even doubting Thomas, and Ralph, the irrepressible, were silenced and convinced that that question was settled by the Word itself.

MR. EDITOR: I see your little folks' department is still going on. I wish to add myself once more to the contributors. This town is still building up. We have nine stores in this town, and still building up. Our school will start next September. I have a little sister who will go, but I can not go. I would like to go very much; I like to go to school so well. Our church is built up again; it was blown down last year. I stay here at the depot with the agent; his name is Mr. Henry D'Amond. He is a nice man. He likes me so well, and I like him as well as he likes me. The agent that was here left June 18. He is gone to Natchez, Miss. The agent here now is very sick; but I hope he will get well soon to attend his office. We had a meeting here last week and part of this week. I joined the Methodist Church; eight or nine more joined. The preachers preached nice sermons to the people. Their names are Revs. Linfield, Roberts, Jones, Anders, Reams, Roberts (young Roberts). I hope you will publish this little letter for me, as it is my second time I have written to you. The Baptist Church is building up. I hope it will soon be built up, and the preachers will preach in it. I have to stop off. I wish you to correct my mistakes, for I am in a hurry. I will close. I am,

Yours truly,

WILLIE M'KENT.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never seen a letter from this place, I thought I would write one. I have three sisters and three brothers. We are not going to school now. We do not have any Sunday-school to go to. We have preaching once a month. Bro. Henderson is our preacher; we like him very much. Mamma takes the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and we like to read the little cousins' letters. I will close by asking the little cousins a question: What two chapters in the Bible are alike? I remain,

Your friend,

RUPERT FARGESON.

MR. EDITOR: I have not seen a letter in your paper from this place. I thought I would write one. We have very large Sunday-school. Rev. T. K. Faunt LeRoy is our preacher, and I like him very much. I am up here spending the summer with Col. T. C. Standifer. I came up with him when he came from the Seashore Camp Meeting. I have been here nearly three months, but it seems like three weeks. Hoping to see this letter published, I remain, Yours, VAN CARTER.

Household.

The Ideal Home.

In a paper by Mrs. Emily Huntington Miller, read at the Chautauqua (N. Y.) Assembly, recently, she mentioned the following as among the essential elements of a true home:

The ideal home is not a nomad, but has a permanent freehold. It does not exist in boarding-houses and hotels. It needs for its development the mutual cares and dependencies of co-operative labor; it needs for its own individuality the authority to shut its doors about itself, to formulate and regulate its manner of life to a degree impossible except under its own roof. A coterie of individuals, father, mother and children, may live together in comparative physical comfort at a hotel, if stress of circumstance force them temporarily to accept such a substitute; but if they are a family, it will not be to them a home. For a family has an object in life beyond mere existence. The father is not simply the bread-winner, the mother the care-taker, and the children irresponsible individuals concerned only in their own enjoyment. The family is a life-saving institution; thoroughly equipped and properly organized, it is set up by God as one of his mightiest agencies for the rescue of a wrecked world—a world that more than anything else needs homes for shelter and salvation. Our local charities, our attempts at alleviating the condition of the poor, our utmost expenditure for reform, can give us no permanent results until in some way we can reach the home and the family.

The ideal home is co-operative. One purpose, thoroughly understood, animates all its members, and there are no conflicting interests, no tyrannical government, and no rebellions or strikes. In fact, I greatly doubt the value of strikes of any kind in the family, but incline to the opinion that any apparent gain is more than counterbalanced by evil. Perfect co-operation is only possible where there is perfect understanding and common point of view between husband and wife, parents and children. It can never be secured where, on the subject of expenditure for instance, the father is high tariff, the mother free trade, and the children licensed free-booters whose object is to plunder both parties.

It need hardly be said that the ideal home is religious. Its fundamental idea being development, it can not ignore the spiritual nature, which is a breath to the clay of all else. Its very authority and sanctions are divine, and it shares with the Eternal his fatherly function of protecting the immature soul that has not yet learned to choose the good and refuse the evil. We shall never properly estimate the importance of fundamental religious work in the home until the Protestant Church takes a lesson from the Roman Catholic, and claims every child of Christian parentage as an actual, not possible, member—to be watched over and kept in the fold, not lost and then brought back. As well abandon your child to indulge appetites, form habits, and establish associations that will plunge him in physical ruin, and then turn him over to the physicians for possible healing and redemption, as miss the chance of laying the foundation-stones of character in the home, and trust to some chance revivalist to do by and by your work for you.

NO REST AT HOME.—No woman can rest thoroughly in her own home with her work ever before her eyes; involuntarily she carries the details of baking and brewing in her mind, and in consequence is nearly as tired as if she actually did the work. Let her go away to rest even if to a place not as comfortable as home, where she can eat a dinner she did not cook, sleep in a bed she did not make and forget her weariness in other people's cares and pleasures. Thousands of bottles of patent medicine are swallowed by home-keeping women who had much better have spent the same money in car fare, in sight-seeing. To get away from herself is the main wish of the nervous, tired-out woman. To see how other people live suggests new ways of doing things and makes one contented with much that before seemed irksome.—New England Farmer.

COLLEGE.

THE 53D ANNUAL SESSION
WILL BEGIN
SEPTEMBER 5, 1889.

The last session was one of the best in the long and useful history of the College. The order and general behavior of students was excellent; moral and religious influences strong, and admirable progress generally was made in studies.

GYMNASIUM and WM. MORROW SCIENCE HALL are finished and beautiful additions to the already lovely grounds.

Work of rebuilding the burnt "BYARS HOUSE" is in progress, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

The new SOCIETY HALLS will be commodious and elegant.

In addition to subjects heretofore embraced in the courses, thorough practical instruction will be given in Analytical Chemistry, Determination of Minerals, Assaying, etc.

NO HEALTHIER OR MORE BEAUTIFUL PLACE. NO MALARIA.

No saloons, no occurrences to distract the minds of students, no safer place for boys and young men. Charges very moderate. Every possible arrangement for the encouragement of young men of limited means.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

is the "Ideal" Hair-dressing. It restores the color to gray hair; promotes a fresh and vigorous growth; prevents the formation of dandruff; makes the hair soft and silken; and imparts a delicate but lasting perfume.

"Several months ago my hair commenced falling out, and in a few weeks my head was almost bald. I tried many remedies, but they did no good. I finally bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and, after using only a part of the contents, my head was covered with a new growth of hair. I recommend your preparation as the best in the world."—T. Minnday, Sharon Grove, Ky.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for a number of years, and it has always given entire satisfaction. It is an excellent dressing, prevents the hair from turning gray, insures its vigorous growth, and keeps the scalp white and clean."—Mary A. Jackson, Salem, Mass.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for promoting the growth of the hair, and think it unequaled. For restoring the hair to its original color, and for a dressing, it cannot be surpassed."—Mrs. Geo. Fever, Eaton Rapids, Mich.

"Ayer's Hair Vigor is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair and makes it glossy and soft. The Vigor is the best cure for dandruff."—J. W. Bowen, Editor "Enquirer," McArthur, Ohio.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the past two years, and found it all it is represented to be. It restores the natural color to gray hair, causes the hair to grow freely, and keeps it soft and pliant."—Mrs. M. V. Day, Cohoes, N. Y.

"My father, at about the age of fifty, lost all the hair from the top of his head. After one month's trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor the hair began coming, and, in three months, he had a fine growth of hair of the natural color."—P. J. Cullen, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

BARNES—Our beloved sister, JANE A. BARNES, wife of A. Y. Barnes, fell asleep in Jesus at her home, Suggsville, Ala., on the night of July 19, 1889.

"A home was darkened, and deep sorrow fell
On many loving hearts, when she, the best
And dearest one of the home circle, left
This troubled world for realms of blissful rest;
Passed from their clinging arm and loving sight,
Into that blessed land where there shall be no night."

She was the youngest child of Sam and Mary A. McColl; born at Monroeville, Monroe county, August 1, 1836. She came to Suggsville when quite a young girl; passed here her happy school and girlhood days; married, and adopted it as her home for life. She was always bright, lovely, and winning in the dear old home; a favorite with all. In all the relations of life a lovely example; and her memory will long be cherished by her relatives and a host of friends. But her strength of character was chiefly developed in the faithful performance of duty as a wife and mother. Her husband and children will certainly rise up and call her blessed. They can never forget her unselfish devotion for their welfare. In failing health for many months, she was always gentle and patient, and, until near the close of her life, cheerful and hopeful of recovery. She was reared in the Presbyterian Church; but, having her lot cast with the Methodist Church, she united with it, and died a consistent member. When near her last moments, her pastor (Rev. T. S. Abernethy) asked her if she could say, "Thy will be done." Although she had not been able to speak audibly for several days, she repeated loud enough to be heard by all, "Thy will be done." The Spirit softly whispered, "Rest thou in peace," and another jewel was brought home to the beautiful courts of heaven. M. I. P.

Clark county papers will please copy.

MILLSAPS—Mrs. MARY MAGEE MILLSAPS died at home, near Hermannville, Miss., July 3, 1889. She was the daughter of Mr. I. G. Magee, of Lincoln county, and was known throughout our country as Miss Mary Magee. This faithful young woman, taken away so suddenly in the prime of her life, was born in Covington county, of this State, and, therefore, lacked just a little of being 29 years of age. On September 2, 1878, she professed her faith in Christ, and united with the Bensalem Presbyterian Church. On November 19, 1885, she was married to Mr. J. D. Millsaps, who is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. With this church it was her intention to unite; but all her plans for her family and her church were cut short by the hand of death. She attended to her domestic duties on the morning of July 2. On the following morning, before day, God had called her away. Congestion, as an angel of God, loosened the cords of her life, and in one short day she passed away.

Mrs. Millsaps was the one sister of her family, and around her five brothers wove their affection. As the centre of this group, she let her light shine from day to day; and when the sphere of her usefulness was enlarged, and she became the wife of our friend, Mr. Dove Millsaps, she met the fondest expectations of her husband in being a devoted and lovable wife. A "good" woman implies devotion in all the relations of life; and Mrs. Millsaps receives from those who knew her best, testimony to her devotedness as daughter, sister, wife and mother.

We can not understand the mystery of the providence that takes away the young wife and mother from the home, and leaves behind the husband and child in orphanage and tears. Let it suffice to say, that God rules the world, and he is our Father. It takes the darkness of night to reveal to our gaze the stars of heaven.

May this sad providence reveal to the stricken hearts of those that are left behind, beauties and glories such as will enable them to say, "All is well!" C. W. G.

YOUNG—At Laurel Grove Plantation, East Baton Rouge, La., August 21, 1889, NETTIE LEE MONTAN, wife of Dr. E. A. S. Young.

Our community received the tidings of the death of this estimable lady with heavy hearts, indeed, and everyone seemed desirous of performing some act as a token of affection for the deceased and consolation for the living. Amiable and unassuming at all times, and in all places devoted to her husband, loving and affectionate to her mother, sisters and relatives, and true and generous to her friends—she was regarded by all who knew her as one who had few equals and no superiors. Weep not for "Nettie;" disturb her not in her calm sleep.

A FRIEND.

MILLER—Little SORINTHA NORMAN MILLER, our sweet little babe of six months, died with a congestive chill. Thus in less than three months we have buried three of our precious children. "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord!" Pray for us in our affliction. A. D. MILLER.

DUBELL.—Little EDGAR CLARENCE, born September 5, 1880, and died August 8, 1889, aged 8 years, 11 months and 3 days.

He realized his condition. He said: "I am going to God that I have prayed so much to. Papa, pray; I am too weak." As soon as his papa rose from his knees, he kissed his weeping mother and sisters good-by; a farewell look at his infant sister, and placed his arms around his papa's neck, and silently passed away. It seems that God imprinted a kiss of peace. His little arms removed; upon his face rested a heavenly smile. The writer never knew a more prayerful child—along the road, in the field, and often led in family prayer. His childish voice was heard amid the congregation, singing praises unto our Lord who has taken the little cripple, doubtless, from the evils to come, and never again will he suffer under the hand of disease. Indulgent father and loving mother, grieve not, nor seek no more his little footprints to weep over. Our hearts are made sad by thine affliction. Be comforted. Earth has no sorrow that heaven can not heal. Like as a father pitieth his children, so pitieth the Lord. L. H. SWAYZE.

PLANCO—Miss MATTIE F. PLANCO was born near Booneville, Miss., in October, 1853, and died in Okolona, Miss., September 9, 1889. When about fourteen years of age, she joined the Methodist Church near Booneville, under the ministry of Rev. J. W. Hannoll. From that early age until her death she maintained a Christian life. As a dutiful and loving daughter, she was the stay and comfort of her widowed mother, and to the members of the household. Her aged mother, in widowhood, with other relatives, mourn her loss; but they sorrow not as those who have no hope. They are comforted in this sore bereavement with the hope that the departed loved one fell on sleep in the hope of the resurrection morning. She was a kind friend, and attentive, as far as lay in her power, to the wants of others. On a beautiful September day, as the sun was sinking low in the west, we laid her to rest in the Odd Fellows' Cemetery, in the suburbs of Okolona.

T. C. WIER.

JOHNSON—Death came to the home of Bro. and Sister N. K. Johnson, August 22, 1889, and took away their pet, little JENNIE, who was born February 5, 1885. It was so sad because she was the only girl, and her sweet little life was so bright that she shed the sunlight of joy and happiness everywhere she went. She was so cheerful that even the colored people always smiled when Jennie came about them, and no one could know her without loving her. She was a sweet little bud which was born to bloom in God's eternal flower garden forever. Her mission was a short one, but it is finished. Earth is poorer, but heaven is richer. The grandmother felt that she had lost her pet, and all who knew her felt that a sweet little girl has gone to heaven. May God's grace sustain father and mother, and may they meet the dear little ones who have gone before! T. W. LEWIS.

PAGE—NEWLAND, son of J. A. and E. J. Page, was born September 16, 1886, and died August 18, 1889, near Hazlehurst, Copiah county, Miss.

God does all things well. We can not understand why one is taken and another left. These things are hidden from us. But, then, we do know that our Savior said: "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven." He wanted little Newland, and he only claimed his own. May the father and mother take comfort in the fact that their precious child is where sickness and sorrow are no more! God grant that they may have the faith of David, and so live that when this life ends they can meet their babe that has gone before.

M. L. BURTON.

RILEY—Departed this life, August 9, 1889, my beloved grandson, JAMES HOWARD RILEY. Next to my little Helen, who left me last September, he was the dearest of my grandchildren; always glad to see me, and never wanting me to leave to return home. His mother had gone before; but he leaves a father, an own brother, and three half-sisters to mourn his loss, besides uncles, aunts and cousins. He was a true-hearted, catholic Christian. He was 13 years, 5 months and 9 days old. I hope to meet him soon in heaven. H. A. CURRIE.

MIMMS—RICHARD THOMAS MIMMS, son of J. and M. J. Mimms, was born December 25, 1887, and died July 8, 1889, aged one year, six months and seven days. Richard came into this world on the day of the month in which the Lord came, and, like "the Star of Bethlehem," he was a bright, beautiful and loving child, and did fair to be a useful man; but the Lord hath need of him to join the little angels in heaven. May the Holy Spirit comfort the bereaved hearts!

R. L. ELY, P. C.

SHEFFIELD—DEWITT TALMAGE, son of J. W. and Emma Sheffield, of Holly Grove, Franklin parish, La., died August 8, 1889, aged two years, seven months. Another sweet little bud of promise, just as it began to unfold its beautiful and sweet life, was nipped by the destroying worm of death, so that e'en in blooming it withered and died. C. A. SWAYZE.

You may sing of the beauty of springtime
That glows on the cheek of the young,
But I sing of a beauty that's rarer
Than any of which you have sung.
The beauty that's seen in the faces
Of women whose summer is o'er,
The autumn-like beauty that charms us
Far more than the beauty of yore.

But this beauty is seen too rarely. The faces of most women lose the beauty of youth too soon. Female disorders are like frosts which come to nip the flowers which betoken good health, without which there can be no real beauty. If our American women would fortify themselves against the approach of the terrible disorders so prevalent among them, by using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, their good looks would be retained to a "sweet old age." This remedy is a guaranteed cure for all the distressing weaknesses and derangements peculiar to women.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets, one a dose. Cure headache, constipation and indigestion.

The Weems Railway.

AN ELECTRIC MOTOR CAR THAT MAKES 180 MILES AN HOUR.

The Weems railway system, incorporated under the name of the Electro-Automatic Transit Company, of Baltimore, after about a year of carefully conducted and conclusive experiments has patented its appliances in the United States and all over the world as a preliminary to putting the system regularly to work wherever required. By this electro-automatic arrangement the morning papers may be delivered for the breakfast table and the evening papers before supper-time at distant points. It will deliver letters almost with the promptitude of the telegraph sending a message. The mails between New York and Omaha will be carried in a night. It will handle perishable light freight from long distances, will deliver with celerity the mails and parcels in cities and suburban towns, and will multiply many times the business of the postoffice and express companies. Its advantages are not alone in its speed, but in the economy and frequency with which trains can be despatched.

The motor car is 18 feet long and 2½ feet square at each end. The road is to be built on the surface of the ground, with track of 24-inch gauge, and will cost about $5,000 per mile. In thickly settled districts the road can be elevated, the varied length of the uprights being a cheap mode of covering irregularities in the surface of the ground over which the road passes. The mail and express cars are telescoped in forming a train, the former into the end of the motor car, and the latter into that of the one preceding it, forming a flexible train of cars, offering an unbroken surface to the air. The motor may pull one car or a train of cars.

All trains will be controlled from a generating station, where will be placed an electrical generating plant. Electrical brakes are to be used, and trains are started, stopped, speed lessened and backed at will from the station. Special appliances will inform the operator in charge of the generating station of the exact location of the train from the time it leaves or passes any given point until it reaches its destination. It has not yet been determined how far apart the generating stations shall be placed. Possibly one hundred miles may not be out of range, as the current can be run for fifty miles each way from the station as a centre without much loss of electricity.

A series of experiments have been made at Laurel, Md., to show what the Weems railway system will do. At this experiment station two miles per minute are made around a heavy curve, or the equivalent of 180 miles an hour, or three miles a minute on a level track. Prior to the inauguration of this system twenty miles per hour was the fastest time ever made by any kind of electrical railroad travel.

A visitor to this experiment station sees many things to surprise him. There are no extensive works, and the motor car when it comes out from under its shed, in obedience to the will of the engineer in the distant plant building, moves deliberately, slowly and with absence of all sound. This cigar-shaped car, painted a bright red and moving sharp end foremost, at sight does not seem a wonderful thing as it goes quietly along the track, but later, when the engineer at the dynamo puts on more power, or as a steam-car man would say, more steam, and the creeping thing on the ground hastens its movement until it fairly flies, and becomes a moving speck of red, spectators feel the progress being made in applied science and talk of the wonders of electricity, and the great things it will accomplish in the active affairs of life in the near future.

Arrangements are now being made for the building of an extended road between distant cities.—Witness.

The longest purse that ever was made has a bottom to it unless, indeed, it be lined with Franklin's maxims.—Joel Chandler Harris.

If you are suffering from Malaria, ask your druggist for Shallenberger's Antidote for Malaria. If he don't have it, and tells you he has something just as good, don't believe him, but send one dollar to Dr. A. T. Shallenberger, Rochester, Penn'a, and get the Antidote by mail. A few doses will restore you to perfect health. The Medicine is in the form of pills, but is not a purgative. It not only destroys Malaria, but is an excellent tonic.

We publish the following extracts from the United States postal laws for the benefit of the postmaster:

1. A postmaster is not required by any regulation of the Postoffice Department to open his office on Sunday, when no mail arrives after the closing of the office on Saturday night, and before six P. M. on Sunday.

13. It is not the business of postmasters to answer inquiries made of them regarding the private business of their patrons; nor must they disclose information obtained by them in the discharge of their official duties.

14. A postoffice should be kept free from anything obnoxious or offensive to its patrons; hence, a postmaster has the right to prohibit smoking in his office.

Mr. P. D. D. Delacroix, Cypremort P. O., La., Nov. 30, 1888, says: "Three years ago an agent representing Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar came into my store. Being busy, was unable to give him any time. Before leaving he gave me a sample bottle of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, asking me to give it to anyone suffering with a cough or cold. Several days afterward I caught a heavy cold. Remembering the sample, thought I would try it. Six teaspoonfuls cured me. Ordered a supply at once, and have sold it with satisfaction to all. It acts like magic on all my family, and I would not be without it. I take pleasure in recommending it at all times." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

This is the most fearful characteristic of vice: its irresistible fascination—the ease with which it sweeps away resolution, and wins a man to forget his momentary outlook, his throb of penitence, in the embrace of indulgence.—E. H. Chapin.

Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Cholera, &c.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Corporal Tanner, Commissioner of Pensions, has resigned his position. This action has been brought about by the extravagant policy pursued in the administration of the Pension Bureau.

A storm off the Atlantic coast, last week, caused much damage. Heavy losses occured among the shipping off the Delaware coast. At Atlantic City the visitors and residents have had terrible experiences. Two railroad trains loaded with hundreds, in attempting to leave the place, were nearly wrecked.

Congressman S. S. Cox, of New York, was buried on September 13. Thousands of messages of condolence were sent to Mrs. Cox. The funeral sevices were conducted by the Rev. W. H. Milburn, the chaplain of the House.

The National Greenback Convention was opened in Cincinnati on September 12

One hundred and fifty-four Mormons have arrived in New York from Europe. About half of them were women. They proceeded at once to Utah.

The fifty American workingmen and women who went to Europe last July to investigate the condition of the European workmen returned on September 12. The manager of the party, in an interview, said: "They (the European workmen) are not to be compared to ours. Almost every trade was represented in our party, and they examined carefully the products and machinery of the old country. It was observed that machinery was cumbersome and lacked the completeness that is seen in our country. We have had a remarkable success from the time we started. We were met everywhere with courtesy and treated in the best possible manner." It was found that wages were 33 per cent. lower than in this country.

The Shoro Line Railway bridge at New London, Conn., which was swung into place a few days ago, is said to be the largest swing span drawbridge in the world. It is 1422 feet long, is built of solid steel and weighs nearly 2,500,000 pounds. The best engineering skill of the country was employed in constructing this great piece of work.

A large number of prominent people of other countries, both lay and ecclesiastical, have been invited to attend the sessions of the coming American Catholic Congress at Baltimore, November 11 and 12.

Gen. B. F. Butler is to write a history of the United States from Independence times down to the end of the reconstruction period.

The Secretary of State has sent instructions to the delegates on the part of the United States to the International Congress to meet him on October 1.

A statue of Gen. Grant was unveiled at Ft. Leavenworth, Kan., on September 14.

The resolutions and memorial adopted by the convention on the improvement of the Western waterways, held recently in Cincinnati, were, on September 14, presented to the President by a delegation. The President declared himself in favor of improved navigation, but opposed to government aid for building levees.

A disastrous fire occurred in Louisville, Ky., on September 15. Five firemen were killed by falling walls.

FOREIGN.

Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer, is expected to reach the eastern sea coast about the end of October.

Mr. Thomas A. Edison, before his departure for Berlin, gave 10,000 francs for the benefit of the poor of Paris.

The Vatican will publish the correspondence of Pope Pius IX. with Napoleon III. and the Prussian government in 1870 with reference to the Italian occupation of Rome.

There are rumors from various quarters that a large number of nihilists have recently arrived in Denmark. In consequence of these reports the authorities are taking extraordinary precautions for the protection of the Czar during his coming visit to Copenhagen.

Count Herbert Bismarck, during his supposed sojourn in England, secretly went to Pieve de Cardonre, Italy, where he had an interview with Signor Crispi. He had three meetings with the Italian prime minister, who was very private in his movements. The interviews related to the projected meeting of Emperor William, the Emperor of Austria and the King of Italy at Naples, and the relations between Italy and the Vatican.

According to the present arrangements, on his visit to Potsdam, the Czar is determined to avoid all reference to the political situation. Neither M. de Giers nor any other minister of his political cabinet will accompany him. His suite will be composed solely of military officers. Prince Bismarck is credited with aiming to obtain an interview similar to the historic conference of November, 1887.

The attendance at the Paris Exposition last week averaged 150,000 daily.

As a result of the Antwerp disaster the French Cabinet proposes the adoption of stringent regulations for the storing of explosives. No gunpowder will be allowed to remain in ports more than twenty-four hours without special authority.

The hearty reception given to Emperor William at Hanover has been a gratifying surprise, as showing the extinction of the anti-Prussian party with the popular growth of a German national sentiment.

The great strike in London is practically over.

The latest advices from Samoa are that Malietoa was quietly restored to power and that he and Mataafa have gone to the island of Manono, where they will remain until the decisions of the Berlin Conference have been confirmed.

A scheme is announced for the construction of a ship canal between Edinburgh and Glasgow. The capital is placed at £7,000,000.

THOSE disgusting Skin Eruptions will quickly disappear if La-cu-pi-a is used.

LIKE the sunlight and the air, Dr. Hartman's "Ills of Life" is both free and invaluable.

PERUNA THE THING TO TAKE FOR NEURALGIA

When Neuralgia of the face got its clutches on Mrs. E. Konner, of New Orleans, she thought her doom had come. From night till night, from night till morn, she knew no sleep, no rest—nothing but one continuous racking, tearing, burning pain. Eminent doctors tried in vain to give her relief. She was not PE-RU-NA finally been prescribed. She felt that PE-RU-NA would do the work, and it did. PE-RU-NA banished all her pain, and she is now perfectly well. Dr. Hartman's "Ills of Life" sent free by the Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio, will give further evidence of what PE-RU-NA can do. PE-RU-NA is for sale by all druggists—$1 a bottle; 3 for $5. I CLIMB TO REST.

BY LUCY LARCOM.

Still must I climb, if I would rest.
The bird soars upward to his nest;
The young leaf, on the tree-top high,
Cradles itself within the sky.

The streams, that seem to hasten down,
Return in clouds the hills to crown;
The plant arises from her root,
To rock aloft her flower and fruit.

I can not in the valley stay;
The great horizons stretch away.
The very cliffs that wall me round
Are ladders unto higher ground.

To work, to rest—for each a time.
I toil, but I must also climb.
What soul was ever quite at ease,
Shut in by earthly boundaries?

I am not glad till I have known
Life that can lift me from my own.
A loftier level must be won,
A mightier strength to lean upon.

And heaven draws near as I ascend;
The breeze invites, the stars befriend;
All things are beckoning to the Best;
I climb to thee, my God, for rest!

A Georgia Jeremiah.

BY "BARNABAS."

The next letter is more characteristic of a "weeping prophet." It is written from that Mecca of Methodism in the Southwest, Judge McGehee's, near Woodville, Miss., and dated December 29, 1813.

"Dear Winans: Have you a soul capable of pitying a friend meeting with repeated disappointments? Have you a heart to sympathize with one sinking under a weight of difficulties? Have you tears to shed for a friend wading through accumulated sorrows? Now prepare to let that sympathy flow in floods of tears, while I delineate my situation."

The causes of this outburst of lamentation are two in number: the first imaginary, let us hope; the last very real and sad.

Among his correspondents in Georgia, at least one, it seems, is of the gentler sex, and hence arises trouble number one. Alluding to a recent letter from him, this correspondent says: "I know not what you mean by saying you don't know when you will see Georgia again. I have been looking forward with inconceivable joy as the year drew near its close. But do you not intend to come and see us? If not, let me know, so that I may fortify myself to bear it as a Christian."

"Winans, what can she mean by fortifying herself to bear it?" breaks in the perplexed and almost conscience-stricken Lewis. "You know it don't take much fortitude to bear my absence, though it often takes considerable to bear my presence."

After an interval of seventy-six years we must repeat the query with equal hopelessness of an answer, "What can she mean?" Is it possible that some wild Georgia girl is playing upon the feelings of the sober and susceptible young preacher? Or has the preacher himself in former times unguardedly suggested the joys of an earthly paradise while portraying those of the heavenly? And was this the same correspondent who wrote the former letter from Georgia, "filled with consolation?" It may detract somewhat from the traditional asceticism of our subject to connect him with the possible romance; but it certainly brings him nearer to us, and makes him more like a real personage.

The letter continues, after some recount of "a large bout among my friends, from Clark's Creek to the plains:" "I have tried to pry deeper into human nature recently than I ever did before, and to mark the emotions of my own mind and their causes." This in general, and then adverting once more to the former cause of disquiet: "I find that when I keep at a distance from them (the fair sex), the young zephyrs of love play around my heart; but when I come into closer contact, they fold their heavenly wings, and sit mournful and melancholy at a distance, brooding. Then I measure my steps back to my former position. * * * The company of a young lady that costs nothing is worth nothing. Winans, be prudent, live holy, and walk straight." Excellent advice in this connection, and significant also, coming from one whose sad countenance and greater nearness, by more than two generations, to the times of Wesley and the fathers might argue exemption to a great degree from some of the anti-matrimonial perplexities of the modern young preacher.

"I expect a glorious resurrection will take place in Natchez circuit. Bro. Kemp says that Mr. Discipline is dead, and his funeral has been preached so long that the people have forgotten the text." * * *. "I spent Christmas at Judge McGehee's, who, with his family, wishes to be remembered to you. I approve your plan in taking a school, as you will not be burdened with money."

A great and real sorrow comes with the post-script, which reads as follows: "Yesterday I preached the funeral of Sister Simpson, and this morning I had a dreadful hemorrhage from my lungs. Winans, I am gone! I am gone! I can't preach. * * * I hope you will excuse this incoherent letter. Indeed, I am ashamed of it, when there are so many important things upon which I might have written: Zion, languishing in the wilderness; our country bleeding from a thousand veins; our important position as embassadors of heaven, as legates of the skies! * * * Tell all my friends farewell, a long farewell, but not eternal; only till we meet in glory. I have thought of going to the States in the spring. I dread the thought of being a nuisance to society. Adieu, my dearest friend in Jesus.

LEWIS HOBBS."

February 17, 1814, he writes from Mr. Rouch's, at Pine Ridge, near Washington, Adams county, to "Dear Winans," in New Orleans, who, answering the last sad epistle, ridicules the idea that the fair Georgia correspondent is in earnest, and tenderly sympathizes with and encourages his afflicted friend, in view of the incurable physical malady from which he suffered. L. H. again expatiates upon the subject of women, who seems to be an ever-recurring mystery to him, quaintly concluding in these words: "I love to see them imitate the sun, who, with his centripetal power, draws all to him; yet, by his centrifugal power, keeps all at a proper distance." Further on he deplores again the sad condition of Zion, which, he says, "bleeds in the hands of political preachers, who thirst for popularity and the honor of the world. And so you have become a great author," referring, probably, to some publications of W. W. in the city papers. "Take care that you do not set the town on fire."

"If I can get money to carry me through to the States, and my health will admit, I expect to start in four or five weeks. * * * I don't know what I shall do for money to take me home, where I may die in peace; but I will trust the goodness of God. Yes, though he slay me by afflictions, and my brethren slight me, yet will I trust him * * * and love them. I came to this country on my own money; but, alas! whose am I to go back on? I no more expect to see you this side of the mournful grave and silent tomb; and, perhaps, this is my last letter."

No, not the last; for he writes from Natchez, March 12, 1814:

"Dear Winans: * * * I have just now received yours of February 25, which excited more emotions in my mind than all the rest. While my eyes ran over the lines, some things crept into my heart and swelled my bosom till my tearful eyes poured down the briny drops. I don't know whether it was for joy or sorrow. * * * I was sorry since you thought you had wounded my feelings; but glad to receive the cordial of friendship in sympathy for me in my sufferings. * * * Your generous sont mourns over my poverty, and, with a kind of holy indignation, attributes it to the ingratitude and injustice of my brethren. No, my brother; God forbid that I should accuse my brethren. Let my face be covered with blushes, and let me sink into oblivion, before I indulge such an idea; because I am the least of all, and not worthy of what I receive. My dear brother, I fear I have wounded your feelings in my plain manner of speaking, concerning political preachers and seeking after popularity. You say that I implied in some of my statements that you were such an one. If I did, I am sorry for it. I only intended to call your mind to the past, knowing that you were an aspiring young man, and that you were not so holy but that the devil would tempt you. * * * I have been at Bros. Newman's, Vick's, Marble's, McCallister's, Baker's, Sims', Sister Gibson's, etc. * * * I spent a very happy day with Martha G., conversing on religion, friendship, benevolence, matrimony, etc. * * * It appears that the young people are contrary; they won't get religion till they get married, and they won't marry because they can't get them they want. So, I fear the devil will get them all at last. * * * As for me, my afflictions * * * have no mercy upon my shattered body. * * * The doctor says I have consumption, and that next fall or winter will determine my fate. I am drawing near to my dissolution. Merciful Savior! why do I feel this trepidation of soul? * * * I stand on the verge and tremble, and dread to go. The worst or the best of men may say what they will; yet dying is a serious thing. O my dear brother, pray for me, that I may pass through the vale without a doubt! I expect in four weeks to start through to the States. To-morrow I set out to Judge McGehee's, to bid a final adieu to Wilkinson circuit. * * * You ask if I have any money. Yes, I have a little; and if I had but five dollars, I should start. * * * Suffer me, like a child, to say I love you. Adieu in Jesus. LEWIS HOBBS."

And, again, from Bro. William Foster's, near Natchez, March 25, 1814:

"My Dear Brother: Your welcome letter of the fourteenth came safe to hand last evening. * * * I should be glad to go in the steamboat, on account of my weakness; for riding from Bro. McGehee's, which is only twenty-five miles, so exhausted me, and gave me such a pain in my side, that I could not sleep last night but little. But I am not able to procure a passage for myself in the steamboat. As to the benevolence of Mr. Paulding, I am a thousand times obliged to him for his tender and anxious solicitude for my health and safe passage; but as for his procuring it for me, or even reducing it to a price which I should be able to pay, I can't * * * receive it from a man to whom I am already much indebted for his kindness to me when a stranger. Dear Winans, my feelings are not much refined; but they are too tender to impose on my friends. * * * I will ask you to give my compliments to Mr. Paulding, * * * but must decline to receive such a favor. * * * The South Carolina Conference has appropriated $150 to the preachers in this country, which money Bro. Sellers has in hand to appropriate to the preachers as he shall see proper. I think it possible I shall get a little of that money, which may bear my expenses through by land, if not by water. * * * I know not when I shall set out on my journey; but not under two or three weeks. If I could get a passage in the boat, I could sell my horse. Bro. Cosby would buy him. * * * I think I have written you explicitly as relates to going in the steamboat; that I would be willing to go in it, and be glad; but not at the expense of my feelings by intruding upon the benevolence of my friends. * * * O that our love may increase to Jesus, who first loved us!

"Yours in much love,

"LEWIS HOBBS."

"P. S.—(26th)—I am now at Q. meeting. Bro. Sellers and Bro. Valentine preached for us to-day. We had a good congregation and a good time. I am to have $50 of that money I was speaking of. * * * My desire still increases to go in the steamboat. I know not what to do, for if I delay my passage with the money I have on hand, I should then be in a strange land without money. L. H."

Concerning one person mentioned in this letter, one would like to know more—the Mr. Paulding who formerly befriended, and was yet ready to aid the needy itinerant in this far-off land. We are left to conjecture as to his place of residence—though it seems to have been New Orleans—and his relation to the church of Christ; whether a man of the world, or a member of some other church. In either character, his kindness is worthy of record as a small, yet appreciable factor in the spread of Protestantism in the Southwest.

The Missouri Conference.

BY M. H. CHAPMAN, D. D.

The Missouri Conference closed a very delightful and harmonious session last night at Palmyra. It is the fourth time in its history that Palmyra has entertained the Conference, and many very precious memories cluster around the place. The church is the oldest in the Conference, although it has been recently renovated and greatly improved. The citizens entertained us with generous hospitality, and the session was characterized by an unusual degree of religious interest. A sunrise prayer meeting every morning was largely attended, and prominence was given to preaching and religious services. We have a grand Conference, and the church within our bounds is growing in numbers and influence. Progress was reported at every point, and several advanced steps were taken looking to the enlargement and development of the work. Six promising young men were admitted on trial, two were readmitted, and several were received by transfer. Three had died during the year—H. B. Watson, H. H. Craig and Alexander Spencer. Among those received on trial was Fielding Marvin, son of Bishop Marvin, who is a young man of much promise, and who gives indications of great usefulness in the church.

The following compose the General Conference delegation: Clerical—J. H. Pritchett, J. D. Hammond, John Anderson, W. W. McMurry, C. I. VanDeventer. Lay—T. D. Woodson, J. N. Baskett, A. B. Miller, N. P. Ogden, Thomas Shackleford. Clerical alternates—E. K. Miller and J. M. O'Brien. Lay alternates—W. G. Miller and W. O. Gray.

It is rather singular that not a single clerical member of the delegation of four years ago is eligible this time. W. M. Rush is dead, E. R. Hendrix is Bishop, W. G. Miller is in the Little Rock Conference, and your correspondent is ineligible because of his location three years ago, when he made his trip around the world. The present delegation is a strong one, and will command the respect of the highest council of the church.

A ringing report on temperance, which gave forth no uncertain sound, was unanimously passed, showing that our Conference is sound on this question. Among other papers adopted was a memorial to the General Conference, asking for the establishment of a weekly missionary paper. That such a paper is greatly needed to disseminate fresh missionary intelligence throughout the church, and keep our people abreast of the great evangelistic movements of the age, admits of no question. There is no other one thing which would so greatly stimulate the missionary zeal of the church and awaken interest along this most important line.

The report of the Rev. C. I. Van Deventer, agent for our Conference Trust Fund, was most gratifying, and showed that during the year he had collected and received subscriptions and bequests for this important interest amounting to $14,000, which bring the fund to over $22,000. The interest on this, with the amount which is received annually from the St. Louis Christian Advocate, and with the additional amount received from the Publishing House under the operation of the sixth restrictive rule, we hope to be able to make, after a while, proper provision for our honored superannuated preachers and the widows and orphans of our deceased preachers.

Five reports were received from our schools, all of which are in a flourishing condition. Central College has opened with 145 matriculates, and Howard Female College with 157, forty-seven of whom are boarders. Presidents Hammond and Groves are succeeding admirably in their respective fields, and the Conference passed a resolution endorsing the action of the Boards calling for $25,000 for additional buildings for each of these institutions. An agent will be appointed to raise the sum for Central, while President Groves was appointed financial agent for Howard. The buildings are greatly needed, and I have little question but that they will be erected during the coming year.

The membership of the Conference was reported to be 35,232, a gain of 1,051 over last year. There was raised for foreign missions $8,435 66, and for domestic missions $1,453 89; total for missions, $12,889 55, an increase of $717 72.

The next session of the Conference will be held at Fayette.

HANNIBAL, Missouri.

Dr. Carradine Sets "Gilderoy" a-Thinking.

"Facts about Entire Sanctification Learned in the School of Experience," by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., set me a-thinking. I began to wonder whether they were facts, or only fancies. The Doctor says: "In my early ministry I was never thrown with a sanctified preacher; nor have I ever heard a sermon on entire sanctification until this year." Is this a fact? Where was the Doctor brought up? On whose ministry has he waited? Surely he was not associated with Methodist preachers in the early years of his ministry. Dr. Carradine has been unfortunate in his surroundings, or else he was dim of vision and dull of hearing. It is no great wonder that a sermon on entire sanctification should so wake him up. It must have been like a revelation from heaven. It is incredible to me how a man could live in this country as long as Dr. Carradine has without seeing many sanctified preachers, and without hearing a half-dozen or more sermons each year on sanctification. Some of us who are not much older than he were brought up on this kind of food, and have been intimately associated with sanctified preachers and laymen, both men and women, all our lives. I am truly glad Dr. Carradine has heard a sermon on sanctification, and that he has been brought into association with sanctified preachers and people. It is rather late; but far better late than never. I am devoutly thankful to God that I have lived where I have heard this doctrine preached in demonstration of the Spirit ever since I could remember, and where I have been intimately associated with people, preachers and laymen who had been made perfect in love in this life.

If the facts be as stated by the Doctor, it is no great wonder that he had a "Pisgah-distance view of this promised life," and that he assumed a promised life of love "with misgivings and qualms of conscience" at the time of his ordination. The wonder is that a tyro in Israel, to say nothing of a master, did not know these things.

The Doctor says: "Perhaps the Bishop himself was disturbed at the questions he asked." Oh! no, Doctor. Perhaps not. Perhaps he was not as ignorant on this subject as yourself. Doubtless, the Bishop had, long before, been made perfect in love. Doubtless, he had preached this doctrine with great unction and power from one end of the land to the other. You assume too much when you put the good Bishop in the same category with yourself. What was a revelation from heaven to you was, I am sure, an old, old story to him. The Bishop had seen hundreds of sanctified preachers, and thousands of sanctified laymen, both men and women, young persons and old ones. He had not been brought up in a corner, in the dark. The good Bishop was accustomed to the light. However, this assumption of ignorance on the subject of sanctification, on the part of other people, is a common mistake of many young converts of only two months' standing. You will come out of all that after you get out of the primer and the spelling-book. You will know more when you get further along. The good Lord and the brethren will, owing to your lack of early advantages, be very gracious to you, and they will help you all they can. If you fall into the error of some, assuming to know it all, of having and holding a monopoly of truth on this subject, of being the only Wesleyan, of being the only orthodox Methodist—your progress in the knowledge of this doctrine will be very slow. This is one of the great dangers that besets mature men who begin to learn what others have known from their youth up. The suddenness of the thing leads them to think they have discovered a new world. This is no new thing. It is an old beaten trail along which men and women have been traveling from the days of Abel down to this time.

I am truly glad, and I congratulate you, my brother, that God sent his servant, Rev. W. W. Hopper, to wake you up, and to bring you to a clear understanding of the doctrine and the experience of salvation from all sin, which some of us learned from our mothers while we were little children about their knees. The old preachers, traveling and local; the class-leaders, exhorters, and the Sunday-school teachers, all united with our mothers in teaching and preaching, and in living the doctrine and life of entire sanctification. Be assured that this is no new thing under the sun. It was your misfortune not to have heard of it, and not to have seen it exemplified. If the Bishop who ordained you is still living, you would do well to visit him, and see how he looks and talks, now that your own eyes and ears have been opened. If he is in heaven, why, that ends the matter, so far as his sanctification is concerned.

Now that your eyes are open, you may take a retrospective of your own life, and see out of what darkness you have come; but it is a mistake for you to undertake a retrospective view of the Bishop who ordained you, and to tell the world where he was. The religious state and condition of the Bishop you could not have learned in the school of experience, and, particularly so, since, according to your own statement, you were not then in that school yourself. I have no doubt but the good Bishop would have been greatly "disturbed" when asking those questions, if he had known what "qualms of conscience" you were having. Indeed, I am inclined to believe he would have deferred your ordination had he known your lack of information. However, "all is well that ends well," and it is all right since you have gone on to perfection, relative perfection, as you then and there promised to do. The church, the Bishop—and—your vow bound you to this. May God bless you, more and more! Yours, GILDEROY.

Centenary College.

MR. EDITOR: I have just received a letter from President Hunnicutt, giving a very encouraging account of Centenary College, which same makes my heart glad and hopeful. He says: "We are educating, to our knowledge, twenty-six young men who are going 'into all the world to preach the gospel.'" "The other seventy-four making one hundred now in attendance, are being trained to carry Christian character and principle into all the departments of human life."

Is Christ's kingdom not enlarging? Is not a good time coming—yea, very near us? Can we look upon such an institution as Centenary, manned by such men as are sailing her, with hearts and heads filled with such holy zeal and Christ-trained intellects, and not be filled with earnest desires that we, too, may and ought to be doing something for Christ and his cause on earth? I have an anchored faith in Centenary. An institution that has survived under such adverse twenty-five years' environment is certainly one of God's "fittest," and by inexorable God-made laws, must grow and attain great proportions. Hope all interested friends will take sides with the old heroine quickly, before it be too late for them to say, "We done it!"

Your friend and brother,

PETER JAMES.

CULTIVATE THE HEROIC.—This is not an age of heroic Christianity. There is more pulp than pluck in the average Christian professor when self-denial is required. The men and women who not only rejoice in doing their duty for Christ, but even rejoice in overcoming uncomfortable obstacles in the doing it, are quite too scarce. The piety that is most needed is a piety that will stand a pinch; a piety that would rather eat an honest crust than fare sumptuously on fraud; a piety that can work up stream against currents; a piety that sets its face like a flint in the strait, narrow road of righteousness. We need more of the Christianity that steadfastly sets its face toward Christ.—Congregational Magazine.

HARVEST.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

We said, when the spring was late,
And the bitter winds were chill,
It were vain in hope to wait
For the leafage on vale and hill.
We were fain to mock at ruthless fate,
And were slow the fields to till.

We thought, when the summer rain,
In floods from the rifted skies,
Was sweeping the upland and the plain,
A-slant before our eyes,
Our labor hard is a waste, and vain
Each needless sacrifice.

But to-day, O fools and blind!
There are purple grapes on the vine,
And the smell of the fruit on the warm south wind
Is sweet as the breath of wine,
And the sheaves the reapers go forth to bind
Are a gift from the hand divine!

We never had need for fear,
We had only need for trust;
Ever our lives to our Lord were dear,
And ever his ways were just;
If our faith had but been strong and clear,
We had scorned the moth and rust

Of our shivering doubt and dread;
Nor all on our way had we met,
With many a time, a drooping head,
And lips for sorrow dumb,
Dear Lord, we are hardly comforted
In thy harvest's splendid sum!

Pardon our trick of grief!
Give us faith to be glad and gay
In the seedtime as in time of the sheaf;
Make us joyful every day.
For alas! alas! our unbelief,
It shames us when we pray.

The Race Problem.

"When Greek meets Greek, then comes the tug of war." In the supplement of New York Christian Advocate, August 22, 1889, there are some quotations, by the Rev. J. D. Walsh, upon the "Educational Race Problem of the South," that demand earnest meditation. He quotes Dr. Haygood as saying: "With reconstruction came to the South the common school, one of the issues of the revolution. * * * So much the South owes to the carpet-bag government. They did not give to the Southern people common schools, but they began them." * * * "The South is beginning to awake to the perils that lie, but partially concealed in the ignorant classes, both white and black, that make up so large a part of our population." In speaking of the negro, Dr. Haygood says: "Counting all the higher schools, whether called universities, colleges, institutes or seminaries, there are about one hundred and fifty able to prepare men and women to teach in the common schools, some of them fitted to do thorough college work. In these institutions, working on small salaries, I have met many times men and women, 'of whom the world is not worthy,' graduates of the foremost schools in America." Somewhat on this line, he quotes Bishop Galloway as saying: "It must be solved with the spelling-book; and the Bible and, too, largely by white teachers of the Southern Methodist Church. It is a travesty on religion, this disposition to canonize missionaries who go to the Dark Continent, while we have nothing but social ostracism for the white teacher who is doing a work no less noble at home. The solution to the race problem rests with the white people who live among the blacks and who are willing to become their teachers in the missionary spirit."

On a very different line, he quotes F. S. Oswald as saying: "Only absolute ignoring of historic analogies can fail to foresee the day when the peril of an Ethiopian marasmus will be obviated by a tierce, but promptly decisive war of races. Before long—perhaps, before the semi-centennial of emancipation—increase of number and of material resources will tempt the beneficiaries of the fifteenth amendment to seal their doom by trying conclusions with the descendants of their former masters; and I will here record the prediction, that within the life time of many of my contemporaries the scenes of the Semiuole war will repeat themselves in the swamps of the Mississippi Valley, and that before the end of the twentieth century Sambo Africanus will have become a sporadic phenomenon anywhere north of the twentieth parallel." He quotes Dr. Leftwich as saying, "that there is no way of settling the race problem but by colonization." Evidently here are great minds differing as widely as the poles. One side is saying, "Education and the Bible are the factors in the solving of this great problem;" the other side, "The sword and colonization." Which is right? It may be both. Evidently education and the Bible are working wonders. There is a better state of affairs now, under these great factors, than there was twenty years ago. Nearly all great revolutions are attended with and wind up with an appeal to the sword. We can only pray that education and the Bible will prevail. Surely here is a problem for Christian statesmen to solve. When such great minds as quoted above differ so widely, certainly there must be grave difficulties in the way. Here is something that every Christian man and woman ought to think and pray about. God can solve, when we get to praying and asking him about it. While waiting for the slow methods of education and Christianity to solve, the devil may plunge the races into war. Let everyone keep a level head and a pure heart.

P. A. JOHNSTON.

FOREST, MISS., August 20, 1889.

Missionary Hints.

MR. EDITOR: Will you allow an old itinerant to make a few suggestions?

And, first, I see an urgent call for money for the missionary. "How can they hear without a preacher?" "And how can they preach except they be sent?" Now, is this sending from the Lord or man? I think it is both, as when one is called at home, he enters not until the church endorses him. And how is it when the world is open to the gospel, and men stand waiting to make the sacrifice, the money can't be raised to send them? "We should suspect ourselves of covetousness," says some one, "if we do not rejoice at opportunities to give." See how anxious people are to invest in the poor Indian's land, and yet for heavenly and eternal treasures we have little heart. Were we alive to God as we should be, we would press us ardently to take stock in missions as once the Parisians pressed to gain a share in Law's great bubble of the Mississippi; the only difference being that in this there is no risk, while all things else will finally end as that great speculation.

Second. But do we not lay too much stress on money? I know it costs to go to Japan, and then sustain one's self while preaching to the heathen; but can't they get there on less than $1,000 and receive the balance as it is needed? What would have been thought of Paul and Silas waiting at Ephesus till the country people sent them a thousand denarii apiece to go on? They went to heathens, too—at least, to pagans and idolaters; and yet they managed to get along, and bring back a good long purse to the poor saints at Jerusalem.

Third. A good brother here don't believe in foreign missions, and others don't believe in home ones. The one says, "Give to the poor heathen;" the other says, "The heathens are at our door." Yes, and we, too, and, perhaps, been heathens still if Gregory and Augustine had thought and acted thus. There's heathen there and heathen here; so let us give to both.

Fourth. The world is open to the gospel, which a long time has been closed to it; yea, not only open, but are crying to us for the bread of life, and we must send it, or guilt will lie at our door. Pagans are turning everywhere from idols. "I saw many heathen temples," says a late traveler, "in decay; but no new ones building;" and the Sultan, the great backbone and pontiff of Mohammedanism, is tottering to his fall. Three hundred years ago, a word spoken in the harem at Constantinople would have made all Europe tremble; now any little Christian state could blot her out but for the jealousy of other Christian nations. Such a time was never witnessed in the world before for missions. The great Euphrates is drying up, and the late little stir in Islam is but the momentary flash before it dies. Buddhism, Confucianism, Brahmanism, and all other pagan systems are dying out; while Christianity, the only live religion, may now take the world. The nations are casting their idols to the "moles and bats." "A nation shall be born in a day." Then, brethren, let us rise to the situation, and if we do not go, let us give freely and liberally to send the gospel to the heathen.

G. T. VICKERS.

For the information of our correspondent, and all others, we state that the thousand dollars which the ADVOCATE's readers are contributing for the Japan missionary are not merely to take him to Japan, but to support him a year in that country. So send on your ones and fives and tens, remembering that you are contributing to sustain the gospel for one year among a people hungry for the truth and actually crying for it.—EDITOR.

Two Days of Prayer.

At its last meeting, the Board appointed September 29 and 30 as two days of prayer, on which we ask the entire church to join us in praying to God for a special blessing upon our work. We trust the auxiliaries of this department will strictly observe these days of prayer, holding special meetings, making fervent prayers that God will own and bless our efforts to advance his holy cause. We hope they will. Preparatory to these days of prayer endeavor to bring back old members of the societies, enlist new ones, and collect back dues, that they may be forwarded as soon as possible. We ask that our sisters everywhere will pray with us for the success of this work; that they will regard September 29 and 30, not only as days of prayer, but also of work, and will endeavor to organize auxiliaries to the Woman's Department of Church Extension. To be prepared for this, write to the Conference secretary for copies of our constitution and leaflets, that you may learn the full meaning of our plan of work. Taking the words, "church extension," in their spiritual and only true sense, we labor for the extension of the kingdom of God in our midst. We most earnestly beg that each and every minister in our connection will, on September 29, pray for and present the work of our society to his congregation. Trustfully we beseech the Lord God that he will raise up some one in each congregation who will take this work upon her heart. We ask that all and each one who unites with us will pray definitely that there may be such a rapid increase in the number of our auxiliaries and of funds coming into the hands of the Board, that we may see his power, and all may know "this is of God." In his name, whose life and death revealed to us our royal Father's love, we lay upon your hearts our requests for your prayers and your help.

Verona and the Male College.

As a place for the location of the Mississippi Methodist Male College, Verona has claims to eligibility of a superior character. What are its claims? While not in the geographical center of the State, it is yet easily accessible to every part of the State. Verona is in Lee county, on the Mobile and Ohio railroad, about sixty miles from the northern boundary of the State, and about twenty-five miles from the eastern boundary. Crossing the Mobile and Ohio railroad, at points below and above, are other roads which bring Verona into ready connection with the railway system of the State and country. It is near the head of the prairie belt, and is surrounded by an excellent farming country, adapted to the culture of corn, cotton, clover, millet and stock raising. It is not troubled with a surplus of the colored race—"it is a white man's country." As to sanitary conditions, Verona is one of the healthiest places in North Mississippi, well elevated, and remote from the malarial atmosphere of the Mississippi delta. Considering the smallness of its population, some five or six hundred, the number of persons above fifty years of age, along through sixty, seventy and above eighty years is remarkable. It has long maintained a character for social and moral excellence.

Bishop Galloway felt himself in a genial atmosphere when in the Methodist Church at Verona. During the month of July, last, he presented the cause of Christian education, and in response received a subscription to the college endowment of over five hundred dollars. The citizens of Verona have shown commendable zeal and enthusiasm in regard to the location of the college, and their subscriptions, conditioned upon its location at this place, already run up into the thousands. Let the committee that shall be appointed to locate the college consider carefully the advantages of Verona. And, perhaps, Verona will secure the location. If so, it will be cause and a time for many congratulations.

Indian Mission.

MR. EDITOR: I received this week from Rev. R. F. Witt, of the Mississippi Conference, a registered letter containing $2 on my Indian Mission; $1 from Mrs. Mary McDonald, and $1 from Miss Clara Ratliff, both of Rose Hill, Jasper county, Miss. Will you please add their names to my list, and very much oblige; and allow me through the ADVOCATE to return my hearty thanks to the kind ladies for their assistance in this great work. May the great Head of the church bless them with an hundredfold in this life, and in the world to come eternal life! If the ladies will take hold with me, surely we will succeed. I have several on my list, and hope to have many more. They are "the salt of the earth."

Now, send on your names and amounts, and let us roll up the amount by Conference, and put the missionary to work. You who feel able please join my $5 proposition; and if not, any amount from $1 up will be thankfully received. Think of the poor, perishing Indian at our door, and send me your names and amounts, and pray for the success of the mission.

Woman's Church Extension.

Some local societies have become auxiliaries to the Woman's Department of Church Extension. Including these, eighteen organizations have been reported since February, 1889. Seashore Auxiliary organized July 11, 1889. The officers for the ensuing year are as follows: President, Mrs. L. F. Ware, Pass Christian, Miss.; first vice-president, Mrs. C. Evans, New Orleans, La.; second vice-president, Mrs. C. G. Andrews, Meridian, Miss.; third vice-president, Mrs. Lindsay, Alabama; recording secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Price Williams, Mobile, Ala.; corresponding secretary, Mrs. T. S. West. All members who have not paid their dues will please send to Mrs. Price Williams, Mobile, Ala., who will forward to the treasurers of the respective Conferences.

SPRING RIDGE CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: We have just closed our fourth protracted meeting on Spring Ridge circuit, and report, as the result, forty-five accessions, thirteen adults and two children baptized, and a gracious revival of spiritual life in the church, many of the brethren pledging themselves to erect family altars. In these meetings valuable services were rendered by Bros. C. A. Powell, M. L. Burton, H. R. Singleton, a local brother from Jackson, and Mr. Snider, a Baptist brother. The preaching of these brethren was with power and demonstration, to the edification of saint and sinner. The triumph of the gospel was signally manifest in Byram, which was considered by all as a hard place. Beginning the meeting there Saturday night before the fourth Sabbath in August, Bro. Burton came to our rescue Monday evening. The Baptist brethren came and united with us in the contest against sin and Satan. We continued the meeting until Thursday night. Christians rejoiced together irrespective of creed; sinners convicted, and thirty-two cast their lot with us. The people say there never has been such a revival at Byram before, and we attribute it largely to the fact that Christians of different creeds laid aside their minor differences and united heart and hand in a battle for salvation. The same spirit was manifest at Forest Hill, and a stranger coming in could not have told the difference between a Baptist and a Methodist. God be praised for Christian unity, and for the gracious outpouring of his Spirit upon the people of Spring Ridge circuit!

MCOMB CITY, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We have been in our new parsonage at this place for one month, and are much pleased with it. It is large, commodious, well finished, neatly painted, comfortably furnished, and admirably located. How different from the bleak December day when we came to this charge homeless! Too much can not be said of the committee who have so diligently and faithfully pushed this work to completion.

Our church here is prosperous. We have had forty-four accessions to it to date, many of them heads of families, old men, soundly converted, praying in their families and lending the prayer meetings.

We had Bros. Anders and Roberts with us in May, and they did a fine work.

Later the District Conference convened here, and proved a great blessing to our community. It was the most profitable session that I ever witnessed.

Joe Jones has also been with us, and gone and left a furore in his track—some praising, and others cursing him. He did some good to outsiders; but the church, upon the whole, was not benefited.

In consequence of the building of our parsonage, finances are somewhat behind; but we hope to have a clean sheet by Annual Conference.

I will write of Magnolia later.

B. S. RAYNER.

P. S.—We are in the midst of a fine revival at Whitestown, a saw-mill suburb of McComb City. B. S. R.

WATER VALLEY CAMP MEETING.

MR. EDITOR: The Water Valley Camp Meeting began on September 6, and closed September 12. Had thirty-five or forty professions, and it was largely attended. Church members revived and many family altars established. We had a profitable, precious time. Hearty thanks to Bros. J. W. Price, T. W. Dye, O. L. Savago, A. B. Fly, McCullough and Mosely for very efficient service. I received an excellent class of eleven, yesterday morning, into Wood Street Church. Have had thirty-seven accessions since Conference. God is with us. Old Father Meaders, a Primitive Baptist preacher, eighty-three years old, died yesterday, and will be buried from our church this evening, Dr. Guess officiating. Father Meaders was a good man; had lived among these people for many years. He deserved their love and had it. Yours, J. M. WYATT.

SEPTEMBER 16, 1889.

ETHEL CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: We closed our last protracted meeting—six in number—on this circuit last Sunday. In all these meetings the Lord was with us in great power. The membership of the church has been greatly revived, and forty-seven promising young persons added thereto. The last of the six meetings—at Liberty Chapel—under all the circumstances was a wonderful victory, and we believe it came in answer to prayer. The church there had been in a lifeless condition for years past; so much so that it had become distressing to a few faithful ones.

The meeting commenced with a good interest to the astonishment of all except the few who were expecting it. The interest increased from day to day, until the eighth day, when the Holy Spirit descended upon the congregation as on the day of Pentecost; and such a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord few of us have ever enjoyed. No chance to preach; all the Christians praised God, and the sinners trembled and cried for mercy. Our own local preachers, Bros. A. R. Hines and E. J. Boyett, rendered aid in most of our meetings. Bro. J. E. Buck, of the Kosciusko circuit, did faithful preaching, and good work otherwise, through one of these meetings. Rev. W. P. Ratliff, local preacher from the Sallis circuit, also assisted us efficiently at Ethel. We feel under obligations to these brethren, and thankful to the good Lord.

MINUTES
OF SOME CONVERSATIONS BETWEEN THE PREACHERS
IN CONNECTION WITH
THE REVEREND MR. JOHN WESLEY,
KENT COUNTY, DELAWARE,
APRIL 28, 1779.

Ques. 1. What preacher is admitted this year?

Ans.: Caleb B. Pedicord.

Ques. 2. Who remain on trial?

Ans.: Joshua Dudley, Philip Cox, Richard Garrettson, Lewis Alfrey.

Ques. 3. Who desist from travelling?

Ans.: Robert Cloud, William Duke.

Ques. 4. What preachers act as assistants?

Ans.: Francis Asbury, Daniel Ruff, Joseph Hartley, Freeborn Garrettson, Thomas McClure, Caleb B. Pedicord.

Ques. 5. Are there any objections to any of the preachers?

Ans.: They were examined one by one.

Ques. 6. Who of the preachers are willing to take the station this Conference shall place them in, and continue till next Conference?

Ans.: Francis Asbury, John Cooper, Daniel Ruff, Freeborn Garrettson, Thomas McClure, Lewis Alfrey, Joshua Dudley, Joseph Cromwell, Micaljah Debruler, Joseph Hartley, Philip Cox, Caleb B. Pedicord, William Waters, Thomas S. Chew, William Gill, Richard Garrettson.

Ques. 7. How are the preachers stationed?

Ans.:

New Jersey and Philadelphia, Philip Cox, Joshua Dudley, Daniel Ruff.

Chester, Joseph Cromwell.

Metitchen, John Cooper.

Delaware, Francis Asbury, Caleb B. Pedicord, Freeborn Garrettson, Lewis Alfrey, Micaljah Debruler.

Kent, Joseph Hartley, Thomas McClure.

Baltimore, William Waters, Thomas S. Chew, William Adams.

Frederick, Richard Garrettson, William Glendenning.

No helper to make any alteration in the circuit, or appoint preaching in any new place, without consulting the assistant.

Every exhorter and local preacher to go by the directions of the assistants where, and only where, they shall appoint.

Ques. 8. Why was the Delaware Conference held?

Ans.: For the convenience of the preachers in the northern stations, that we all might have an opportunity of meeting in conference; it being unadvisable for Bro. Asbury and Bro. Ruff, with some others, to attend in Virginia; it is considered also as preparatory to the Conference in Virginia; our sentiments to be given in by Bro. Waters.

Ques. 9. Ought not every traveling preacher to meet the class wherever he preaches?

Ans.: Yes; if possible.

Ques. 10. Shall we guard against a separation from the church, directly or indirectly?

Ans.: By all means.

Ques. 11. What shall be done with the children?

Ans.: Meet them once fortnight, and examine the parents with regard to their conduct toward them.

Ques. 12. Ought not Bro. Asbury to act as general assistant in America?

Ans.: He ought: 1st, on account of his age; 2nd, because originally appointed by Mr. Wesley; 3rd, being joined with Messrs. Rankin and Shadford by express order from Mr. Wesley.

Ques. 13. How far shall his power extend?

Ans.: On hearing every preacher for and against what is in debate, the right of determination shall rest with him according to the Minutes.

Modern Evangelists.

Dr. Anderson, editor of the Florida Christian Advocate, publishes the following paragraphs on the above-mentioned subject:

Modern evangelists can not justly claim to be the order of Christian ministers designated by the new Testament term, "evangelists." The ancient evangelists appear to have been missionary assistants to the apostles, whose duty it was to travel and preach and ordain under the direction of the apostles of our Lord; but the evangelists of our day are simply professional revivalists.

No direct Scripture sanction can be produced for an order of professional revivalists. God calls men to preach the gospel, and every preacher is instructed to obtain power from on high, and has the promise that Christ will be with him always, even to the end of the world. Hence every preacher ought to be a revivalist and preach with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven.

The fact, however, remains, that the present state of things, to some extent, calls for and justifies special work for revivals. And concerning this we must be said, that it is not a question as to approving certain men and their methods; for many of our professional revivalists can not be approved, and pastors ought to be exceedingly careful about allowing them to conduct services in their churches. There is great danger along this line.

Serious evils gather about modern evangelism. The pastor is depreciated. Converts are brought in to be trained by pastors who have not their love, between whom and them exists no special warm interest. A public sentiment arises that no revival can be expected until an evangelist comes. Revivals and conversions become periodic, spasmodic, not sought except after long intervals.

Success is the trap by which the devil catches modern evangelists, in too many instances. Success wins reputation, and reputation brings calls, and calls mean money. Success therefore is necessary, and the temptation comes to get it by the art of revival manipulation. Alas! in too many instances conversion is allowed where there is no deep concern, no thorough repentance, no real change of heart.

But the church is responsible to a very considerable extent for the evil of modern evangelism. The general need of a revival agency grew out of the failure of so many pastors to obtain the gift of power; and next came the sad fact that when evangelism arose and was in need of direction and control, it got neither. The church allowed a class of ministers to spring up and increase without placing them under law, authority and supervision. No wonder evils have came.

The remedy is supervision. Evangelists are itinerant ministers as really as any we have, and they should be so declared by law and treated in all respects alike other itinerant ministers, every law and rule of our itinerant system made applicable to them, with the single variation that upon the recommendation of the Conference a man may be appointed to evangelistic work and shall be under the direction of the Bishop and presiding elders, his maximum salary apportioned by a committee of four ministers and three laymen, his receipts above that to be given as the Conference may direct, and his character to be examined as in the case of other itinerant ministers.

BOOKS.

BLUEBIRD NOTES. Poems by Ira Billman. Square octavo, 310 pp., cloth, $1 50. New York: Funk & Wagnalls.

This book contains 136 poems, showing considerable diversity of length, subject, measure and merit. Most of them are short, perspicuous, and readable. The longest are Thima Thule, Wilhelmina, The Pearl of Great Price, Electricity, and The Wizard. The author has evidently enjoyed his work, and his lines are full of sweetness, philanthropy and loyalty to right. Some of them are exceedingly touching, and reveal no small degree of poetic genius. The volume is beautifully printed on heavy calendered paper, and it will be safe, ennobling and helpful in any family. The author need not conceal the fact that he is a Congregational minister, settled in the "land of steady habits."

PERIODICALS.

—Seventh Annual Convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Louisiana, held at Alexandria, April 25-27, 1889. This pamphlet gives a minute account of the interesting work done in the cause of temperance in Louisiana by the women of the Union of this State. LESSON I.—October 6.

The Tribes United under David.

II. Samuel v, 1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.—Psa. cxxxiii, 1.

TIME.—B. C. 1046.

PLACES.—Hebron, Jerusalem and Tyre.

1. Then came all the tribes—At this point the history in 1. Chronicles which omits all mention of Ishbosheth's kingdom and of Abner's death, parallels verbally, as well as in the subject-matter, with that before us. (1 Chron. xi, 1-9.) But the chronicler adds some interesting details at xii, 23-40, of the manner in which the various tribes from both sides of the Jordan came to Hebron to make David king, and of the joyful festivities on the occasion. Thy bone and thy flesh—That is, by blood relations, inasmuch as all the tribes of Israel were lineal descendants of Jacob.

2. That leddest out and broughtest in—They had not forgotten the day when David overthrew the giant in the valley of Elah; nor had they lost sight of the fact that the only really brilliant portion of Saul's reign was that in which David was by his side. The Lord said thee—It was the divine will that he should be king. (See I. Samuel xvi, 1-12.) But he was forced to wait fifteen years for the fulfillment of the divine promise given through Samuel. Three reasons, arranged in the order of their importance, are given for electing David king: the tie of relationship, his proved capacity as a military leader, the divine choice.

3. Made a league with them—He pledged himself, both to the people and to God, to rule in accordance with the principles which had already been laid down by Jehovah for the administration of the national affairs. Before the Lord—A religious ceremony. What a lesson for us! Seek God's blessing on everything we do. He who has said, "By me kings reign," says also, "I love them that love me." They anointed David—Is that the word which is used when men are made kings? Is there not another word which is employed usually? Do we not say, And they crowned the king? The word here used is anointed a better word, a word with more spiritual meaning in it, and more duration. The oil penetrated. The oil signified consecration, purity, morality. There was a crown, but that was spectacular, and might be lost.

4. Thirty years old—The prime of life: the age at which the Levites entered upon their duties; at which young men commenced to take part in public business in Greece; at which Joseph was made ruler over Egypt; at which Jesus Christ was "anointed with the Holy Ghost" in his baptism, and began his public ministry.

6. Went to Jerusalem—It was safer for David than any more northern city would have been, for he was under the protection of his own tribe of Judah. His choice of a capital was made by David, as elsewhere declared, under divine direction. It was the place where the Lord had chosen to put his name. The Jebusites (the conqueror)—An ancient tribe descended from Canaan, son of Ham, who from the days of Abraham had been the well-known inhabitants of the land. They were a most hardy and warlike tribe, as is shown from their ability to maintain their ancient position in central Palestine so long. Except thou take away the blind and the lame—Literally, and after the order of the Hebrew, the passage reads thus: Thou shalt not come hither, for to drive these away, the blind and the lame, saying, Let not David come hither (will suffice). The Jebusites relied upon the unusual natural advantages of their citadel, which stood upon Mount Zion, a mountain cut in by deep valleys on three different sides, so that in their haughty self-security they imagined that they did not even need to employ healthy and powerful warriors to resist the attack made by David, but that the blind and the lame would suffice. Thinking—Hebrew, Saying. This word either explains the purport of the saying of the Jebusites, just recorded, or, which is simpler, indicates the words with which the blind and lame accompany their resistance, "David shall not come here."

7. Zion . . . city of David—(To be dry, or dry and arid mountain or hill.) This was the name of the southern and oldest mountain of Jerusalem. Upon it stood the fortress or citadel of the town. This explanatory remark anticipates the course of events, as David did not give this name to the conquered citadel until he had chosen it as his residence and capital.

8. Getteth up to the gutter—The word used is rendered waterspouts. We may interpret this verse as follows: "Whosoever will smite the Jebusites, let him reach both the lame and the blind, who are the hated of David's soul, by the water-course, and he shall be chief." The only access to the citadel was where the water had worn a channel (como understand a subterranean channel), and where there was, in consequence, some vegetation on the rock. Wherefore they said—The meaning will be, that the Jebusites relied strongly upon the protection of their consecrated images that they decked David to take the place until these should be removed—that is, never. They proudly brought them forth, and placed them on the walls for greater confidence, declaring they should not again be "brought into the house" of idols so long as the enemy remained before the walls.

9. David dwelt—Eventually, when the building was complete, which might not be for two or three years. From Millo—The word always has the definite article—appears to have been some important fortifications already in existence. It may have protected the city on the north, the only side on which it had not the defense of precipitous ravines. Solomon rebuilt it, and Hezekiah repaired it as a defense against the Assyrians. Millo may have been an old Canaanite name.

11. Hiram—This Hiram was probably the father or the grandfather of the King Hiram mentioned as Solomon's ally and helper in building the temple. The kingdom of Tyre was on the coast of the Mediterranean, northwest of Jerusalem. This territory bordered upon David's kingdom. Carpenters, and masons—Those who have explored and carefully examined the ruined cities of Palestine and Syria must have been struck with the similarity of style and workmanship in the most ancient specimens of Jewish and Phœnician architecture. The walls of the temple court at Jerusalem and of the harem at Hebron bear the closest possible resemblance to the ramparts of Gebal and of the castle of Subeibeh at Barrins, both of which were founded by the Phœnicians. The stones are of colossal magnitude, laid in uniform courses, and so hewn with grooves at the edges that the surface of the masonry presents the appearance of raised paneling. That peculiar groove which is generally known now as the bevel is characteristic both of Jewish and Phœnician masonry.

Our Class Meeting in Mexico.

I attended our class meeting again. It was one of thrilling interest to me. In order to prevent any disturbance from outsiders, it is announced these meetings are for the members alone and any who may feel interested in religion. So at the hour appointed, the uozo (or sexton) closes the door. At our last meeting, our poor lame man, of whom I wrote in a former letter as having attempted to take his life seven times, came and found the door closed, and begged admittance. The sexton said, "Only brethren are allowed in here." Soon after he got in he arose in his seat, and said: "For fourteen years I have been so burdened, I could not shed a tear, and last Tuesday night, in that meeting, tears came to my relief, and I took it as evidence that God had not forsaken me. I started to this meeting to-night with a glad heart; but when I came to the door I found it closed, and was told no one could enter but brethren." He said, "I don't want to be kept out. What can I do to become a brother?" He stated that he was happy, and wanted to come into the church. So next Sunday he will be received.

The colonel that was received into the church some time since went with our native pastor to visit some sick, and, hearing a passage of Scripture quoted that he did not know was in the Bible, he went immediately and bought him a Bible, which is now his daily companion. Knowing that there had been some complaint about the gas bills being so great, as we have a great many services in our church, he went yesterday and bought lamps and had them put in the church so we could meet every night in the week when necessary. He seems greatly interested in the prosperity of our church. The congregations increase gradually, and the last class meeting numbered forty. There is something of interest at every meeting.

The sad news of the death of Dr. Patterson was received yesterday, and to-day a beautiful tribute was paid his memory in our church, and the natives all fell on their knees and prayed earnestly for Mrs. Patterson, who was a good friend to the Mexicans and a great worker in this field. Their grief touched my heart. The service was a very impressive one.

I am more impressed with the magnitude of the work before us. So much to do. We hope next year to be active workers. Had it not been for our protracted afflictions, we would now be hard at work in the field.

With best wishes for all the readers of the ADVOCATE.

Japan Statistics.

There are 28 organizations working in Japan for its evangelization, 443 missionaries, 396 stations and outstations, 249 organized churches, 92 self-supporting churches, 157 partially self-supporting 25,514 members, 9,698 scholars in day and boarding schools, 16,631 scholars in Sunday-schools, 287 theological students, 142 native ministers, 257 unordained native helpers; 6,959 adult converts were baptized during 1888. During 1888 there was a gain over 1887 of 90 missionaries, 11 stations and out-stations, 28 organized churches, 19 self-supporting churches, 13 partially self-supporting, 5,785 members and 2,553 scholars in day and boarding schools.

THE CROSS.—I was thinking the other day whether I could not find out one single force, acting for the benefit of the human race, that did not come from the cross—that had not its origin from the cross. I can not find one. Who discovered the interior world of Africa, and set in motion the intellect of that people, and made them an intelligent people? Missionaries. Who has solved the problem of preaching liberty to the women of India? Missionaries and their wives. Who first brought into modern geography the hidden lands and rivers of China, unsealed for inspection the scholarship, and opened for the enrichment of commerce the greatest empire of the East? Missionaries. Who first dared the cannibal regions—the cannibal shores of New Zealand and Tonga and Fiji—and converted wolves, whose appetites were for blood, into a nation? Missionaries. To come nearer home, who are those in Europe who are now lifting up their voices against war, that horrible perversion of the intellect, and of the soul of man? Who are devoting their means and influence against vice in the high places, and vice in low places, and against the infliction of wrong upon the defenseless? Who are those whose example of righteousness and purity and gentleness conforms with their own spirit, legislation of governments, and the sentiments of society? The followers of the Nazarene. "The foolishness of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men."—Selected.

Temperance.

National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

The sixteenth convention of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union meets in Battery D, Chicago, November 8, and continues through the 12th, with meetings of special interest on the Sabbath day. The society represents over two hundred thousand earnest-hearted women who are devoted to works of philanthropy along lines that build up the temperance reform. That their view of this reform is very broad is proved from the fact that they have forty distinct departments of work, under the general heads of Preventive, Educational, Evangelistic, Social, Legal, and the Department of Organization. Through their influence, scientific temperance instruction has been secured by law in all the territories in all schools supported in whole or in part from the United States Treasury, and in twenty-seven States the same laws are now in operation. They have special lines of work for soldiers, sailors, miners, and all classes who are in circumstances of especial temptation so far as pure and wholesome habits of life are concerned. They have a network of juvenile societies extending from Tampa Bay to Puget Sound. They have a systematic course of reading for mothers, and mothers' meetings are a feature of the local auxiliaries. In these heredity and hygiene are subjects especially considered. They have a publishing house (Chicago) which sends out about sixty million pages annually, and prints The Union Signal, which has sixty thousand subscribers, and is the chief paper ever edited and published by women. Their gospel work has permeated the nation, and was never more earnestly pursued than now. In the social realm they seek especially to enlist the influence of young women, and to hold up the standard of total abstinence for others' sake. The Department of the White Cross and the White Shield, which is one of the largest, has called especial attention to the securing of laws for the protection of women, and to the equalizing of the standard of an upright life, making it the same for men that it has always been for women.

NOTES.

The C. L. S. C. class of '93 may almost be known as a W. C. T. U. class, nearly every lady member on the ground at Chautauqua wearing a white ribbon.

It is reported that in Louisville, Ky., it is impossible to keep dippers on the public wells because the saloon men have them taken off or destroyed so as to force the thirsty public into their dives.

Statistics show that the consumption of alcohol in France doubled between 1875 and 1885. No wonder the Anti-alcohol Congress resolved that the governments of the world "ought to place prohibitive duties" on this persistent poison.

Alexander McDongall, the vice-chairman of the Manchester Board of Guardians, estimates that the suppression of the drink traffic in the United Kingdom would put an end to the waste which now alone brings two and three-fourths millions of people to wretchedness and poverty.

A practical friend of the temperance reform movement in one of the cities of New York is rendering valuable service to the work by buying up saloon property on the principal thoroughfares and ousting the saloons. A grocery store where hard cider was sold and a disreputable hotel have lately followed the saloons and now a temperance hotel in the same locality is anticipated.

Notice from the Publisher.

The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE will be furnished new subscribers for $2 from date to January, 1891. This gives the paper free for three months. The money may be handed the preacher in charge, who is our authorized agent, at any time prior to the meeting of the Annual Conference.

J. G. GRANT, Publisher.

Briefs.

Did it ever occur to you that the right sort of a Christian is always in good company when he is alone!

"God bless the ADVOCATE! Its weekly visits are hailed with joy at our home." So writes a sister from the "Opelousas country." God is answering that, and the thousand prayers of our readers for the ADVOCATE.

There have been essays and pamphlets and books and newspaper paragraphs almost innumerable about "systematic giving;" now let somebody give us something on "systematic spending" as a sort of variation. A little variety will spice the old sameness.

The sentiment in favor of giving the preacher a thorough education is still growing. Says the Presbyterian, of Philadelphia: "It becomes all denominations in these days to demand the highest scholarship with the most practical activity on the part of the clergy."

The Christian Guardian closes a good article on, "Conservatism and Progress," with this sentence: "In our church operations we are in far greater danger from the formality which results from running in stereotyped grooves, than from the spirit of progress, which adapts church methods to the requirements of the times."

This from Bro. Campbell, of the Texas Advocate, is worthy of repetition: "Twice in life we have seen the Bible made supreme. Once we tried to sell a Methodist a Discipline. He said he wanted to put in all his time reading his Bible, and now a good sister orders her Advocate stopped in order that she may read her Bible more. Of course, the paper stops."

A Congregationalist pastor sent out to 1,052 pastors questions as to the advisability of consolidating their seven missionary periodicals into one or two, and received 978 votes in favor of it. Whether the consolidation should result in a weekly or monthly, there were 723 votes for the weekly, and 237 for the monthly. The church without a weekly missionary paper will not be able to keep up. We hope that will be one of the acts of our next General Conference.

The Rocky Mountain Methodist, published at Pueblo, Colo., has this personal: "Rev. George Needham has been looking after our Conference cattle." The explanation is, that about a year ago a brother gave the Denver Conference a herd of cattle "as a nucleus for a superannuate fund, the interest of which is alone to be used." The herd was hired out for one half the increase, and Bro. Needham has been looking after the Conference interest. That may be a rich superannuate fund some day!

An Important Proposition.

For some time quite a number of our church papers have been discussing our rule in regard to the ordination of our ministers. Several of our editors and prominent writers have stated their conviction that the rule ought to be changed. As the rule now stands, our young ministers are hampered and limited in the exercise of their proper ministerial functions, and they say when a man is licensed to preach and put in charge of a circuit or station, he should have authority to perform all the work that can devolve upon a minister of the gospel. Preaching, being a greater thing than any ordinance, ought to carry with it always the authority to administer the ordinance. If the Holy Spirit calls a man to the ministry, does he not call him to do the whole work? The case of missionaries is brought forward to show that we do relax the rule, when the necessities of the work demand it, and the work now is in such condition as to demand it everywhere. Such is the general drift of the argument in favor of repealing the law.

There are others who oppose the proposition. The Nashville Advocate, last week, in an editorial on "The Novitiate," argues against the proposed change. The Scripture exhortation is, "Lay hands suddenly on no man." Paul avowed, "Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel." To ordain every man sent out will be to give important charges pastors who have been in the church, many of them, but a brief space of time. It is too radical a revolution to put a man in full charge of a congregation, who himself has been converted from the world within the past three months. The Advocate proposes a compromise, and that is to "make ordination precedent to the pastorate;" that is, "not that every man licensed to preach or received on trial into the traveling connection shall be ordained immediately, but shall be ordained before he is put in charge of a work." The proposition is not to do away with the period of probation, but the novitiate is to be passed in other relation than that of a pastor—in other words, a reasonable length of time shall be passed in preparing for the work before a man shall be elegible to the pastorate." The Advocate very naively prefaces the statement of this compromise with these words: "We are satisfied the proposition will be misconstrued."

If we have not "misconstrued" the Advocate's proposition, the adoption of the compromise will simply be an effort to put ourselves back into a condition out of which we have already grown; which will be an effort after the impossible. In the early years of our history the young preacher was never "in charge" of a congregation; he was simply an assistant to the preacher who was "in charge." But the work grew so largely that there arose a demand for more men, and the preacher and his assistant must be separated and each "put in charge" in order, in some measure, to supply that demand. Does the Advocate's compromise mean that all unordained preachers shall be made assistants to pastors, and in that relation pass their novitiate? If so, then that simply puts us back where we began, and must, necessarily, leave many congregations unsupplied with ministerial service of any kind. Or does the Advocate mean that our young preachers shall pass their novitiate in the theological seminary, and, having compassed its curriculum, come up for ordination to the pastorate. The question is, Where shall that time of preparation be passed? Shall it be in the work itself, or in the school? In either case, as far as the supply of the work is concerned, we will take a backward step. The work needs more men now than the Bishops have at their disposal. And if we take our unordained preachers out of their pastorates, then the destitution will be so much the greater. If we have not "misconstrued" the Advocate's compromise, we think its adoption will cripple us very greatly in our efforts to give the gospel to the people. We will thank the Advocate to so state its proposition that it can not be "misconstrued." Surely, if the idea is clear, there may be a clear presentation.

My People.

The Scriptures in hundreds of places represent the Lord as using the above phrase. Several of the sacred writers have the phrase, "the people of God." God, then, has a people in the earth. It is important to know who these people are. It is important, because they have peculiar and exalted privileges, and all the "great and precious promises" are given to them; the final rest is said to remain for them. Who, then, are the people of God? It is a blessed thing that the determination of this question has not been left to human ingenuity. There is too much at stake for any mere man to display his wisdom in answering. There is so much selfishness in men that no one can determine the question in an impartial manner!

Indeed, when we look back on human history we see that the bitterest strifes and the most fearful contentions have raged around this very question. Sects and denominations have quarreled and wrangled over the question, and only ceased the strife by excommunicating one another. It is one of the hopeful signs of these times, that the debates about this question are growing less frequent and less fierce. The churches are drawing nearer together, and only now and then do we hear a "stray shot" from each others camp. Another hopeful sign is the disposition to refer the solution of the question to the plain teaching of the Word of God rather than to the biased judgments and erring opinions of men. If all of us would lay aside prejudice and sectarianism, and with calm deliberation examine the Scriptures, we would be surprised at the simplicity and clearness with which the Word of God settles this as well as hundreds of other questions.

The Scriptures teach that there is a very simple thing, which if a man has, he belongs to the "people of God," no matter what else he may lack; which if a man has not, he does not belong to the "people of God," no matter what else he has. The whole matter is made as clear as a sunbeam, when in the first chapter of John's gospel it is said: "As many as received him (Christ) to them gave he privilege to become the sons (children) of God." Read in Paul's writing this clear statement: "As many as are led by the Spirit of God they are the sons (children) of God." And again: "Ye are all children of God by faith in Jesus Christ." The "people of God," then, are those who have received Christ as the Divine-human Savior from their sins. It was predicted of him, "He shall save his people from their sins," and those who receive him have in themselves the fulfillment of the prediction. The "people of God" are those who here and now have accepted Christ and unreservedly committed their all to him for time and eternity. It is the present salvation taught everywhere in the Scripture, which is nothing less than God's saving presence in the soul. If it is not this, it is nothing; has no existence whatever.

The "people of God," then, are those who, convinced of their weakness and shuddering at their sinfulness, have let go every other hope and thrown away every other plan, and, with the earnest grasp of perishing souls, have caught hold of the Savior of sinners! They read that there is no other mediator than Jesus, no holiness but through the work of his spirit; that salvation here and blessedness hereafter depend upon a glad acceptance and a trustful obedience to the Son of God, and they can not afford to let him go! They can't afford to risk so grand a thing as the salvation of their souls upon the opinions of men! They can't afford to lay the foundation of so great a structure upon the shifting sands of human theories! They are building for the eternal ages and they want a foundation stauncher than the granite hills! They find it in Jesus, the "Rock of their salvation!" Convinced that he is all in all, they continually cry,

"Thou, O Christ, art all I want!"

Trusting him and doing his will, their daily experience is:

"More than all in thee I find."

Among the Papers.

The St. Louis Advocate gives a word photograph of the devil. This is one view:

A spiritual being, he can work through agencies or directly on the spirit. He infuses thoughts, makes suggestions and does it so deftly that we do not know their paternity. He tempted Eve to take the forbidden fruit. He put it into David's mind to number Israel, thereby provoking the wrath of God. He influenced Ananias and Sapphira to lie to God. Peter's yielding to presumption was at his instance. Judas' betrayal was from the same baneful source. The temptation of Christ was a typical and master-piece of his business in seducing from God, showing his power to array agencies and pleas, and to back these by all forms of sanctity and persuasiveness. He is blasphemous, arrogant, presumptuous. He slanders God to men, infuses into men hard thoughts of God; radicates their enmity and inflames their prejudice against him. Leads them to deny his existence, traduce his character, thereby destroying the foundations of faith and all true worship. He does all he can by insinuation and charges to blacken saintly character and lower God's estimate of the good. He is the vilest of calumniators, the most malignant and artful of slanderers. Goodness is the point of his constant attack. He says nothing good about the good, nothing bad about the bad. He is always at church before the preacher, is in the pulpit or in a member in the pew, to hinder the sower, to impoverish the soil, or blast the seed; that is, when courage and faith are in the pulpit and zeal and prayer in the pew, but if dead orthodoxy and live heterodoxy are in the pulpit, he then puts in his time elsewhere at some point of danger.

The Texas Advocate discusses the question of Temptation:

St. James in the following has given the universal definition of temptation: "Every man is tempted when he is drawn away by his own lust and enticed." Lust, which means desire, is not necessarily evil. A desire for money may be very proper, but when it draws away from God and right, and becomes a motive to rob or steal or to do any other wrong act, it is temptation and may be yielded to and thus conceive, or resisted, as the will may choose. All temptation comes within St. James' definition. All has the same common human elements; for "there hath no temptation taken you, but such as is common to man." There can be properly no such distinction here as temptations which come from within and temptations which come from without. The tempter or tempting object always appeals to the will through some of the common motives in desire. Temptation proceeds from the object without inwardly through desire, while sin proceeds from the will within outwardly. The will can not be overpowered by the tempter, but in the exercise of its own freedom it may yield once for all to a life of sin, or by repeated acts of yielding become enslaved in habit. In that case temptation becomes nothing more than opportunity. The thief only wants opportunity to steal.

Bro. Kirkland, of the Southern, seems to be in a questioning mood. Hear his interrogations, and answer if you can:

Fifty years ago you couldn't get a Methodist congregation together without finding in it some man or woman that could raise a tune. But how is it now? Have not choirs broken up congregational singing? Do we not, in the absence of the choir, find men and women almost universally too timid to start a tune? Have we not walked upon crutches till we can't walk alone? Have not the days of congregational singing been numbered? Is not the spirit of song dying among us as a people? "Where is the blessedness we knew?" How shall we bring back the days when every congregation was a choir and every Methodist was an organ? Who shall cast out the dumb devil for us? Who shall cut the ligature that ties the tongues of our people and set them to prattling for the Lord? Who shall tone up and tune up the Methodist larynx and set it to roaring the praises of God?

The Holston Methodist points out a new line for evangelical work. What is said of Virginia and Tennessee may apply to some other places in our bounds:

The increase of mining operations in portions of Tennessee and Virginia calls for earnest consideration of the work of supplying the people engaged in the coal and iron mines with the gospel. These people work at very low wages, and are not always able to provide for themselves. There are many incitements to evil among them, especially those who are separated from home and friends and whose social privileges are limited. To these, the vice-promoting liquor saloon is most attractive. The leaders of these people are apt to be men of ready wit, much bluster and unusual physical strength.

Preaching to miners is a work of great difficulty and discouragement. Differences of doctrine exist among them that make the support of any minister hard to secure. The building of churches is also a serious trouble, as the miners are frequently scattered over considerable territory and frequent removals take place.

* * * * *

Let the Board of Missions and authorities at the Annual Conference take this matter under special advisement, and provide, as far as possible, for all the mining districts in our bounds. Let contributions be made by whoever may feel a special interest in these people, so that churches and parsonages may be built and the way opened for the best possible success in this great work.

The Raleigh Christian Advocate gives some figures which can not be pondered over with an easy feeling. It says:

The money spent in the United States for intoxicating liquors would every year support 200,000 missionaries, which would be about one missionary to every 3,000 adult heathen now existing on the globe. It would also support 100,000 missionary school teachers at $500 each; build 2,000 churches at $10,000 each; build 300 school-houses or seminaries at $2,500 each; would publish 50,000 Bibles every day. So the money spent annually in this country for strong drink would, in a short time, evangelize the whole world. But instead of it being put to this beneficent purpose, it goes, like a fearful cyclone, cutting a wide swath of destruction through the land. Yes, this so-called Christian land is spending nine hundred million dollars on liquid poison and only five and a half million dollars on foreign missions. "Will a man reb God?" Yes, this whole nation is robbing God. "Wherein?" "In tithes and offerings."

Some people talk a great deal about "my conscience." Oftentimes the phrase means nothing more nor less than "my stubbornness."

At the annual meeting of the liquor dealers in Rochester, N. Y., the chairman opened his remarks by saying: "Let us return thanks to the Giver of all good for the many fruitful blessings bestowed upon us since our last convention!"

Notes.

William Carey's great sermon which led to the formation of the first missionary society had two points. Expect great things from God. Attempt great things for God. The text was Isa. liv, 2,3.

"One cent in ten days is the present average contribution of each member of the Christian Church throughout the world for the recovery of a thousand millions of heathen to a knowledge of that gospel which I deem to be the bearer of boundless blessings to our race."

Last Monday, September 23, was the thirty-first anniversary of the beginning of the Noon-day Fulton Street prayer meeting. It has never ceased since. The originator of the meeting is J. C. Lanphier, who is now in his eighty-first year, well and vigorous and daily at his post.

It is a very grievous mistake to suppose that the church was organized and is maintained for the purpose of nursing Christians. The whole business of the church in the world is to save sinners. If the sick Christians would get up and go out after sinners and bring them to the Lord, they would find in that act a healing medicine for their maladies.

Japan must be waking up all over. We find this paragraph going the rounds:

It is now eighteen years since the first newspaper was published in Japan, and now 575 daily and weekly papers are issued from the press, 24 law magazines, 111 scientific periodicals, 35 medical journals, and an equal number of religious periodicals are published.

Edmond De Pressense, the great French Protestant preacher, and for a member of the French Senate, speaking of the evidence in the case against Gen. Boulanger, said in a London paper:

Never was there more overwhelming evidence of the infamous conduct of a party and of its leader. The agents of the General are the low of the low, men and women whose only common bond is the love of adventure and greed of gain. He himself is well worthy to be the head of such an unscrupulous band.

The annual expenditures of the Protestant Church members in the United States for religious purposes of every description at home are about eighty millions of dollars, while for foreign missions the amount is about four millions of dollars. While the need is from five to six hundred and fifty times greater in the heathen world, we spend twenty times as much in our work at home. This eight millions is expended for the Christianizing of sixty millions of people, or an average of one dollar and thirty-three cents each, while the four millions are expended for the spiritual welfare of eleven hundred millions of the heathens, or one-third of a cent each.

That paragraph will bear pondering and prayer.

Our Northern friends would have been surprised had they been at Ruston, La., a few days ago, at the organization of the Confederate Veterans' Association of North Louisiana. The first man enrolled as a member was Richard Green, "an old colored veteran from Claiborne parish, who had come all the way from his home to become a member of the meeting." When a point of order was raised that the motion to make him a member was out of order, "the old Confederates unanimously cried down the point, and Richard Green became a member of the association, the first member enrolled." Will our friends across the line believe this little story?

Gen. Meigs has been making calculations in regard to the growth of our population. The first census was taken in 1790, and the population was then 3,929,214. Next year the eleventh census is to be taken, and it is calculated from the rate of increase heretofore, that the population will reach 67, 240,000. The mean rate of increase during the last one hundred years has been 33.46. Taking this as the rate for the next hundred years, the year 1990 will show a population of over twelve hundred millions, which will be about 400 to the square mile. What an enormous amount of food it will take to feed that number of people. We suppose, however, our grand and great-grandchildren will be able to cope with the problem, and to them we transmit it!

The Sunday-school Times, in an article on, "A Lack of Courtesy among Women," prints this paragraph:

If a woman attempts to get on or off a crowded street-car, a man standing on the platform of the car is quite likely to step off and stand in the street—sometimes in the rain—in order to make room for her. For this act of courtesy, as for every other, specific thanks are due from the woman to the man. Yet such thanks are rarely given by a woman, although it would be a strange thing if a man were to fail of thanking another man who showed this courtesy toward him.

We have been riding in the street cars of New Orleans for nearly nine years and have never seen a woman take a proffered seat without "specific thanks" and a grateful smile. Such women may be in Philadelphia, but there are none of them here; if so, they don't ride in the street cars.

Personal and Otherwise.

The Independent says: "Think of it—in the Cathello Church of America to expose an evil is a greater ovil than the evil exposed." In that church everything and everybody must cringo to an autocratic bishop.

There are said to be more Jews in New York City than in Jorusalem.

Rev. F. L. Reid, oditor of the Raleigh Christian Advocate, after several weeks' sojourn at the Springs, has returned "restered to his usual health and ready to take his place again in the ottice." "Summering at the Springs" must be pleasant as well as healthful.

Dr. Hnygood's "Man of Galilee" is having a "fine run." The sixth thousand has been ordered and will be ready in a few days. Have you read it?

A lady sends one gold dollar for the Japan missionary, and says: "It is a keepsako given me by my husband before we were married, and I think it will keep as well in the missionary cause as in my trunk, so I have concluded to send it." And now that dollar will begin to bear interest.

A neat little pamphlet, bearing the imprint of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE office, has been laid upon our table. Its title is "The Church and the Masses," by Rev. I. W. Cooper, M. A., of the Mississippi Conference. Bro. Coeper discusses this grave question in a straightforward manner, and, we doubt not, this tract will do good wherever it is read.

The Missouri Conference elected to the General Conference the following delegates: Clerical—J. H. Pritchett, J. D. Hammond, John Anderson, W. W. McMurry, C. I. Van Deventer; lay—T. D. Woodsen, J. N. Baskett, Dr. A. B. Miller, N. P. Ogden, Thomas Shackleford,

The Columbia Conference elected Rev. D. Atkins, clerical, and M. R. Hanger, lay delegate, to the General Conference.

The saloon keepers' translation of W. C. T. U.—"Women constantly torment us." This is a case of "terment before the time."

The Missouri Conference has seet up a memorial to the General Conference to establish a weekly missionary paper. Good!

Dr. W. M. Robey, of the North Carolina Conference, died September 14. The Raleigh Advocate says: "In his death we have lost one of our strongest intellects and one of our most prominent and premising men."

Rev. J. J. Jenkins, of the Little Rock Conference, died in triumph, September 16. The Arkansas Methodist says: "The Little Rock Conference has lest one of its true and strong men."

Rev. J. M. Beland has been transferred to the Kentucky Conference, and stationed at Paris.

Rev. J. W. Blincoe, of the Virginia Conference, died September 15. The Richmond Advocate aays of him: "He was a prime specimen of a genuine, wholesome, high religion, after the pattern of the Man of Galilee."

Wilkie Collins, the novelist, died in London, September 23, aged sixty-five years.

Emperor William, of Germany, aaid on last Monday that the best guarantee of peace in Europe is the strength of the German army!

The latest from China is that the "Emperor and his council are debating a memorial demanding the expulsion of Americans from China. There is strong agitation for an increase of restrictions in American merchants and missionaries at treaty ports"!

Fielding Marvin, a son of Bishop Marvin, was admitted on trial in the Missouri Conference at its late session.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. T. S. Randie writes from Oak Ridge, La.: "My work is on the upward grade. I commence a protracted meeting in the Prairie next Sunday. My meeting at this place (Oak Ridge) will commence on the seoond Sabbath in October. I collected thirty-seven dollars for the weok of prayer and self-denial. We collected twenty dollars for Children's Day. Our Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and Woman's Church Extension (Mite Box Brigade) are doing well in their collections. I have collected all my foreign missionary assessment, except five dollars, and I have seven dollars in good subscriptions. I trust I will come to Conferenoe with full collections. Pray for us that God may bless us and give us success in our work."

—Rev. D. G. W. Ellis, writing from Madison station, Miss., says: "The Lord has blessed his people on the Madison circuit, and we are grateful. Two protraoted meetings have been held, and forty accessions to date, with two more meetings yet to hold, which we hope will result in muoh good. We have the entire assessment in cash and good subscription for the church collections. Hope to report full collections at Conferenoe."

—Rov. J. F. Wynn reports from Montgomery circuit, Louisiana Conference: "Closed our meetiug at Glory Hill, September 14. Fourtoen new members. Begin at Atlanta on the fourteenth."

—Rev. J. H. Smith writes from Newport, Miss: "I think it well to givo your readers semothing of our success on Newport circuit. Our protracted meetings are over. Result: forty conversions, twenty-two accessions to the church, four infants baptized, ton pledges for family prayer, the church greatly rovived, and some improvement will be effected on church and parsenage. We think the collections will be full. We have had some sickness this year. We are now waiting anxiously by tho bedside of a sick daughter, who has been siok for nearly five weeks. Pray for us."

—Rev. B. P. Fullileve writes from Chapel Hill circuit: "This is my first year on Chapel Hill circuit, and a happy year it has been so far. I have closed my reund of protracted meetings, which resulted in sixty-seven accessions to our church and mere to follow, besides a number that will jein other churches. I uever witnessed such pewer in my life. God's Spirit was with us. We have collected and forwarded all of our foreign missionary assessment—$40—and we have paid off our assessment on edueatien. We have a good portien of our ether assessments on hand. I can but say, Bless the Lerd, O my seul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name!"

Woman's Department of Church Extension.

I have received meney for the Woman's Department of Church Extension for 1889 as follows: Coffeeville, $8; Coldwater, $5 25: Greenville, $9 25; Carrollton, $10—total, $32 50.

These amounts are not large, but if all the churches in our Conference would do oven this much, great good would be accomplished.

A Cheaper Paper.

We commend to those people who are continually clamoring for a cheaper church paper the following from the Southern Christian Advocate:

"We spent last year on the Western Recorder (Kentucky Baptist organ) just three thousand dollars more than we received from subscribers."—Editor Western Recorder. Few readers know that little, if any, of their money goes into the pockets of church publishers. The subscription list usually pays the printers, and the writers get their salary from advertisers. As a rough guess, we doubt if any patron in the bounds of the Virginia Conferenco ever paid any of our predecessors' "allowance." Without tracing every dollar, we are pretty sure that the subscribers beyond our beunds and the men—Jew and Gentile—who use our business columns furnish us our victuals and clothes. Think of the membership of a church paying only the sexten, while "outsiders" pay the preacher. That's the way with the chaplain of the "Old Richmond."—Richmond Advocate. The same may be said of the "chaplains" of all church papers, unless it be the conneotional organ. Certainly it is true with reference to the Old Southern. And yet there be those who can not understand why the paper can not be furnished to subscribers for one dollar a year with a five-dollar chromo as a premium!

Those of our many readers who need watches, jewelry, silver-ware, clocks, etc., will find it to their advantage to visit the well-stocked store of Messrs. Frantz and Opitz, whose card appears elsewhere in this paper. These gentlemen are not only competent experts in their line of business, but are honest and thoroughly reliable. They also pay speoial attention to repairing of watches and jewelry.

To restore, thicken and give you a luxuriant growth of hair, to keep its color natural as in youth, and to remove dandruff, use only Hall's Hair Renewer.

No Grumbling Here.

"Well, sir," said Mr. J. G. Grant, in reply to the reportorial inquiry about the furniture trade during the past year, "all I can say is that if business had not been satisfactory with me, I should not have felt justified in leasing this new store and putting in the largest and best stock I have ever handled. But come with me and let me show you what I have to sell and where I am going to sell it."

Under Mr. Grant's guidance a tour was made of the entire establishment, revealing furniture of so many different styles and at such varied prices that anyone who could not make a suitable selection from Mr. Grant's stock must indeed be hard to please. The new building, at 44 and 46 Baronne street, is very centrally located, being only one block from Canal street. It is 60 feet wide, running back a distance of 105 feet, and has a floor space of ever 25,000 square feet. It has all the latest improvements, light and ventilation being perfect everywhere, and all the floors are made easily accessible by means of a hydraulic elevator. The second floor is one of the finest in the entire store, being devoted almost exclusively to the display of parlor furniture, and one can not help being struck by the handsome designs, the beauty and variety of the rich coverings, and the elegant appearance of these goods. The prices, too, will fit all purses, and the lady who only wishes to expend $30 or $40 on furnishing her parlor, and one who can afford to spend $700 or $800, or any price between these, can here alike be accommodated.

In the course of a pleasant conversation, Mr. Grant said business had been very satisfactory with him for the past twelve months, and there was every prospect that the coming season's trade would beat the record. He said that he had not only been selling more goods than formerly, but that the goods sold were of a better grade, which he was pleased to observe, as good furniture is really the cheaper in the end, and much more satisfactory to both buyer and seller. He, however, had a large stock of all grades, and, with the increased facilities which his new establishment afforded him, could and would place his furniture on the market at a lower price than had ever before been quoted in the South. Everyone should call and see the display at 44 and 46 Baronne street and get posted on prices, even if they do not intend to purchase just at present.

Country customers can have a fine illustrated catalogue mailed free to them on application, from which they can make their selections almost as well as if they were in the city.—Times-Democrat, Sept. Trade Edition.

N. W. Ayer & Son's American Newspaper Annual for 1889

Contains a carefully prepared list of all newspapers and periodicals in the United States and Canada, arranged by States and towns in alphabetical order. Under this head is given the name of the paper, the issue, general characteristics, year of establishment, size, subscription price and circulation, also the names of editors and publishers, and the street address (when known) in all cities of abeut 50,000 population.

One of its chief features is a carefully prepared description of every county in the United States, setting forth its location, area, adjoining navigable streams, the character of its surface, the nature of its soil, its leading crops and manufactures, its county seat and population. A similar, but mere elaborate descriptive heading, is appended to each State, Territery and Canadian Province. The county headings also show, from the United States census of 1880, the number of manufacturing establishments of all kinds at that time; the amount of capital invested in them, the number of hands employed, and the value of annual products. The State headings show, in addition to the summary of the foregoing, the amount paid in wages and the value of the raw material used.

It gives the population of every State, Territery, county and county seat, of all the large cities and towns, and of almost every place in which a newspaper is published, taken either from the United States census of 1880, or from the State oensus of 1885, in every instance where such census was taken, or from recent careful estimates.

It also gives the number of votes polled in each State, Territory and county by the Republican, Democratic, Greenback and Prohibition parties at the presidential election of 1888.

Three Reasonable Requests.

1. Let every subscriber carefully read this issue of the ADVOCATE, and then show the paper to some neighbor who does not take it, and ask him to subscribe.

2. Let every minister arrange for a complete canvass of his circuit, so that every family of every Methodist congregation may have the paper offered to them. Where the minister can not do this personally, let him appoint some suitable person to do it.

3. Let the benefit and duty of subscribing for our church paper be mentioned in every congregation, and all reasonable efforts put forth to obtain new subscribers, and secure the renewal of old ones.

Judge—"Now, madam, don't object to this question. Tell the court your age." Miss Longout—"I do not see that it is competent evidence, your honor." Judge—"Why not?" Miss L.—"You see I do not know it of my own knowledge: it is merely what was told to me." Judge—"True: you need not answer."

Next to your subscription the greatest favor you can extend the ADVOCATE, in a business point, is to mention the paper in writing to advertisers.

Miss—"Why, John, these gloves are not mates." John—"I know they're not, Miss; and what troubles me most is the pair what's in on the table do be in the same predicament as these."

First Doctor—"I hear you treated my neighbor for typhus fever. Was it a bad case?" Second Ditto—"Very bad: the man never paid his bill."

THE CENTURY DICTIONARY.

THIS great work, which has been in active preparation for the past seven years, contains a number of novel features, and combines in one a dictionary and a condensed and usable encyclopedia. It does not stop at mere definitions of words, but goes into particulars about things. The spelling, while resting on an independent basis, is essentially the so-called American; the system of indicating pronunciation is simple and easily understood, and the etymologies are treated more fully than in any dictionary yet published. It is a reference book, not only for the casual reader, but for the specialist also—the biologist, the architect, the electrician, the musician, the mineralogist, etc.—and for the business man.

We would like to make every reader of this paper acquainted with the plan of The Century Dictionary, and for this purpose we will send descriptive circulars free of charge, upon request, or for ten cents in stamps (the cost of manufacture) we will mail to any address a large pamphlet containing a number of specimen pages of the Dictionary, showing sample definitions in various subjects, as anatomy, law, botany, theology, gems, games, mechanics, physics with specimen illustrations, etc., etc. Address

LOVE ONE ANOTHER.

It was Saturday night, and two children small
Sat on the stairs in the lighted hall,
Vexed and troubled and sore perplexed,
To learn for Sunday the forgotten text;
Only three words on a gilded card,
But both the children declared it hard.

"'Love,' that is easy—it means, why, this"—
(A warm embrace and a loving kiss);
"But 'one another,' I don't see who Is meant by 'another'—now, May, do you?"

Very grandly she raised her head,
Our thoughtful darling, and slowly said,
As she fondly smiled on the little brother,
"Why, I am only one, and you are another,
And this is the meaning—don't you see?—
That I must love you, and you must love me."

Wise little preacher, could any sage
Interpret better the sacred page?

Indian Horsemanship.

A correspondent of the Omaha Herald, having visited an Arapahoe camp, gives the following account of an Indian drill ordered for his amusement:

Fifty fine-looking young men, mounted upon ponies, drew up before the tents. At a signal from the chief they began their evolutions with a loud yell.

In a moment they disappeared over a neighboring hill. Then there suddenly rose a mighty trampling of horses' feet, and they swept past again, so compact that I only saw a ball made of horses and men.

Splitting in two, one body swept to the right and another to the left, and again they disappeared. Presently they charged each other in solid lines, and while the spectator waited breathlessly for the shock of collision, the files skillfully opened to the right and left, and the lines passed the intervals without touching.

Now came the moment for displaying individual horsemanship. Some of the riders approached, each lying so close to his pony's back that nothing but the horse could be seen. Others stood erect upon their animal's backs. Some hung to the horse by one foot and one hand, so that their bodies were completely protected by those of the ponies.

These young warriors threw objects upon the ground and picked them up at full gallop, and drew bows and arrows from beneath the horses' necks. Some of the men exchanged horses while riding.

Again a man would fall from his horse, as if wounded, and two others riding up beside him, would take him by an arm and a leg, swing him between their horses, and carry him off.

This exhibition lasted nearly two hours.

A New Use for Clothes-Pins.

"Girls, what do you think these are good for?" asked Nannie Brown of her two little Brown sisters. She held up one of the clothes-pins they were picking up from the grass, where Nora had left them after taking in the wash.

"What do we think they are good for? Why to fasten the clothes to the line, of course," answered the other two little Browns in a breath; "every one knows that."

"But there is another use for them," said Nannie; "Norah told me last night. She says, if we put them on our noses—so"—and she put one astride her nose as she spoke—"they will make our noses of the most beautiful shape, not at all puggy and turned up, as they are now, you know. Would'nt it be splendid to try it?"

Now, the little Browns had noses that were decidedly turned up, and many were the times they had each sighed in secret over the fact. Here was their chance to shape their noses "illegantly," as Norah had told them.

That night three clothes-pins were missing from the basket. The three little girls, after being tucked in by mamma for the night, each slyly drew one from under her pillow and put it on her nose. It took some time for them to go to sleep in that queer fix, but they did at last. When mamma came to take a last look at them before going to bed she found them sound asleep, each with a little red nose pinched by a clothes-pin. Although astonished at the sight, she laughed until tears ran down her cheeks.

As she took off the pins and put them back, she said, "What won't these children do next?"

MR. EDITOR: I see your little folks' department is still running on. I wish to write a letter to the little cousins, telling them of our good protracted meeting just closed in our little village. It was carried on by Bro. Roberts and several other preachers, and was the best meeting I ever attended. I reckon the reason I thought it was the best was because my father, mother and my little sister, Ollie Warner, and myself all joined the Methodist Church, and we are praying and trying to live a happy life. I am a little boy thirteen years old, and assist our depot agent with his work. His name is Mr. Henry D'Amond, which I like so much. He has been very sick, but is up now. I hope he will get well. Mr. Charles Record is here in his place a few days. He is a very nice man. I will close by asking the little cousins a question: Where first in the Bible is the word "eternity!" found? I hope some of the little cousins will answer.

Your little friend,

MR. EDITOR: Here is another little girl who wishes to join your glorious little band. I am fourteen years old; have one brother and one sister. Papa takes your valuable paper. I like it very much, especially the young folks' department. Mamma is in bad health, and I have the cooking to do; but I like to cook. I have been going to school, but am not going now. I go to Sunday-school almost every Sunday. We have a very interesting school; all have very good lessons and like to go. For fear of tiring you, I will close with much love to you and the little cousins.

SHROCK, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: We are a little band of Sunday-school scholars, and, as we have never seen anything in print about our Sunday-school, we thought we would write to you about it. We have a scholarship of thirty boys and girls. Mr. Th. Emede is our superintendent; Mrs. Young and Mrs. K. Johnson are our teachers. We have very fair attendance every Sunday. We will close by asking a question: How many times is the Lord's name mentioned in the Bible?

MR. EDITOR: As I have never written to the dear old ADVOCATE, I thought I would write a short letter. I am a little boy ten years old and have no pets at all, nor any brothers or sisters. I am the only child and want to join the little cousins' band. Our camp meeting was the fourth Sunday in August; we had a good time. "Gilderoy" preached to the children, Sunday eve; we all loved him so much; and was sorry when he left. Hoping to see this in print, I will close.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl eight years old. I go to school to Miss Carrie Morris, and love her very much. Bro. Roberts is our preacher. We have had a very fine meeting; twelve joined the church. I will close by asking a question: What queen was eaten by dogs?

Your little friend,

Household.

Inventive Housekeepers Wanted.

The Advance gives some hints to housekeepers which may possibly bear fruit. We commend them to the ADVOCATE's housekeepers:

We learn, or ought to, of our mothers how to make and mend, to buy and preserve. But women as a whole are better educated than they were fifty years ago, and the educated brain, adopting from the past all that is good, should be quick to recognize new conditions and invent new ways of labor-saving and general comfort and pleasure. No wise woman will make a treadmill round of her housekeeping, turning it off as something to be disposed of before the real joy of living can begin. To most of us it is a part of the true living, involving the happiness and health of our dearest ones and the pleasure of our circle of visiting friends. Housekeeping is not so much a means to an end as a science in itself, noble and dignified because it lies at the foundation of so much else. It needs fertility of brain as well as tenderness of heart. Surely the young housekeeper of to-day does not lack suggestive guides when so many periodicals are wholly devoted to the interests of the home; and if the young husband suspects himself to be the victim of experiments he may be comforted by the assurance that the wide-awake and experimenting cook is likely to be the most satisfactory in the long run.

HOW WOMEN REST.—How differently men and women indulge themselves in what is called a resting spell. "I guess I'll sit down and mend these stockings and rest awhile," says the wife; but her husband throws himself upon the easy lounge, or sits back in his arm-chair, with hands at rest and feet placed horizontally upon another chair. The result is that his whole body gains full benefit of the half hour he allows himself from work, and the wife only receives that indirect help which comes from change of occupation. A physician would tell her that taking even ten minutes' rest in a horizontal position, as a change from sitting or standing at work, would prove more beneficial to her than any of her makeshifts at resting. Busy women have the habit of keeping on their feet just as long as they can, in spite of backaches and warning pains. As they grow older they see the folly of permitting such drafts upon their strength, and learn to take things easier, let what will happen. They say, "I used to think I must do thus and so, but I have grown wiser and learned to slight things." The first years of housekeeping are truly the hardest, for untried and unfamiliar cares are almost daily thrust upon the mother and home-maker.—New York Graphic.

Many people have no conception that an infant needs a drink of water, but think whenever it cries that it must, of course, be hungry, and so the little stomach is constantly overloaded, acid fermentation results, causing vomiting, diarrhea, elevated temperature, and all those symptoms of intestinal catarrh which occur especially during the summer months, and are caused usually by improper diet, or excess more than anything else. Often when a child cries, it is only thirst which causes it. When baby frets this hot weather, try him with a drink of pure cold water, and see if it does not cool and soothe and rest him, and then when he frets again, try it again, and our word for it, you will soon become a convert to the theory, "Give the baby a drink."

Whatever parent gives his children good instructions, and sets them at the same time a bad example, may be considered as bringing them food in one hand and poison in the other.—Balgrey.

Messrs. A. T. SHALLENBERGER & Co.,
Rochester, Pa.

Gents—The bottle of Shallenberger's Pills sent me in February last I gave to W. G. Anderson of this place; a long-standing case of chills and fever. He had tried everything known without any permanent good. In less than ten days after taking your Antidote he was sound and well, and has gone through the entire season without any return. It seems to have effectually driven the Malarious poison from his system. Yours truly,

V. A. ANDERSON.

Wolff & Randolph, Phila.—Gentlemen:—I used Acme Blacking about a year ago but became dissatisfied and quit. Two months ago I met a friend whose shoes were strikingly handsome, and asked him "What kind of blacking are you using?" "Wolff's Acme Blacking," he replied. Had you ever any trouble with it on account of its coating on the shoes?" "Not a particle! When I bought the first bottle three years ago I carefully read directions and followed them." Directions! I never thought of that." I bought a bottle right then and there, took the wrapper off the neck of bottle, followed those directions and admit, "What a Fool I was." Acme Blacking is all you claim for it.

EMORY & HENRY
COLLEGE.

THE 53D ANNUAL SESSION
WILL BEGIN
SEPTEMBER 5, 1889.

The last session was one of the best in the long and useful history of the College. The order and general behavior of students was excellent; moral and religious influences strong, and admirable progress generally was made in studies.

GYMNASIUM and WM. MORROW SCIENCE HALL are finished and beautiful additions to the already lovely grounds.

Work of rebuilding the burnt "BYARS HOUSE" is in progress, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

The new SOCIETY HALLS will be commodious and elegant.

In addition to subjects heretofore embraced in the courses, thorough practical instruction will be given in Analytical Chemistry, Determination of Minerals, Assaying, etc.

NO HEALTHIER OR MORE BEAUTIFUL PLACE. NO MALARIA.

No saloons, no occurrences to distract the minds of students, no safer place for boys and young men. Charges very moderate. Every possible arrangement for the encouragement of young men of limited means.

For catalogues and special information apply to

Mansfield Female College
Conservatory of Music and Art.
MANSFIELD, LA.

One of the most popular and flourishing institutions of the South. The Sixty-sixth Session opens September 11, 1889, and the Spring Term begins February 1, 1890, with an able and experienced faculty. Curriculum comprehensive. Instruction thorough. Advantages in Music unsurpassed, as in the best conservatories. The pianos are new and of the best make. The Technicon and the Technichono are used to facilitate the work in the music department, placing this department beyond competition. Department of Fine Arts and Industrial Arts under specialists.

The location is unsurpassed for beauty and attractiveness, and the school is celebrated for the remarkable record for good health maintained. The climate is the best in which to educate, and the place is the safest for girls. The main building is of brick, massive and commodious, with a large and well-shaded campus. Rooms large, well furnished, warmed and ventilated. Ample provision for the table of the best the market affords. All necessary comfort secured. Expenses very low and the school very economical. A new building with a large audience hall is in contemplation, and extensive improvements are in progress to make this the grandest institution in the State.

The Safest

AND most powerful alterative is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Young and old are alike benefited by its use. For the eruptive diseases peculiar to children nothing else is so effective as this medicine, while its agreeable flavor makes it easy to administer.

"My little boy had large scrofulous ulcers on his neck and throat from which he suffered terribly. Two physicians attended him, but he grew continually worse under their care, and everybody expected he would die. I had heard of the remarkable cures effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and decided to have my boy try it. Shortly after he began to take this medicine, the ulcers commenced healing, and, after using several bottles, he was entirely cured. He is now as healthy and strong as any boy of his age."—William F. Dougherty, Hampton, Va.

"In May last, my youngest child, fourteen months old, began to have sores gather on its head and body. We applied various simple remedies without avail. The sores increased in number and discharged copiously. A physician was called, but the sores continued to multiply until in a few months they nearly covered the child's head and body. At last we began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In a few days a marked change for the better was manifest. The sores assumed a more healthy condition, the discharges were gradually diminished, and finally ceased altogether. The child is livelier, its skin is fresher, and its appetite better than we have observed for months."—Frank M. Griffin, Long Point, Texas.

"The formula of Ayer's Sarsaparilla presents, for chronic diseases of almost every kind, the best remedy known to the medical world."—D. M. Wilson, M.D., Wiggs, Arkansas.

DAWSON—Died, at his residence, near Woodville, Miss., August 31, 1889, MR. LOUIS DAWSON.

For the past thirty years Mr. Dawson has been an honored member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Well might he be pointed to as a model by which other lives may well be shaped. He was a faithful worker in Christ's vineyard, not being satisfied with the assurance of his crown of righteousness, but striving for the salvation of others. During his illness, which was of twelve days' duration, though severe, he bore it with Christian resignation. He never murmured at the will of Providence, but said he was ready and willing to go at any time. He died very happy. He was all a father could be. He has left three sons, two daughters, and a large circle of friends and relatives, to join his wife and two children in that "dear land beyond the stars that shine from heaven's blue." His sorrowing children have a source of comfort in knowing that at the "beautiful gate" he is "waiting and watching" for them. May they find in their heavenly Father the comfort he has promised us all in the hour of trial!

Farewell! oh, farewell! my dear and honored uncle; sweetly rest in your home above!

SALLIE J. TABOR.

PARSONS—Died, at Sour Lake, Texas, September 3, 1889, DR. N. C. PARSONS, aged fifty-six years, having been afflicted for some months past with some heart and lung trouble. He arose on the morning preceding his death feeling as well as common, except that he complained of feeling a little feverish, went into breakfast about eight o'clock, eating nothing, however, but a glass of milk. His son, C. G. Parsons, came in at the time, and he remarked to him that he thought of taking a course of physic the night following and gave instructions how to fix the same. On rising from the table, a few minutes later, he was taken very suddenly with a rigor or congestive chill, lasting him about two hours, after which a high fever ensued, causing delirium in a short while. During his consciousness, however, he remarked to wife and son and friends present, that God had called him and he was going. Drs. Bullitt and Sherman attended him during his last hours, and many friends and relatives gave kindly aid in nursing and helping to put him away. He was a man of noble spirit, kind and generous to all, and was very close in his friendship.

McCARROLL—Mrs. M. H. McCARROLL was born February 4, 1827, and died May 29, 1889. Sister McCarroll was a member of the Presbyterian Church the greater part of her life. Being thrown into a community where there was no church of her own, she united with the Methodist Church, where she spent the last few years of her life very happy in the love of God.

Sister McCarroll was a true Christian in every sense of the word, and she died in great peace, and has gone to join loved ones above, where many have been waiting and watching for her for a long time. She leaves children and grand-children and a large circle of friends to mourn their loss. We commend them to the One who said to her, Come up higher. May they all live as she has lived, so that their last days may be as hers!

R. A. BURROUGHS.

McVOY—W. J. McVOY died at his home, Hermanville, Miss., August 28, 1889, aged sixty years. Bro. McVoy joined the Methodist Church in 1885. His sufferings were very great indeed, but amid all his pain he would say, "Not a pain do I feel; I am on the boat bound now for a bright land." The day of his death he requested some of his friends to come around his bedside and sing to him of the beautiful land, where he would soon be at rest. He was among the brave soldiers of Gen. Forest, and the many scars on his body bore evidence of how faithfully he served his country. None who ever knew him knew him to wrong his fellow-man; a kind husband and a true friend. When one secured his friendship, it was till death severed him from him forever.

D.

BURNETT—CHARLIE HARRISON BURNETT was born in Smith county, Miss., August 12, 1876, and was buried July 18, 1889, at the Cedar Grove Graveyard. His death was caused by drowning in Loaf river, July 17, 1889. His presence is missed when we see the vacant seat in the home circle and Sunday school room. His father's family are all Methodists. We all miss him, but will try to meet him in heaven.

A. C. FLOWERS, P. C.

REGAN—Died, near Rocky Springs, SIDNEY LESTER, infant son of J. A. and M. E. Regan.

Another tender bud has been entwined in that unfading wreath of immortality. Another little one added to that angelic band, who ever chant praises around the throne of God in heaven. All was done that an attentive physician, loving hearts, and willing hands could do; but, alas! in vain. He drooped and faded each day, until the precious blue eyes closed in death; and the white-winged messenger that had lingered near so long, bore away on his snowy wings the pure spirit that we loved so well. Dear little Sidie, our household pet; his sweet smile we can never forget. How often in the twilight hour the image of that sweet face returns. As I gazed upon that loved form, lying in the little casket, he seemed not dead, but sleeping among the flowers. I felt that we should not grieve, for our darling, with an angel brother and other loved ones, was now basking in the sunlight of that bright, beautiful heaven, waiting and watching for me.

MOTHER.

WILES—Mrs. MARGIE WILES—(nee Grant) died at her home, near Phœnix, Yazoo county, Miss., September 4, 1889. Born of Methodist parentage on July 17, 1842, she early enlisted in the church of her inheritance. Assuming the vows of baptism and repentance at the age of seventeen, she ever afterward walked "worthy of the vocation" wherewith she was called. A handsome and beautiful maiden; a chaste, refined and sweet-spirited woman; of untiring filial devotion; a kind and thoughtful friend; a model wife; a considerate stepmother; a consistent Christian was she. Her connubial life was short, having been married to Capt. William W. Miles on May 1, 1888. She filled up her sphere in life to its fullness, and died of congestion, and was laid away by sorrowing friends and loved ones from earthly sight. "Lover and friend hast thou put far from me, and mine acquaintance into darkness."

A large circle of friends and relatives mourn her departure, but hope to see her again, "when the mists have cleared away."

THOS. A. HOLLOMAN.

SPAIN—WALTER SPAIN died August 23, 1889, after a short illness of one week, aged seventeen years, two months and thirteen days. He bore his suffering with patience and fortitude, and was conscious to the last. He was a member of the Methodist Protestant Church. When the summons came, he was ready and willing to go.

Walter was obedient to his parents, a genial and loving brother, a true and noble friend. He will be sadly missed by all, in the school-room and in the Sunday-school; but, greatest of all, in the family circle. Oh! who can describe this feeling of sadness, that is hovering around the bereaved family. They can only look to him who "doeth all things wisely," to be comforted in their sad bereavement. How hard it is to realize that one who was with us a short time ago is no longer with us on earth; but we have the sweet assurance that he has gone to that "beautiful home over there," where he will watch and wait for the loved ones he left behind.

May God guide the parents, brother and sisters in their trouble, and may they live so they will meet their loved one in the "sweet by-and-by," where parting is unknown.

A SCHOOLMATE.

JOHNSON—(nee Cason) was born in South Carolina, August 11, 1821, and professed religion and joined the Methodist Church while a young woman; was married to T. M. Hubbard, Dec. 16, 1840, who was a good man (my first Sunday-school superintendent and class leader), to whom was born ten children. Bro. Hubbard died September 12, 1856, and she was afterward married to J. O. Johnson, February 15, 1859, to whom was born three children, all dying in infancy. Sister Johnson was a sensible, true, good woman, loved by all who knew her. She died May 16, 1889, leaving four of her first children and their kind stepfather to mourn their irreparable loss.

A Future Industry.

The future possibilities of electricity, applied to locomotive purposes, makes one fairly dazed with the impossibility of grasping the subject. Much has been said and written in regard to the application of electric power to street railways for the transportation of passengers, and this especial branch of electric power has already developed into a great industry, the size of which is appreciated by few. The application of electric power to the transportation of merchandise in our great cities is as yet a terra incognita, though its possibilities are even greater than the street railway service. An electric street car can, under skillful management, be operated cheaper than one drawn by horses. It requires three times the power to propel a vehicle over a stone pavement that it does on rail or iron roadways. Horses can not draw heavy loads on iron roadways because of the difficulty of obtaining a sure footing. On an iron roadway an electric locomotive can draw a load for less money than horses could draw the same load on the best stone pavement. The expenditure for cartage in the city of New York each year reaches the enormous sum of $100,000,000.

At some future day, not far distant, we hope, when the public are sufficiently aroused to the importance of this question, a certain width of our great thoroughfares all over the city will be given up to an iron roadway, on which self-propelled electric vans may noiselessly carry on the great traffic which now offends our ears, wears out horseflesh, and has been but little improved up to the present time since the days of the Cæsars. In fact, we aver that with our boasted improvements of the nineteenth century, it requires more expenditure of horse-power to draw a ton of merchandise a mile in the streets of New York than it did in Rome in the early days of the Empire.—Electrical Review.

From London to Paris in Two Hours.

The wonderful "Water Railway," as exhibited in Paris, although looking very much like a flight of fancy, may, if it be found at all practicable, prove a neck-and-neck competitor with the electric railway for high speed railways. This extraordinary invention has a carriage without wheels, sliding upon a grooved iron rail. Water at high pressure is forced under the slide blocks; this raises the carriage slightly, and distributes itself in a finely divided state under the block, reducing the friction practically to nothing, so that the carriage may be moved by the pressure of the forefinger. High-pressure water taps, distributed along the permanent way, are directed against a rack under the carriages, and force the train along at a speed, it is alleged, of 80 to 120 miles an hour, and the chairman of the company owning the invention contemplates a journey from London to Paris (when the channel tunnel is completed) in two hours. High-speed traction is in the air, and various schemes are afloat to still further annihilate distance, an essential part of such schemes being the use of stationary engines at points along the line. The scheme of this kind which uses electricity as the propelling force, has, it appears, already a week or two ago been practically tried in America, where enormous speeds, three or four times that of our express trains, are mentioned. While mechanical difficulties of an apparently insurmountable nature seem to arise at the suggestion of such speeds, there are not wanting engineers who believe in the possibility of both these undertakings, and great interest must attach to the experiments, which may lead to the development of railways working at speeds almost undreamt of, except in the scientific romances of the present day.—Electrical Engineer.

The People

are not slow to understand that, in order to warrant their manufacturers in guaranteeing them to benefit or cure, medicines must possess more than ordinary merit and curative properties. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the only blood medicine sold, through druggists, under a positive guarantee that it will benefit or cure or money paid for it will be returned. In all blood, skin and scalp diseases, and for all scrofulous affections, it is specific.

A NEW TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is that a simple remedy has been discovered which permanently cures the most aggravated cases of these distressing diseases by a few simple applications made (two weeks apart) by the patient at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free by A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 West King Street, Toronto, Canada.

—Times-Democrat, September 24.

For over fifty years Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has cured coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, throat and lung affections. It is the regular prescription of a physician of extensive practice, who, after prescribing it for twenty years, was induced by the gratifying results to make it a proprietary medicine. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar soon became known as the best remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Why? Because it has merit and will cure. A. C. Hafflenger, Philadelphia, says: "I know a man suffering with his lungs who was in the hospital a year without benefit. I induced him to take Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and to-day he is well. I know it saved his life." Try it.

To explain to him who loves not is but to give him the more plentiful material for misinterpretation.—Thos. Wingfold.

The clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese of New York has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and The Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

From Most Rev. Bishop Ryan, of Philadelphia.

I can testify to the efficacy of J. & C. Maguire's Cundurango, it having been my favorite medicine for several years past. I believe it to be the best Anti-Bilious Cathartic and Corrector of Liver, Blood and Kidney derangements that can be taken, and its general use in families would no doubt avert attacks of sickness.

P. J. RYAN.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The investigation of the bonded debt of this State has led to the disclosure that constitutional bonds of nearly half a million face value, which ought to be in the Treasury, as they were never issued, can not be found. The discovery of some of these bonds in banks shows they were negotiated.

At Syracuse, N. Y., last week, the John Grouse Memorial College for women, the gift of the late John Grouse to Syracuse University, was dedicated. The building cost about $500,000 and is considered one of the finest college buildings in the country.

The Chickamauga Memorial Association was organized, on September 21, at Crawfish Springs, on the edge of the battlefield of Chickamauga. The organization is composed of Union and Confederate veterans.

New York City had a $500,000 fire on September 21.

The United States steamship Pensacola has been detailed to convey the members of the solar eclipse expedition to St. Paul de Loando. This is the mission which it was intended should be performed by the Baltimore. The expedition will sail from New York early in October.

Gen. R. A. Alger, Gen. O. M. Poe, and other distinguished Michigan men, spent September 20 in Atlanta. They came from the reunion at Chattanooga and are on a prospecting tour with a view to investment. Gen. Alger has purchased considerable property in Tennessee.

At an election in Oklahoma City, on September 21, a riot occurred. As it provided for the immediate ousting of the present city government, the United States troops under the authority of General Merritt prevented the election. Nine of the leaders were arrested on the charge of conspiring against the authority of the United States and city governments.

The signal service has under consideration the adoption of a new signal to take the place of the cautionary signal now in use along the coast. It is a yellow pennant and is intended to signify that the service has information of value to mariners.

Congressman Merrill, of Kansas, has declined the pension commissionership, made vacant by the resignation of Corporal Tanner.

Secretary Rusk, of the Department of Agriculture, and party were in Kansas last week inspecting the sorghum sugar making.

The Colorado Mining Exchange adopted a resolution to investigate the constitutionality of the act restricting the coinage of silver, and appointed a committee of three with authority to employ the necessary legal counsel.

The United States government has stopped the sale of liquor in Guthrie, I. T. Twenty-two whisky smugglers were arrested there on September 20.

A heavy shock of earthquake occurred in Healdsburg, Cal., on September 21. No damage reported.

H. C. Hoffman Post of the Grand Army of the Republic, of Elmira, N. Y., has unanimously adopted a series of resolutions in condemnation of the administration for demanding the resignation "of our honest and honorable comrade, James Tanner, of whose integrity and loyalty there can be no question."

FOREIGN.

The owners of the Canadian vessels which have been seized by United States cruisers for sealing in Behring Sea have advised the governor general, Lord Stanley, now en route for British Columbia, that they will take advantage of his visit to protest formally against the inaction of the British government in not protecting their interests, and to urge upon him the necessity for immediate action, if the loyalty of Canadians to the British flag is to be maintained.

With the object of assisting Great Britain and Germany in suppressing the slave trade the Sultan has issued an edict empowering the commanders of English and German warships to search all Zanzibar dhows and other boats.

The constant squabbles between Mr. Edwards, the United States consul at Berlin, and the merchants have resulted in a formal complaint being sent to the Foreign Office by the syndics of the Merchants' Society regarding the consulate's delay of business and uncivil treatment.

A landslide occurred at Quebec last week, causing much damage. Twenty-five bodies have been recovered from the ruins.

The British war ship Lily struck a rock off Point Armor and sank. Seven of her crew were lost. The vessel is a total wreck. Considerable money and valuables went down with her. Nothing whatever was saved.

Fifty retired officers of the French army, who were formerly comrades of Gen. Boulanger, have presented the General with an address protesting against his prosecution by the government.

The account published by the Russian control administration for the fiscal year of 1888 show that the government's receipts exceeded the expenditures by 30,000,000 roubles.

Mail advices from the Congo are reassuring. The Arabs maintain a cordial attitude and navigation is uninterrupted.

Scarlet fever has become epidemic in Birmingham, England. The situation is very serious. Most of the schools are closed. The hospitals are so crowded with patients that auxiliary wards must be opened.

The cotton manufacturers of Lancashire propose to close all their mills for a fortnight in the hope that such action will destroy the corner in cotton. The Operatives' Association has given its assent to the plan.

Disastrous storms have been reported as sweeping throughout Mexico. The destruction of crops and loss of cattle have been very great.

The elections held in France, on September 22, were attended with much excitement. The results as announced indicate that Boulanger's cause has been irretrievably lost.

"DENIQUE CŒLUM."

BY HORATIUS BONAR, D. D.

Angel voices sweetly singing,
Echoes through the blue dome ringing,
News of wondrous gladness bringing:
Ah! 'tis heaven at last!

What a city! what a glory!
Far beyond the brightest story
Of the ages old and hoary:
Ah! 'tis heaven at last!

Christ himself the living splendor,
Christ the sunlight mild and tender,
Praises to the Lamb we render:
Ah! 'tis heaven at last!

Now at length the veil is rended,
Now the pilgrimage is ended,
And the saints their thrones ascended:
Ah! 'tis heaven at last!

Broken death's dread bands that bound us,
Life and victory around us;
Christ the King himself hath crowned us:
Ah! 'tis heaven at last!

To the Friends of the Bible in Louisiana and Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I ask for space in your paper to lay before the readers thereof the following statement recently sent out through one of its general secretaries by the American Bible Society; and, should the space be granted, I truly hope the statement will be carefully read by every friend of the Bible in Louisiana and Mississippi:

To the Friends of the American Bible Society:

In the last annual report it was announced that the re-supply of the United States, which had then been in progress for six years, was drawing to a close; and it was confidently expected that it would be completed during the year. This expectation has not been realized. Some of the auxiliaries, especially those centering in the large cities, have not completed the canvass of their fields; while the resources at the Parent Society have not been sufficient to employ the men necessary to carry this work to a successful termination.

It is well understood that no agency could be employed which can carry the scriptures into every home, in such a country as this, and obtain for them a cordial welcome. Some will not receive the Bible, while there are other families to whom it must remain a sealed book because of their inability to read.

The natural growth of population, the increase by immigration, and the constant changes taking place, render it necessary to have the same counties canvassed again and again. Left to themselves for a few years, the ratio of destitution increases so that the second canvass reveals almost as great destitution as the first. Constant labor, unremitting effort, can alone keep the Scriptures in the hands and homes of the people, in a country which is increasing so rapidly in population, especially when that population is of such a diverse character.

The Word of God must not only be carried to the frontier settlements, but must also be distributed in the streets and alleys of our large cities. It is not merely where the homes are scattered and remote from each other, and where the people can be reached only by the colporteur, that destitution is to be found; but also in the teeming population of the tenement districts of the large cities, where the population of a village is often concentrated into a single block. To supply the rural districts, and leave our cities unsupplied, is not consistent either with philanthropy or patriotism. The more dense the population the more corrupt it will become, without the leavening influence of the Bible.

Careful investigation in the large cities has demonstrated that too much has been taken for granted respecting the supply of the people with the Bible. Because missionaries are numerous, and mission Sunday-schools abundant, it has been concluded that the Bible, as a matter of course, must be found in every home where it would be received. But this is very far from being the case. American families in large numbers have been found destitute of even a portion of the Scriptures, while in some cases more than one-half the foreign families (not including Roman Catholics) have been found in the same condition.

The Board of Managers, while this great destitution exists, can not announce the completion of a work which was to embrace all parts of our land. They, however, call attention to what has been done, what it has cost the Society, and also to the encouragement they have received in the prosecution of this great work, as represented by church collections and individual gifts:

During the seven years of this special effort, the colporteurs employed at the expense of the Parent Society visited two million seven hundred and eighteen thousand two hundred and sixty-six families; of these, three hundred and seventy-four thousand one hundred and seventy-seven were found without the Bible in their homes, and two hundred and eighty thousand three hundred and sixty-two gladly received it by sale or gift, besides one hundred and fifty-one thousand three hundred and sixty-seven individuals.

To supply these families and individuals with the Scriptures, one million two hundred and sixty-four thousand five hundred and sixty-four copies of Scriptures, of the value of $486,014 51, were sold and donated. (981,685, of the value of $415,623 71, were sold; and 282,879, of the value of $70,390 83, were donated.) The salaries and expenses of the colporteurs, including freight on books, amounted to $371,477 22; and adding to this the cost of the books donated makes a total expenditure of $444,868 05 for this department of the Society's work.

But the Board has not relied alone on this effective agency. Wherever the auxiliaries were ready to engage in the work they have been liberally aided by grants of books, as have also the various missionary organizations. The value of the books granted during these seven years has amounted to $196,526 93; and the discounts on sales, chiefly to auxiliaries, have amounted to $143,196 95: making a total of $784,591 93 expended for benevolent work in the home field.

While we have no report of the families, Sunday-schools, and individuals which have been supplied through the grants made to others than our own auxiliaries, we can report in part the work done by the auxiliaries during this period, which is as follows:

Families visited by them	2,949,594
Families found without the Scriptures	299,783
Families found without the Scriptures supplied	139,257
Individuals in addition	120,890

Or, as the total results of this fourth re-supply:

Families visited	5,668,860
Families found without the Scriptures	658,960
Families found without the Scriptures supplied	478,539
Individuals in addition	271,757

These results are both satisfactory and encouraging, but much more could have been accomplished had the churches responded as liberally as was hoped when this work was first undertaken.

The following will show the benevolent receipts of the Society during this period, exclusive of legacies:

From churches and individuals	$216,914 51
From auxiliaries, after doing the work in their own fields	246,941 98
Making a total of	$463,856 49

—or $320,735 44 less than the amount expended in this important work in the home field.

The Board would earnestly call the attention of the friends of the Bible to these startling facts, as it must be apparent to all that the work can not be conducted on the liberal scale which the highest welfare of the country demands unless it receives more generous support. Only a little more than half the amount necessary to prosecute this work on even a limited scale has been contributed. During the last four years the Board were deterred from pushing the work with the same vigor with which it was inaugurated, on account of the meagre responses to their appeals.

It is evident to all that this work could not have been accomplished had it not been for some large legacies which had come to the Society, and which remained as a temporary investment. But this accumulation of a series of years has been almost exhausted, while the income of the Society from this source is gradually diminishing. The demand for the Scriptures in the foreign field is increasing; the work in the home field is only about half accomplished. Territories are becoming States; new Territories are being opened up. The wave of immigration is not diminishing. Will the churches and lovers of the Bible supply the funds for the work?

No less than $200,000 could be wisely expended this year in the home field, and an equal amount in the foreign field. Shall we receive it?

ALEX. M'LEAN, Cor. Sec'y.

It is to be hoped that the above statement will be copied by every paper in Louisiana and Mississippi that is favorable to Bible distribution, and that it will lead every Protestant congregation and multitudes of individuals in the two States named to contribute something to the noble work referred to therein. Since the present general canvass of our whole country was commenced by the American Bible Society six years ago, no similar region of country in the Union has had a larger work done in it than that of Louisiana and Mississippi, and it is to be hoped that the good people of these two States will show their appreciation of this great work in a practical way. Let every congregation take a collection, and every individual who can send a contribution. Surely every congregation of believers and every individual believer ought to feel under some obligation to help put the Bible in the homes of the poor of our own country and in the hands of the perishing heathen? Nearly all of this kind of work, so far as it regards the Protestant Churches on this continent, is being done either directly or indirectly by the American Bible Society. Then will not everyone who loves the Bible and humanity help this noble Society in its Heaven-appointed mission of spreading the Word of God—that Word whose entrance giveth light all over the earth? Multitudes of our people in our own land and millions of perishing heathens are without the Word of Life. Will our people, or will they not, help furnish them with it?

Contributions can be sent either to the undersigned, at 163 Camp street, New Orleans; or to William Foulke, Bible House, Astor Place, New York.

The Location of the Methodist College.

I have no pecuniary interest in the location of the proposed college, nor have I any sons to educate. Its location could not affect my personal interest in any way. The only interest I feel in its location is as a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who wishes to see the greatest good to the greatest number dispensed by the institution.

Having resided in the State for over fifty years, I am pretty well acquainted with the members of the Mississippi Conference, and also know something of the localities which have been suggested as eligible for its location; and, after considering the advantages and disadvantages of each, I am satisfied that I but express the opinion of a large majority of that Conference when I say that Brandon, Rankin county (all things considered), is the place where the Mississippi Methodist College should be located.

Health is a consideration that must not be overlooked; and Brandon is noted for its health more so than any other place suggested. There is no local cause to affect its health. It is claimed to be the most elevated point on the railroad between the Mississippi river and the Alabama line. Persons coming from Jackson on the cars in summer are frequently heard to mention the grateful change in the atmosphere when ascending the hill from the depot. The water is excellent freestone, and there is also a mineral well there which, it is claimed, has made some wonderful cures. From what I can learn, there are more old people there than at any other place of its size in the South. There are several over eighty-two, and many more upwards of seventy-five. A few years ago an old settler died there, aged ninety-three, and another aged eighty-seven.

Brandon is as conservative as any place in the South. The people are intelligent and hospitable. Her pride has been to have educational advantages for their girls, and to have good buildings for public worship. The Brandon Female College has been in successful operation many years, and is noted for its thoroughness in equipping its pupils for the practical duties of life. The Episcopalians, Baptists, Presbyterians and Methodists have each a sightly and well-equipped church. Religious services are held every Sabbath in the Methodist Church—in the others not so often. Each has a flourishing Sunday-school. The colored people have a Methodist Church and a Baptist Church, and also good Sunday-schools. The people in the town and in the vicinity go to church; and, though all are not religious, they are generally moral and well behaved. One fact, as I am informed, should not be omitted; and that is, that since it was settled there have been fewer homicides committed there than at any other place of its size in the State. But very few have lost their lives there by violence. The atmosphere does not seem to favor the shedding of blood for the leading citizens have ever been a law-abiding people.

The college should be accessible and easily reached. On that score Brandon is more so than any place not on the Illinois Central railroad, and as easily reached as that. In going to Brandon from any point on the Mobile and Ohio railroad, or on the New Orleans and Northeastern road, only one change would be made, and that at Meridian. In going from any point on the Illinois Central road, the Little R., or the Yazoo road, only one change, and that at Jackson. In going from any point on the Valley road, only one change, and that at Vicksburg.

Rankin is a "dry" county, having voted against the sale of liquors under the local option law; and the town of Brandon is as sober a place as can be found of its size anywhere.

Brandon has always had a fair trade from the surrounding counties south, and keeps good stocks of goods, and buys cotton and all produce. The surrounding country has always afforded abundant country produce, and living is as cheap there as anywhere.

It may be said that Brandon will not give enough money to secure the location. Well, if it is money that controls it, she will be left out: but if it is to educate young men for the ministry who are too poor to go beyond the limits of the State, and who are yearning for such an institution within their reach, and to build up an institution that will dispense its blessings among the poorer people of our denomination—then Brandon has superior claims to any other. Look on the map, and see the number of counties east of Pearl river and south of the V. and M. railroad, where there are hundreds and thousands of Methodists who have no college near them to educate their boys, and who would gladly avail themselves of the Methodist College if located at so accessible a point as Brandon. There are many institutions of learning in North Mississippi. The people of that Conference are much better off in this world's goods, I suppose, than the people in the Mississippi Conference; and if either has to be put to any inconvenience in reaching the college, let it be those who can better afford to pay the additional cost of transportation. The people of the piney woods counties have struggled with poverty many years; but have, with true courage, fought the battle of life manfully and as best they could, with no aid from outsiders. They feel a deep interest in this college, and will give all they are able. They are loyal and true Methodists; and some of the brightest and best pulpit orators and efficient preachers our connection can boast came from that region.

Now, that an opportunity occurs, and all these things being equal, should not our Christian brethren open up to our piney woods boys a chance to equip themselves as they desire, for the Master's work, by locating the college at Brandon?

Let what may occur, I hope that no cause shall be given to suspect that the location of that college was influenced by any other consideration than that of a sincere desire to promote the cause of Christian education, and bestow its blessings when it is most needed and where it will be most appreciated.

A METHODIST.

Entire Sanctification.

BY B. CARRADINE, D. D.

The following are some of my reasons for writing these articles:

First, I am trying to reach a class that, like myself, have lived in a kind of bondage all their Christian lives; have longed for perfect spiritual rest, and knew not how to obtain it. I speak to them.

Then there is such a thing as a rising generation. If we are not to declare openly that which our elders and superiors have known beforehand, what is to become of this advancing host of young people? Such a policy would put an end to the gospel.

Still, again, there are occasional articles in the ADVOCATE striking at and ridiculing the doctrine of entire sanctification. Some of them remind me of Joab's interview with Abner. In all conscious personal weakness and unworthiness I appear in these columns, pleading for an experience that fills me and thrills me at this writing, and as a defender and upholder of a doctrine that I know now to be true, because it has been transformed into an experience in my soul, and become a blessed reality in my life.

It has been suggested that what I call facts in my experience may be fancies. Glory be to God! it is no fancy that Christ has kept me from sin for four months, and that my soul in all that time has been filled with perfect peace and rest and love. It is not a fancy that God has in a moment lifted me into a state which I have been vainly trying to reach for a number of years. These are facts that stand out like Mt. Blanes above the range of ordinary experiences. "One thing I know, that whereas I was blind—now I see." One experience in the converted or sanctified life is worth ten thousand theories.

Furthermore, it is proper to say that there is not such general and accurate knowledge among the people of sanctification as some think. The fact of the blessing may be believed in, but the manner of obtaining it be unknown, because unproclaimed. Hundreds of Methodists in this city had never heard until this year a sermon on entire sanctification, in which the blessing was held up as obtained instantaneously through consecration and faith. The Carondelet Street congregation, one of the largest and noblest in the connection, listened with wonder; not at the doctrine, but at the method of obtaining the blessing. Some doubted and drew back; but others, to the number of thirty, have entered into the sanctified life, among whom I number some of my best lady members, and such men as J. G. Grant, our publisher, and D. L. Mitchel, the business manager of the ADVOCATE.

There are multiplied thousands in the land who know not the way of entrance into the sanctified life, and thousands more who are in ignorance of sanctification itself. Ask them what it is, and nine out of ten will reply that it is growth in grace, while the Scripture plainly teaches that growth in grace is man's work, and sanctification is the work of God. Because of these things I can not but write and speak of the things I have seen and felt. If I followed the inclinations of my heart, I would enter at once into the description of the sanctified life as I have realized it for the last four months; but, before doing this, will treat the subject in a negative way.

Sanctification is not regeneration. The very words teach us that. They are not the same, do not mean the same thing, and are not used synonymously in the Bible, hymn book, standards, religious biographies, and testimony of Christians. They are felt to represent two different things. Justification means pardon, conversion, a turning about; regeneration means renovation, reproduction, entering upon a new life, while sanctification means the act of being made holy. If regeneration and sanctification mean the same, and include the same work, then I. Corinthians i. 30, becomes senseless, and should read thus: "But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us regeneration and regeneration and regeneration and regeneration." But the two words are different, and refer to different works wrought supernaturally in the soul, and so reads: "Who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption." The word "righteousness" should be translated "justification." Again, the two words, representing different works, follow each other in point of time. To the Thessalonians, who were Christians, and possessed joy in the Holy Ghost, Paul writes that God wanted them to be sanctified. He said the same thing, in substance, to the Romans, the Corinthians, and to the Hebrews. Sanctification, or Christian perfection, comes after regeneration. The Savior himself recognized this order, for while in the fifteenth chapter of John he tells his disciples that they are clean through his word, yet a little while after he informs them that they must yet be sanctified, which sanctification, we remember, took place on Pentecost.

The hymn book observes the same order. Open it and read the subjects as divided. First is the Gospel Call, then Penitential Exercises, then Justification, and then Sanctification. The same order is observed in our theological works; sanctification follows regeneration.

But clearer and more convincing than all is one's own experience. On the twelfth day of July, 1874, God converted my soul, and fifteen years afterward, at nine o'clock in the morning, of June 1, 1889, He sanctified my soul and body. It was a different work from the first, and a different experience. My consciousness testified to the fact of the difference, and so did the Holy Ghost. The emphasized words above are full of significance. A calm settles upon soul and body. The inward battle and tumult have ended. The flesh does not lust against the Spirit, as formerly, but is led by the Spirit and restrained by the Spirit, calmly and easily and without the fearful strugglings of other days. This experience alone gives to sanctification a peculiarity strikingly different from regeneration.

Again, entire sanctification is not the deepening or perfecting or extension of regeneration. Regeneration is a perfect work in itself; needs no improvement, and is given none. Sanctification has no quarrel with regeneration, either in the Bible or Christian experience, and is not in antagonism with it in any respect whatever, although some would so persuade the people. It aims to do another thing, and accomplishes another work altogether. It removes something from the soul that has been a constant trouble and hindrance to the regenerated man. It kills inbred sin, or, as Dr. Whedon calls it, the "sinwardness" in us; or, as some would recognize it, the "prone-to-wander feeling." That is the work that sanctification does; it removes or kills the "sinwardness" or prone-to-wander movement of the heart. It is idle to say that regeneration does this, when Christians in their experience universally testify to the fact that after conversion they still feel the stirrings and movement of sin within them. The sanctified man tells you that this is not the case with him. That dark medium upon which Satan and the world operated, to the inward disturbance and unrest of the child of God, is utterly removed or destroyed. Entire sanctification did that work, and can alone do it. My will may be rectified in regeneration; but what if sin be something more than an act of the will? It certainly seems so when we behold it transmitted from Adam down to us without the consent of our wills, and exhibiting itself in children too young to exercise their judgment and moral powers. May not sin have left part of its life in the tendencies of the body, and exist also as a transmitted nature apart from my personal sin and guilt? Let Nos. 7 and 20 of our Articles of Religion answer. When I am born again I stand a regenerate creature in the presence of wayward tendencies of the flesh, and this dark element called original sin, that has been indescribably, but certainly, sent down from Adam to us, and interwoven in our natures. It is not long before the young convert finds out its presence and power. Why is it there in a regenerated life? Because there is no new birth or renovation for original sin. It is hopelessly cursed of God now and forever. It has to be removed or destroyed. Spiritual Agags have to be hewed to pieces—not changed into Israelites. Regeneration renews my soul, imparts power to resist and conquer sin; but does not rid me of the presence of sin in the heart. This is done by another and distinct work of the Holy Ghost; and that work is entire sanctification. This marvelous work is one of removal or destruction. Both ideas are taught in the Bible. It is called a circumcision—i. e., a cutting out and off of something within our natures. And, again, it is called a baptism of fire. We all know what fire does—that it consumes. Many difficulties may be urged by the skeptical; but the experience of the sanctified, without exception, is that sin has been removed from or destroyed in the heart. This is one of the secrets of the deep rest and perfect peace that constantly fills the soul of one who has received the blessing.

Let us sum up the thought. We, as Methodists, believe in the existence within us of what we call in Article No. 7 original and actual sin—that is, the sin of Adam, and our own personal transgressions. In justification, which means pardon, my own actual or personal sins are forgiven, but not original sin. How can I be pardoned for what I did not commit? How could I ask God to forgive me for what I did not do? And how could God, in truth and justice, grant me pardon for what I had not done? Justification evidently can not reach original sin, and the

THE FAMILY BIBLE.

This book is all that's left me now;
Tears will unbidden start;
With faltering lip and throbbing brow
I press it to my heart.
For many generations past
Here is our family tree;
My mother's hand this Bible clasped,
She, dying, gave it me.

Ah! well do I remember those Whose names these records bear—
Who round the hearthstone used to close
After the evening prayer.
And speak of what these pages said—
In tones my heart would thrill;
Though they are with the silent dead.
Here they are living still.

My father read this holy book
To brothers, sisters dear;
How calm was my poor mother's look,
Who loved God's Word to hear!
Her angel face—I see it yet!
What thronging memories come!
Again that little group is met
Within the halls of home.

Thou truest friend man ever knew,
Thy constancy I've tried;
Where all were false I found thee true,
My counselor and guide!
The mines of earth no treasures give
That could this volume buy;
In teaching me the way to live
It taught me how to die.

In Memoriam.

REV. GEORGE M. LIVERMAN.

Rev. George Mathews Liverman was born in Jefferson county, Ala., December 29, 1838, and died, as heretofore stated in these columns, on March 3, 1889, in Meridian, Texas.

Bro. Liverman was the youngest child of Jonathan Liverman, Sr., by a second marriage with Martha, daughter of James Boyd, a Revolutionary soldier of 1776. When in his ninth year Bro. Liverman lost his father by death, and in the following autumn his mother removed to Tuscaloosa county, where he received a part of his primary education; but in less than a year his mother (who had lost her house meantime by fire) moved to Newton, Miss., and four years later to Scott county, Miss. In 1854 his guardian, a Mr. Metcalf, of Scott county, arranged for his education in view of his becoming a teacher. The triumphant death of his Christian mother in 1857 greatly affected young Liverman. Three months thereafter, while at school, he was converted in October of the same year; joined the Baptist Church (that being the church to which his parents belonged), and was immersed by Rev. W. A. Hudson. Soon after his conversion Bro. Liverman felt his call to the ministry. At the same time he was impressed with the importance of a finished education as a necessary preparation for that high calling; but while he was planning to accomplish this purpose the late Civil War put an end to all hope in that direction for the time. In the spring of 1861 he enlisted in the army of the Confederacy, and was mustered into service in Company E, Sixth Regiment Mississippi Volunteers, which after drilling a few weeks was sent to the front. When the Sixth Regiment was holding a position at the battle of Corinth, under a galling cross-fire, Bro. Liverman was among the remnant of eighty-four which, of that large regiment, had not been swept from the field; and that exhausted and battered handful of men made two gallant charges upon the enemy the same day on which they had been so decimated; in one of which he was wounded by a shell, but soon recovered, and was subsequently in the battles of Shiloh and Port Gibson and the bombardment of Port Hudson. He was twice a prisoner of war; taken first to Altou, Ill., and next to New Orleans and Ship Island. During the war Bro. Liverman continued the religious life that he had entered upon three years before. The company prayer meeting and the chaplain's services at headquarters were fresh in his memory till the end of his life. During a halt, when forming the line of battle on April 3, 1862, he wrote on the leaf of a blank book as follows: "If I get killed, I am perfectly resigned to the will of God. I know I am born to die, and if it is my lot to fall in battle, I know the debt is paid. I do feel that I am at peace with my God and need not fear being harmed by the enemy." * * * "If I get killed, I want this book sent to my brother in Scott county, Miss., and I close, if for the last time in life, feeling and believing that I have discharged my duty before God and man."

After the surrender Bro. Liverman returned to his home with a shattered constitution, and suffered the effects of the strain upon him to the end of life. In the summer of 1865 he taught school; but was so deeply impressed that he was "divinely called to the work of the ministry," that he could not rest. As a member of the Baptist Church there were insuperable difficulties in the way of obtaining license to preach, owing to his avowed opposition to close communion, and his belief that people ought to be baptized according to the dictates of their own consciences. He said: "While these were my honest views, to have made the confession required in order to obtain license would have involved a falsehood. I could not do it." Under these circumstances he made a formal application for a letter of withdrawal, which was refused, and the refusal accompanied by a threat of expulsion for heterodoxy if he persisted in the views above stated; but as no other charge or complaint accompanied the refusal, the Congregational Methodist Church (the only Methodists in that part of Mississippi at the time) accepted it as an admission that his moral character was good, and received him into fellowship. In the fall of 1865 he entered Cooper's Institute in view of further preparation, and on September 1, 1866, he was licensed to preach. On May 12, 1867, he was married to Miss Lavina Y. E. Jones, of Jasper county, Miss. In the summer of 1868 he was called, and in September, of the same year, ordained elder, and appointed to the Smyrna and Union Seminary Churches. In the winter of 1869-70, desiring to make a more full and complete consecration of himself to the ministry, he wound up his affairs and pastorate and joined (on recognition of his orders) the Mississippi Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He served the Holmesville and Magnolia circuit in 1870, Rankin circuit in 1871, and Forest circuit in 1872. In December, 1872, he was transferred to the Louisiana Conference, and has served the following works, viz: Floyd and Delhi circuit in 1873, Floyd circuit in 1874, South Bossier circuit in 1875 and 1876, North Bossier circuit in 1877, De-Soto circuit in 1878 and 1879, Caddo circuit in 1880 and 1881, Evergreen circuit in 1882, and Coushatta circuit in 1883. In 1884 he was superannuated. In 1877 he lost his first wife, and was married, February 25, 1880, to Miss Naaaie Hungerford, of Keachie, La. In 1875 he was elected principal of the Fillmore Male and Female Academy. In 1879 he completed the beautiful church in Keachie, which is an ornament to the village and a monument to his memory.

Bro. Liverman was a man of great earnestness, and worked to the extent of his ability to the last. His fervency and pathos in prayer could not fail to impress and carry with him to the throne of grace everyone who loved the Lord Jesus. His sermons were thorough and expository and were delivered with an earnestness that stirred the souls of his congregations. The confidence and respect of all classes gave him a power for good among his acquaintances which few possess. His life was a blessing to the community in which he lived. The news of his death created a profound impression, and the congregation assembled at the memorial service held for him was one of the largest ever seen in this place. Bro. Liverman was frank, fearless and faithful in the expression of his views and in vindication of the doctrines of the Bible. He was a man of faith and fellowship with God. Many times during the months preceding his death he spoke freely to the writer of the fact that his work was done and the confidence with which he looked forward. He said: "For the sake of my wife and children, I should like to live if it is God's will; but he knows best, and it's all with him. His will be done."

A widow and six children mourn the loss of one who was the light of his own home as well as a model for his neighbors. It was not the privilege of his family to be with him in the last hours of his life, but the oft-repeated experience of his "acceptance with God, and readiness to die at any time" for years past, dispels any regrets at not hearing his last testimony.

Some Evangelists.

When I was a younger preacher I assisted with much success in several revivals. The good people said of me: "What he says seems to have so much weight." The fact is, I had noticed the same thing myself. Now, I conducted several protracted meetings alone; had three or four pretty fair squirts of revival, taking into the church from twenty to twice that number at each meeting. You will not be surprised that I began to feel the call to the evangelistic work. I sought an assistant in the way of a singer; found one—one of the best I ever heard, and he was willing to go; yes, he was anxious. The first trip as to time and ground was debated. I thought then, and think yet, we could have moved an average community with considerable ease. We worked together in three or four towns, and the thing seemed to be demonstrated. I think nothing kept me out of the evangelistic work but a little common sense and a good deal of grace. In the first place, there is no such special office in our church. We itinerants are all more or less evangelists. Secondly, my gifts were much magnified by myself.

Now, here is where grace came to my assistance. I began to see that pride, selfishness and, perhaps, indolence, had something to do with the call. I was anxious to see immediate results from my labors. I enjoyed the chase, the victory in capturing the game, more than I did pickling down the meat, and in drying and smoking and preparing it to keep. So as soon as the game was killed, I wanted to leave the drudgery to others and bound off at the sound of the horn to other drives. I enjoyed garnering the grain much more than I did the clearing away the brush, digging up the stumps, plowing among the roots, planting and hoeing and waiting for the early and the latter rain. So I began to see that my evangelistic call was much mixed with a selfish indolence. My indolence made me feel that I was not adapted to the special work of the pastor, so I was disposed to avoid its labors. Then the success in each meeting, and the attending praise, that I tried to despise, really secretly fed my native pride. By grace I made the discovery; so by grace I am an humble itineraat, and am blessed in having many good meetings.

Ans.: As excluded from the Methodist connexion.

From the Work.

WINCHESTER CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: Our protracted meeting at Big Rock has just closed, after a continuance of five days. It was a meeting that increased in interest from its beginning to the close. Bro. R. A. Breland, our pastor, was assisted by D. C. Rawls and H. L. Norton the first two or three days. And on Monday evening Bro. Clark, of the adjoining circuit, came in and preached four sermons. They did us good, and were highly appreciated by all. There were only two accessions to the church—everybody, with the exception of two or three, already being members of some church. There were twelve conversions—all members of the church, several of them having been in the church for a number of years. The church was much strengthened and built up.

Our new parsonage, which was incomplete when the pastor came on the work last winter, has been finished, and is paid for. We are largely indebted to him for the untiring, persevering effort he made in raising money to clear it of debt. He has done a great deal of hard work aside from visiting and preaching.

The temporal, as well as the spiritual, condition of the work has greatly improved since he came on Winchester circuit.

J.

MERIDIAN CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

We have just closed three protracted meetings: one at Chunkey, Concord, and Sucklenu, with good results; ten accessions and many conversions. Our churches failed to seat all who came to hear the Word. We have completed our parsonage, valued at one thousand dollars; forty-one acres of land attached to the home of the preacher who may live on this work, well of good water and good garden. Plenty of peach seed have been planted to make a good orchard in the future. We have a place for corn, horse and buggy. We have a very weak circuit when it comes to raising money for the different objects. Our work will pay assessments made to presiding elder and preacher in charge, or nearly all. When it comes to other assessments, I can say I labor hard to raise the full assessment; but my success is not as good as I would wish. We have worked hard for our paper, and have had but little success, and, Mr. Editor, if we could get our people to take their paper, no assessment would be too great. We find members of the Methodist Church who think their assessment has been paid in full every year, and rejoice over it when they fall short by one-fourth, at least. (They are honest in it.) Would they not be stronger men were they to keep posted in church matters? And how can this be done without reading our church paper and securing annually the Minutes of our Conference? I read not long since the reports that are made annually by every preacher, and gave the amount in full, also the amount of money which was raised for different objects during the year 1888, to an old brother in the Baptist Church. He remarked that the Methodist Church was a grand church; that he did not know that she moved with such understanding. There are many who belong to our church who do not know what a grand church they are in. The more I learn of the church the better I love it.

L. J. JONES, P. C.

MANSFIELD, LA.

MR. EDITOR: To-day closed the revival services in our church at Mansfield, and I want to tell the readers of the ADVOCATE something of the great things the Lord has done for us.

Several weeks ago our pastor, Bro. T. B. White, began a series of sermons directed mainly to the members of our church. He labored faithfully from day to day without any ministerial assistance, except from President McVoy and one or two visiting brethren. His promised help failed to come; but his faith wavered not, and finally, after two weeks of constant preaching, the Rev. L. L. Pickett, of Dangerfield, Texas, came to his aid. Bro. Pickett at once began to preach his favorite doctrine of sanctification. This old, yet new, doctrinal point of Methodism did not fail to arouse much criticism from members as well as outsiders; but one could not listen to his clear and able exposition of the divine Word, and doubt the meaning of the Scriptures on this point. Bro. Pickett's earnestness and enthusiasm inspired us all; aroused sinners and reclaimed backsliders. Many sought the second blessing, as it is called, of perfect love, while a few professed to have found it. About this time Bro. Carradine's article, giving his experience in sanctification, appeared in the ADVOCATE; and naturally, coming from such a source, influenced many to believe. This, supplemented by the reading of "The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life," has caused a wonderful change in the minds of many, and, we trust, in the hearts of some. Who can read that consecrated book, and doubt that the "secret of the Lord is with them that fear him"? The very first lines in the poem of dedication fire the soul of every believer as with a trumpet call—

"Whoso has felt the Spirit of the Highest
Can not confound, nor doubt him, nor deny;
Yea, with one voice, O world, though thou deniest,
Stand thou on that side, for on this am I."

ANNIE GRACE DIDLAKE.

TOPISAW CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I have just returned from a protracted meeting at Pleasant Grove, which began September 1, and lasted five days. Bro. Cowen was unable to attend, as his child was taken sick and died. He kindly asked me to attend the meeting for him. Bro. Watkins came and stayed two days; preached four soul-stirring sermons. The meeting resulted in 19 accessions. Seventeen were received; 2 are to be received at the next meeting. There were 5 adults baptized, and 2 infants baptized. Twelve were admitted on profession of faith. There were some bright conversions. There was also a young men's prayer meeting organized, to meet every week. This place is to be the head of the circuit. The friends here are now about to build a parsonage, to be ready by Conference; so the preacher will have a home next year.

A camp meeting is in prospect; the tabernacle to be built during the winter months.

To God be all the glory!

ROBT. HAVERS.

MARVIN CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: We have been blessed with the outpourings of the Holy Spirit on Marvin circuit this year. I have closed my seventh and last protracted meeting for the year with seventy-two additions to the church. The meetings at Sinai and Richland Academy will long be held in grateful remembrance. At those two places thirty-seven were added to the church, and quite a number were converted who will join the churches. The exact number of conversions in all the meetings is not known. Backsliders were reclaimed and the church wonderfully built up, old difficulties settled, many family altars erected. Some heads of families began to pray with their families and speak in the experience meetings, even before they received the blessing. We have been moving up all along the line. We expect to bring up a full report at Conference, if not ahead on all assessments ordered by the Conference. This is a good circuit, growing in spirituality and liberality. The people are kind and obliging and ready to assist in any church work that their pastor suggests. We have a prayer meeting organized at each church. To the Lord be all the glory!

J. F. ROBINSON, P. C.

HATTIESBURG CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: I have held four protracted meetings on this circuit, resulting in seventy-six accessions, a number converted, and the church greatly revived, and I am glad to say that some of the new converts have gone right to work in the Sunday-school and prayer meetings. The total number of accessions up to date are one hundred and two, and we have greatly improved our church-houses. At Estabuchie we are worshiping in our new house; about fifty dollars more will finish it, which we expect to see done before Conference. Hattiesburg has a large, fine church finished, except painting inside, and the money is being raised to have that done. At Ellisville our house is completed with everything necessary for the comfort of preacher and people. The parsonage is located at Ellisville; a comfortable house and well furnished. Our church at Ellisville raised eighty-five dollars and sent it to Rev. J. M. Weems in Mexico. Finances are well up, preacher and presiding elder paid up to date, and we expect to bring up all our collections ordered by Conference. Everything is on the up grade on this circuit. To God be all the praise!

W. W. SIMMONS.

WAYNESBORO AND STATE LINE CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: We closed a most excellent revival meeting last Sunday night at this place (Waynesboro), having continued eight days. Many were made to shout the praises of God, while all were "quickened" by the blessed Spirit. There were six additions to the church. Rev. J. P. Drake, of Shubuta, was with us most of the time. He has endeared himself to all by the power of his preaching and his holy walk among us. Rev. R. A. Breland, of Winchester, afforded good help, preaching only once; but that one sermon will not be soon forgotten. He drove the nail straight, and in the right place. Rev. Dan Rawls, a local brother, preached once also with telling effect. His "crude" illustrations were like a spear, even to the most thoughtless. May God bless all these brethren! This writer preached twice in the beginning, and four times towards the close. "Praise the Lord!"

E. F. EDGAR.

SCOTLAND CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: We have just closed a meeting at Sweet Water with glorious results. Fifty-three made public profession of saving faith in Christ. Comparatively few joined the church, owing to the fact that many of them were already in the church. Bros. J. B. Bowen, William Hoover, and G. W. Randolph, of Crystal Springs, rendered valuable service in the meeting. Bro. Randolph did most of the preaching, which was in demonstration of the Spirit, and with power. He is a man full of faith and the Holy Ghost. The members of the church were greatly revived and spiritually strengthened. I think the fruit of the sowing on that occasion will be seen after many days. We closed while many were shouting and praising God; while the others were singing, "Happy on the way!"

H. D. HOWELL.

UTICA, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: On the fourth Sabbath in August Bro. William S. Jones and myself commenced a meeting at Rieves' Chapel, Utica charge, which continued six days. Result: seventeen accessions to the church. On the third Sabbath in September I filled my regular appointment at Cayuga, and continued preaching at night until Thursday night. Result: nineteen accessions. Total: two dead churches resurrected, and thirty-six added to the church.

Mississippi Choctaws.

Some weeks ago we copied the resolutions passed by the Brandon District Conference, as published in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, relative to the Choctaw Indians in the bounds of said district, and also a call for help to send them a missionary. The resolutions were copied from our paper into the Indian Citizen, published at Atoka, I. T., and the following sensible comments made on them by Capt. J. S. Stanley, the editor, who is also a Mississippian and a Choctaw. Our Brandon friends will please give it a careful reading:

"The Indians mentioned above are Choctaws and have rights and interests here in the Choctaw Nation coequal with any of us, and they ought to be here; and if they were here, they would have better advantages religiously, temporally, socially, educationally, and every other way.

"We, somehow, think if those people knew the superior advantages they would possess were they here in the Choctaw Nation, they would come, or could be induced to come. If they could be induced to come, and would make application to the Choctaw Nation, we think transportation would be furnished them. We would suggest to our missionary friends that efforts be made in this direction. Those people have no political privileges in that country. They are perfect outcasts so far as politics and society are concerned. They have no future, no spirit, and consequently no character; nor will they ever have over there. Then we would ask, let all efforts be made toward emigrating those people to the Choctaw Nation, where they will not be paupers, outcasts, and aliens; where missionary effort is already organized, and where the present organization is amply sufficient to present the gospel, and also where they will appreciate the gospel when presented to them."

We copy the above from Our Brother in Red, for the information of our friends in Mississippi who are making efforts for the amelioration of the condition of the Indians in their midst. What do Bro. Miller and others say to the plan proposed?

BOOKS.

A SKETCH OF THE LATE ALFRED T. MANN, D. D. By J. O. A. Clark, D. D. Published by J. W. Burke, Macon, Ga. Price, fifty cents.

This is a delightful little book. Dr. Clark has laid us under obligations by sending us this charming bit of biography. We have enjoyed its pages.

THE COMING KINGDOM. By Rev. W. W. Wadsworth. Trow's Printing and Book-binding Company, New York. J. D. Barbee, Nashville, Tenn. Price, $1.

The author in this book discusses the foreign missionary question and movement, and gives the freshest facts and latest statistics from the various fields. Beginning with the Divine Christ, and ending with the Conquering Christ, the author has traversed the whole mission movement and has given the church a book which will quicken her zeal and increase her faithfulness in "preparing the way of the Lord."

PERIODICALS.

—THE BRICKMAKER is a new semi-monthly, devoted to the interests of brick manufacturers, published at 182 Monroe street, Chicago. Price, $1.

—THE HOMILETIC MAGAZINE, for September, has a good table of contents, such as Sermons, Expository Papers, Sermon Outlines, etc. E. B. Treat, New York.

—CASSELL'S FAMILY MAGAZINE, for October, has some good reading both in prose and poetry, and you can "while away" several hours with its pages. Cassell and Company, New York. Price, $1 50.

—FASHION AND FANCY, for the month, is full of fashions and has a good list of fancies. The ladies will enjoy this number, as it goes somewhat into detail as to the fashions for the fall and winter wear. St. Louis, Mo. Price, $3.

—THE MAGAZINE OF ART, for October, contains, Glimpses of Artist Life, by M. H. Spielman; The Barbizon School, by David Croal Thomson; An Artist's Holidays, by J. E. Hodgson; A Stroll through the Peabody Museum at Cambridge, Mass. Cassell and Company, New York. Price, $3 50.

—THE QUIVER, for October, is on our table full of good Sunday and general reading, and beautifully illustrated. How God's House Grew, A Manchester Ministry, Influence, Hands and Hearts, are some of the papers in this number. Cassell & Co., New York. 15 cents a copy; $1 50 a year.

—The MISSIONARY REVIEW OF THE WORLD, for October, has a notable table of contents. This Review contains eight departments: Literature of Missions, Missionary Intelligence, Correspondence from all Parts of the World, International Department, Monthly Concert of Missions, Editorial Notes on Current Topics, Statistics, and Monthly Bulletin of the Progress of Missions. Each department is filled with interesting matter, and the careful reader of this valuable monthly will not be left behind in the missionary march for the conquest of the world. Funk and Wagnalls, New York. Price, $2 a year; single copies, twenty-five cents.

—THE CHAUTAUQUAN, for October, has no likeness to its predecessors save in name and purpose. The conventional magazine form takes the place of the pamphlet form. One hundred and sixty-four pages of matter are given instead of eighty-four. Twelve issues are promised for the volume instead of ten. New type adorns the page. Wire stitching has been substituted for thread. The whole is enclosed in a new cover of attractive design. By comparing The Chautauquan in the present style with former issues its readers will find that they will receive each month fully one-fifth more matter than ever before. Add to this monthly increase in quantity the fact that two issues more will be made each year, and an idea of the increase in quantity of matter will be clear. The price of the magazine has been raised to $2 to cover the expense of the changes and improvements. T. L. Flood, Meadville, Pa.

LESSON II.—October 13.

THE ARK BROUGHT TO ZION.

II. Samuel vi, 1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT.—The Lord loveth the gates of Zion more than all the dwellings of Jacob.—Psa. lxxxvii, 2.

TIME.—B. C. 1042.

PLACES.—Baale (city of Baal, the great Canaanite deity). Another name for Kirjath-jearim (city of forests), identified by Dr. Robinson with the modern Kuryet-el-Enab.

1. Again—It should be, and David again gathered—that is, after he gathered them together, either for his election to the kingdom or for the Philistine war spoken of in verses 17-25. All—The expression all Israel often stands for the representatives or chosen men from all the tribes, who in the present instance numbered thirty thousand. Chosen—Leading, influential.

2. Arose—Made ready. From Baale—The preposition from is probably the error of some ancient copyist. In Chronicles it is went up to Baalah. Probably there is a reference to Kirjath-jearim—that is, city of woods, in Psa. cxxxii, 6, written at this time: "We found it (the ark) in the fields of the wood." To bring up from thence the ark—There seems reason to think (but the restoration of the ark had been the dream of David's youth. (See Psa. cxxxii, 6.) If so, he lived to realize it; and we may be sure that, regarding the act as one of devotion to God, he would delay it no longer than it was absolutely necessary after securing his capital. Whose name is called—Better, which is called by the name, the name of Jehovah of hosts. The ark is specially said to be "called by the name of Jehovah of hosts," because it was the symbol of the covenant between Jehovah and Israel, and because it was the place where he chiefly chose to manifest himself by visible tokens to his people. The cherubim—According to the primitive conception, the cherubim were the bearers of God when he appeared in his glory upon the earth; so, in Ezekiel's vision, they carry the throne of God. They are the "wings of the wind" by which God in the thunder-cloud is borne to the world. Hence they are the witnesses of his presence: wherever they are God is. How appropriate, therefore, were representations of them placed in the tabernacle and table!

3. Upon a new cart—They had no right to set it on a cart of any kind. If David had had a golden chariot to offer, it would have been equally unlawful. But as the Philistines had sent the ark back on a new cart, the Israelites easily imitated their worldly example. The ark should have been carried by hand, by its staves, and by the Levitical family of Kohathites. David should have known the law. Perhaps David was so very sure that what he was doing would be acceptable to God that he had failed to ask divine guidance, and, therefore, needed that this first sign of self-will should be sharply rebuked. House ... that was in Gibeah—Rather, on the hill, as the same word is correctly translated in I. Sam. vii, 1. Some eminence in or near Kirjath-jearim is meant. It is doubtful whether Ahio is a proper name at all. The same consonants with different vowels would mean his brethren, as the LXX. renders the word here, or his brother, as the Vulgate renders it in I. Chron. xiii, 7. Sons of Abinadab—These two sons were either born about the time when the ark was first taken to Abinadab's house, or at a subsequent period; or else the term sons is used, as is frequently the case, in the sense of grandsons. The time since the first arrival of the ark at Abinadab's house, when Eleazar, his son, was appointed to guard it, was about seventy years.

4. Ahio went before—To guide the oxen, while Uzzah, as appears afterward, walked behind, keeping his eyes upon the movements of the ark. These sons of Abinadab evidently lacked a becoming reverence for the ark. From childhood they had seen it in their home, and had become so familiar with the sight as to lose from their minds the sacred associations of its former history.

5. David ... played—Would associate the art that he most loved with the service of God. The best of all that men love best should be so dedicated. All manner of instruments ... of fir wood—This is properly regarded by most commentators as a corruption of the more correct reading of I. Chron. xiii, 8: With all their might and with songs. Psalteries (Nebel)—This instrument was probably composed of strings stretched over a wooden frame. Some authorities make it of the shape of the Greek letter Delta inverted. Timbrels (toph) seem to have denoted, primarily, the tambourine, and, generally, all instruments of the drum kind which were in use among the Israelites. Cornets—A loud-sounding instrument made of horn of a ram or of a chamois (sometimes of an ox); is generally rendered trumpet. Cymbals—Instruments consisting of two convex pieces of metal, which, when struck together, made a loud clanging sound. The sound of these instruments is very sharp and piercing. The Hebrew instruments were probably similar to those of the Egyptians, and of a form exactly resembling those of modern times, though smaller.

6. Nachon's threshing-floor—Nachon is not to be taken as a proper name, rather a fixed threshing-floor, which did not change its place like the summer floors, and, therefore, probably had a roof and a stock of fodder. Nachon (prepared), called the floor of Chidon (I. Chron. xiii, 9), perhaps one word the name of the place, and the other of the proprietor. Put forth his hand—There is reason to suspect that Uzzah had allowed his mind to regard the ark in too familiar a point of view during the years it had been in his charge in a private house, and was not suitably impressed with the reverence exacted by a symbol with which the divine presence was so closely connected. Took hold of it—This was sacrilegious transgression of the law. "The sons of Kohath shall come to bear it; but they shall not touch any holy thing, lest they die." His intention was good, but the act was wrong. Shook it—The use of the Hebrew verb here is universal. In II. Kings ix, 33, used as a transitive verb, it means threw down. So perhaps here. The oxen were threshing or had thrown it down, very likely by turning aside to eat what grain there might lie on the threshing-floor.

7. God smote him there—The long procession went down the defile with music of all kinds till a sudden halt was made at the threshing-floor. At this point, perhaps slipping on the smooth rock, the oxen stumbled, and Uzzah caught hold of the ark, to save it from falling. Suddenly he fell down dead by its side. A long tradition has connected the going forth of the ark with a terrible thunder-storm. (Psa. xlx. 1.) For his error—The error consisted in touching the ark, which, as the symbol of God's presence, none could look at, much less lay hold of it, without peril of life. For transportation, therefore, it was first covered up by the Levites to whom it was committed, and that with faces covered, and carried on staves.

8. David was displeased—The burning of David's anger was not directed against God, but referred to the calamity which had befallen Uzzah, or, speaking more correctly, to the cause of this calamity, which David attributed to himself or to his undertaking. ... On further reflection, David could not fail to discover where the cause of Uzzah's offense, which he had atoned for with his life, really had lain, and that it had actually arisen from the fact that he (David), and those about him, had decided to disregard the distinct instructions of the law with regard to the handling of the ark. Made a breach—Violently interposed in a sudden stroke of divine judgment. He called the name—He took care to perpetuate the remembrance of this stroke by a new name he gave to the place, Perez-uzzah, the breach of Uzzah.

9. How shall the ark ... come to me—Who have been accessory to Uzzah's sin.

10. But David carried it aside—Thrilled with fear and trembling lest the judgments of the Lord were not yet at an end. Harps, cornets, cymbals, psalteries, and timbrels were silenced, and David, in sore distress at what had taken place, caused them to carry the sacred thing into the home of Obed-edom, the Gittite, which happened to be at hand. Obed-edom—Obed-edom was a Levite of the family of the Korahites, who sprang from Kohath, and belonged to the class of Levitical doorkeepers, whose duty it was, in connection with other Levites, to watch over the ark in the sacred tent. The Gittite—So called from the name of his birthplace, the Levitical city of Gath-rimmon in the tribe of Dan.

11. The Lord blessed Obed-edom—See here the courage and faith of Obed-edom; he knew that the presence of the ark had been disastrous to Dagon, and had brought plagues on the Philistines, and that the men of Bethshemesh had been struck dead for looking into it, and that Uzzah had been smitten for touching it; and yet he gladly welcomed it, and honored it for three months, and God blessed him for his faith.

12. David went and brought up the ark—This time having all things done according to the instructions of the law, as the account in I. Chronicles xv more fully shows. Assured that the source of disaster was not the ark, but men's sin. With gladness—Means especially with joyful music and song. It was the greatest day of David's life. Its significance in his career is marked by his own pre-eminent position—conqueror, poet, musician, priest, in one. The sacrifices were offered by him; the benedictions both on his people and on his household were pronounced by him. He was the presiding spirit of the whole scene. ... It was felt to be a turning-point in the history of the nation. David was on that day the founder, not of freedom only, but of empire; not of religion only, but of a church and commonwealth.

Independence Day in Mexico.

This is Independence Day in Mexico. The window of every Mexican house is draped in the national colors; also the street cars, while the Mexican flag waves from almost every housetop and telegraph pole. Such a gorgeous display I have never seen. From American homes the old flag of the Union floats grandly. The house of the Brazilian legation is near us. The flag of Brazil is out to-day, and the colors of that country adorn this house. We never pass under this flag or by this house that we do not remember and often speak of the pure young life given to this country—our dear Clara Chrisman. To-day I have wished for an American flag to put in my home; hope some one of my friends will send me one. I never saw a more patriotic people than the Mexicans. I saw the president and governor. The armies were formed in line on either side of the street, when these great men of Mexico rode through the lines in their carriages; the governor's carriage in front, the president's next. I had a good seat near the statues of ex-President Miguel Lerdo de Tyada and Dr. Rafael Luclo in the Paseo de la Reforma. The president got out of his carriage in front of these statues and unveiled them. The liveried coachmen, beautiful coaches and horses, so heavily mounted with silver, were, indeed, elegant. The plumed hat of the president made it always easy to distinguish him. He is a grand-looking man, and I feel a Mexican's pride in him.

The festivities began Saturday night with a grand display of fireworks. Yesterday was the Sabbath, and even less like God's holy day than every other Sabbath. The Almeda was most beautiful; so many playing fountains. The floral decorations are beyond description. Had I the skill of an artist, I would preserve the beauties of this day for future enjoyment. All day long the troops have been in the streets, and everything is in martial array. I never saw so many soldiers before. The women are patriotic. One, with no covering on her head, marched in front, bearing a large banner, on which was the picture of Hidalgo. When she arrived at the pavilion where President Diaz awaited her, he unveiled the statues. The loud "brava" and "viva" is heard constantly. The same soldiers came by in uniforms, with their wooden legs and badges of honor. Oh! if these people only knew Christ as the loving Savior, how happy would be our beautiful Mexico!

I am sorry to say that on yesterday the bull fights were on a larger scale than usual on the Sabbath, and at night free entertainments at the principal theaters, and a grand national ball, while the lottery drawing was a grand feature also. These things are sad to relate; but we hope for great things for Mexico.

Bro. Watkins took in the church, some time since, a colonel of distinguished appearance, of whom we all feel proud, as he seems to have so much pride in the church. It gives us courage to hope that the day is not far distant when we shall have a self-sustaining church in the City of Mexico. He and other members decorated our church in an elegant and artistic manner. The statue of Hidalgo is in the rear of the pulpit under a canopy, from which hangs gracefully two beautiful Mexican flags, held on either side by two white plaster cupids, made by one of our members. The Mexicans are very artistic, and get up most elegant displays. All around are flags and mottoes, and above the canopy the emblem of Mexico—the eagle standing on a cactus, with a serpent in its mouth. It is all so beautifully arranged; none but an artist could have done it. When I saw how sympathy, in their patriotic feelings, affected them, I determined, when settled for another year, to adorn my home with Mexican emblems, and become one of them. If I must give up home and native land, I will accept theirs heartily and be in sympathy with them. They are ever kind to me; and, as my lameness is yet perceptible, in every crowd I am made comfortable, it matters not who has to stand.

The entertainment in our church was grand; the music by a string band, fine. The recitations by the girls and boys of the two schools under the control of our church reflected great credit on their teachers. There were two addresses by Mexicans, and two poems, one of which was read by the Presbyterian (native) preacher who was with Bro. Stevens when he was so terribly murdered. His poem was written on paper arranged to represent their flag. When he finished he stooped and wound these colors gracefully around the form of Bro. Watkins, who they thus acknowledged as one of them. He sprang upon the rostrum, thus adorned, and responded in glowing terms to this graceful compliment to him. The cheering was deafening, and when the national hymn was sung no one joined in with more heartiness than our "bald-headed American." The meeting closed with praises from all, and I can say, "Viva Mejico," from my heart; and may Christ reign supreme in this beautiful land!

"These Sayings of Mine."

The utterances of the Son of man are the most solemn that have ever entered human ears. There is an awfulness about some of them which hushes the soul to a silence that is painful! Some of them gleam over the whole range of human life and reveal with startling vividness its want and woe and possibilities! Some of them do most dexterously unravel the tangled skeins of God's providence and disclose the Father's unutterable love for his children! Some of them lift the curtain from the future, and the soul, standing face to face with the realities of eternity, gets a ravishing sight of the City of God! At a word from the Son of man hell jars her gates asunder and the torments of the lost transfix us with mute horror!

The question for us to ponder is, not what we think of Christ's words, but what value did they have in his own estimation?

It is one of the remarkable things about Christ—the emphasis he put on his own words. No other speaker ever emphasized his speech as Jesus did. He deliberately placed his own words above all other words, and would suffer none other to come into comparison with them. "These sayings of mine" had more potency and value than all the sayings of all other men. From the beginning of his ministry to its close this astounding claim of the superiority of his "sayings" is steadily, firmly put forth and adhered to. There is no word, no look, nor act, nor tone of his that can be construed into a diminishing of this extraordinary emphasis. He spoke with authority always. You see it in every glance of his eye, hear it in every tone of his voice, feel it in every touch of his hand. There are no tentative words coming from his lips. There is no speculation in his teachings. He never appears like a man walking an unknown path. There is always the firm tread of the man who knows the way, and who knows all the way. He stood at the center of all truth. It all focalized in him. Hence, when he spoke on any subject, what he said was final. There was nothing more that could be said. When he said: "He that believeth shall be saved; he that believeth not shall be damned," that is all that can be said. That is the last word of unappealable authority upon that awful subject. Hence the guilt, the heinous guilt of neglecting "these sayings of mine." "These sayings" are the truth translated into human speech, that men may have the words of salvation; and if they will not believe them, no human mind can conceive the dire results.

The Louisiana Lottery.

The Christian at Work has the following, which we reproduce for our readers:

Last week, in the interest of fairness, we gave the status of Louisiana as to the disgraceful lottery of that State, showing that it was foisted upon the people by its disreputable carpet-bag government of 1868. But another duty now confronts the State, and to that we would invite the attention of all concerned. The present Lottery charter expires, as we noted last week, in 1893. Meantime the Louisiana Lottery Company has filed its application for an extension of its charter for fifty years. If the State will grant the Lottery Company half a century more in which to further rob the poor, encourage the vice of gambling, and otherwise prostitute morals, the Lottery Company will pay the State debt of $12,000,000. In other words, in consideration of a fifty-year license to carry on their disreputable business, they will pay twenty cents per capita to the present population of the State for that period!—twenty cents a head yearly for the privilege of carrying on a business which impoverishes thousands and causes untold misery—a business which every other State disowns and disallows. There should be but one answer to this proposition; it ought to be rejected with the same scorn that a petition to legalize and protect brothels for the like consideration would be. If Louisiana deserves the defense offered in her behalf for tolerating a lottery, she will bury this proposition of the Lottery Company out of sight. Generals Beauregard and Early stood well before the country before they assumed the role of managers of this Lottery Company. That discredited them forever; and here Louisiana may find illustration, if it need one, of the popular feeling in this lottery business which is condemned as immoral by the postal laws of the country. Louisiana claims to have suffered from a carpet-bag government. She has suffered. But now she has a government of her own choice: what will she do with the Lottery?

What a magnificent bribe the Lottery offers to the people of Louisiana! It will give us all twenty cents apiece for the next fifty years to be allowed to carry on its iniquitous business! In making this offer we are to understand, that in the estimation of the Lottery Company the present Legislature is no better than the "carpet-bag Legislature of 1868," under which the Lottery came into existence! The very offer is an insult to every member of the present Legislature, as well as to every man, woman and child in the State. We have excused ourselves from all blame in the origination of this stupendous gambling company by attributing it to the wicked Legislature of 1868. "The carpet-baggers foisted it upon us," we say. And now comes the Lottery, and by its offer says, "You are no better than the carpet-baggers, and we will buy the State out for twenty cents apiece for fifty years!" Verily, impertinence can go no further! Are our legislators willing to rest under such an insinuation from such a source? We do not believe that they are! But we have heard only one of them speak out on this subject! We know several of them read this paper, and we would like to hear from them.

Letter from Rev. John Pipes.

MR. EDITOR: Yesterday, for the first time since you heard me preach at the Alexandria District Conference, I was able to occupy the pulpit. At Bunkie I took fever, and was in bed for two weeks, and suffered no little. Since that time I have been slowly recovering my strength, and was able yesterday to conduct the religious services for the Woman's Missionary Society of Grand Cane. At this regular monthly meeting of the society, the dues collected were $7 90, which shows a healthy and growing interest in the society. The new Methodist Church here is well nigh completed, and when finished will be an ornament to the place and speak well for the liberality of the community. The pastor in charge, Bro. Henderson, expects to have it dedicated the second Sunday in November. Some of you Doctor's may listen for a call.

I am in receipt of a most singular letter from a brother, G. N. Gilmer, of Morgansville, Ala. He commenced by saying:

Dear Bro.: Seeing your name connected with the proceedings of the Woman's Missionary Convention at Delhi, La., recalled to mind your comment on a rooster crowing at the Louisiana Conference, held at Minden, La., in 1864. You and Dr. Keener (now Bishop) were in one bed, and Dr. Winfield, of Arkansas, and myself in another in the same room, at Col. Lewis'; one division of the Confederate Army on the east, and another on the west of the town. Just before day, one morning, a rooster in an adjoining lot, Dr. Quall's, commenced crowing so loud and persistently as to wake us all up; when, to the astonishment of three of us, the Rev. John Pipes opened his mouth, and out came: "Well, that is the bravest rooster I ever heard. Here are two divisions of Kirby Smith's Army and a Methodist Conference, and he still has the courage to crow." Good-by! God bless you! I would like to see you. If we never meet in this life, let us meet around the great white throne.

First I laughed over such an unexpected production; then came a more serious thought. What a wonderful faculty the memory is! That little incident and bit of pleasantry has been retained in that brother's memory through all these twenty-five years of changing events and mysterious providences, so as to be accurately reproduced at this late date. Is it true that our words, good or bad, never perish?

"And must we be to judgment brought,
And answer in that day
For every vain and idle thought
And every word we say?
How careful then ought we to live,
With what religious care."

J. P.

GRAND CANE, LA., Sept. 23, 1889.

Among the Papers.

The Sunday-school Times has these remarks in regard to discrimination in praise:

Just praise is never ill bestowed. But indiscriminate praise is only one grade better than indiscriminate censure. The undiscriminating critic—if such a thing can be—soon loses all power of being helpful. There is a sense in which truly discriminating praise is always high praise. Many a child—many a man, indeed—is kept upon a low plane of life, and is practically a useless and hopeless element in society, because he is treated as though he had no higher aspirations, no finer sentiments, no worthier motives. It is not unqualified and unstinted praise that such a person asks and needs, but just discrimination. Many a foolish and flighty young man "in society" would be lifted up and made useful by the mere knowledge that his family and his acquaintances could discriminate his sense from his nonsense, his better instincts from his worse. The boisterous praise of his foolish or low-lived companions, who goad him on by calling him a "good fellow," is, to his own heart, incomparably less welcome and less satisfying than would be the calm and discriminating dispraise of his evil ways, with praise of his latent and hidden, but higher and nobler instincts and aspirations. "Regard me as capable of being something better," thinks many a child, many a youth, many a man, "and I shall soon do better." If you have a child who seems wanting in spirit, if you know a young man who seems "good for nothing," perhaps one difficulty is that you have never shown that you recognize that child's better spirit, or that you have never evidenced your belief that that young man is really good for something.

The Congregationalist closes an article, on "Indications of Providence," with this paragraph:

The habit of watching for and obeying indications of Providence should be cultivated. Yet it needs to be guarded from degenerating into the weakness of those whom superstition rules, and who mistake their own vain imaginings for divinely inspired impulses. It is safe to believe that God never indicates to us that we ought to do anything wrong, or even silly. On the other hand, the indications of his will are as manifest in the affairs of the simple-minded and obscure, as in those of the shrewdest statesmen. To discover them unerringly we need to be in sympathy with God. The heart which is attuned to the pitch of heavenly harmonies recognizes and responds instinctively to the slightest touch of the divine hand.

In enforcing the claims of the church upon her young men, The Watchman discourses thus:

Especially should young men be ready to aid in supporting gospel ministrations. Every young man should become identified with some place of worship, not only as a regular attendant, but as a supporter of its interests. Whatever may be the method of providing means for meeting the necessary expenses of preaching and singing and other accompaniments, they should enter into the arrangement so as to be helpful in rendering the plan successful. If the financial provisions are delegated to a society or parish, then at an early period every young man should become a member of that organization, as in many cases can be done by the simple act of joining, as in signing the list of membership. Where this is the system, it is not to be regarded as otherwise than proper for young men, married or unmarried, to be enrolled as members of a religious society, and to share in the transaction of its business. If public sentiment is not right in this respect, the sooner it is corrected the better.

The Christian Weekly, in a judicious article on "Secular Work and Sabbath Worship," has this fine paragraph:

Our Sabbath service, prayer meeting and Sunday-school life, important, indispensable as it is, can not in themselves constitute our preparation for heaven while the deeply chiselled courses of the six days of labor are the channels where flow self-seeking instead of loyal service to the common good, evasion of duty instead of passion to confer greater blessing, overreaching and scheming for advantage at another's cost instead of study how to give him yet more for his money. The heavenly flower of love to the neighbor can never bloom for us in Paradise if, in our life of preparation here, we wear it as an ornament on Sunday and trample and bruise it under foot in the transactions and intercourse of Monday and Tuesday and Wednesday and all the days up to Sunday again. Believe us, the six days' work of toil and friction, of emergencies and trial, are not an evil; they are the fundamental means for attaining the capacity to enjoy the endless heavenly life. These six days of labor furnish priceless opportunities for being faithful toward others in all our relations with them and of cultivating through continuous action positive love toward our neighbor from motives of genuine love to our Lord. Lives actuated by such principles preach all the week the sermons which the minister can seldom preach except on Sunday.

A writer in the Christian Intelligencer thus discourses on "Ministerial Support:"

The late discussion, aroused by the Rev. Dr. J. B. Hamilton in Methodist circles over the case of superannuated ministers, extended to this neighborhood. Zion's Herald asserted that "the Methodist ministry are not complaining, and the average salary of our clergy is near six hundred dollars per annum. How long, however, are we to be put thus upon the explanatory and the defensive?" How long? Always, probably. This subject of ministerial support is one of difficult management. There are those who support their minister cordially and generously. There is an actually stingy class. There is also a thoughtless class, not meaning to be nipping, but their carelessness squeezes as hard as the next man's penury.

Some people have an idea that because a minister's calling is sacred, he, therefore, comes under special rules of supply, all in his favor; that there are particular ravens kept for a flight down to his needy door. Some ministers could testify that they must raise their own raven and load it also. There is one thing that congregations can and should do, and that is pay their minister promptly. If they can not do it, then they ought to tell their minister so beforehand. As far as my observation goes, I should say that ministers were not paid with promptness. The man who pays his help with commendable faithfulness each Saturday night, will let his minister wait for his quarterly stipend. Elijah may be having a hard time down by the brook Cherith, wondering where his bread will be baked and how brought to him. No matter! There is a raven waiting to fly round the corner of that ledge back of the brook. The modern Elijah will not suffer, says Brother Slack-in-paying-up. Happy the man who is such a pay-master's teamster rather than his pastor. Why not pay promptly?

Friends of Centenary.

Now is the time to endow the college. Providence has blessed the planters with good crops; prices are fair and all kinds of business are looking up. Don't forget Centenary when God prospers you. Make a thank-offering by sending an endowment note bearing six per cent., or by forwarding a cash contribution to the endowment. We need the money now. Our museum and apparatus were much damaged during the war and since. We are trying to get them into good condition. We need the income of a large endowment for this and many other purposes. So let our endowment be enlarged during this ingathering season. Who will meet Bro. Peter James' proposition to give $25,000? Who will endow and name a professorship? Here is the place to do good with your money. Here is a college that has a history and an honorable one, that has a fine location and handsome buildings, a good faculty and more than a hundred of the best students to be found in the land. Why not endow it?

W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

The Eleventh Annual Report of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference has been laid upon our desk. It is a handsome pamphlet and bears the imprint of the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, 112 Camp St., New Orleans. This society reports a membership of 808 in 33 active auxiliaries of adults, and 10 juvenile auxiliaries, of 445 members. There was collected last year the sum of $1,330 74. We congratulate these workers on so good a report. We know that they meet with difficulties in Louisiana which do not confront the Woman's Missionary Societies in any other Conference. We are sorry to know that so few copies of the Woman's Missionary Advocate are taken in Louisiana. It ought to be in every Methodist family.

Zion's Herald, last week, published the "sketches" of twenty-three sermons furnished by the Methodist preachers of Boston. It shows the variety of subjects discussed in the pulpits of the same denomination, and covered more than a page of the paper.

A Call.

To Preachers of the Aberdeen District, North Mississippi Conference—

DEAR BRETHREN: Please give all of your congregations and people an opportunity to contribute to the Ministerial Aid Association fund of said district, as suggested by a resolution of our District Conference last summer, and report funds to me, as soon as you can. Our young preacher at school needs help now.

May the church feel, as they should, the importance and weight of this obligation upon us. Yours, etc.,

M. C. SHELL,
Treas. M. A. Ass'n. A. D., N. Miss. Conf.
HOUSTON, Mississippi.

Notes.

The statistics of Sunday-schools in the United States have been published within the last few weeks. There are 101,824 schools, 8,345,431 scholars, and 1,100,104 teachers. What an army! Nine million and a half of teachers and scholars! What possibilities are wrapped up in them! How much good they could do!

Chauncey M. Depew says that Mr. Gladstone told him that if he had to "select the best fifty years from the beginning of the world up to the present time, and to the end of time, he would choose the half-century in which he has lived." Some people think they are living too late; others that they are living too soon!

The Holston Methodist says:

No preacher ought to be satisfied with having "cleared the deck," met the assessment for benevolent collections, unless he has thoroughly canvassed his congregation and given every one an opportunity to contribute.

And we would add, given every family a chance to subscribe for the church paper.

We heartily agree to this from the Western Christian Advocate:

Veterans should not be placed in the rear of a triumphal procession. Conference is the grand review of the itinerant year. See that the superannuates have seats of honor, given not as a form, but from hearty and sincere respect for those who, alone in the wilderness, cut down the cedars of Lebanon wherewith to build the temple of our Methodism.

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate says:

We have heard from three presiding elders' districts of the North Georgia Conference from which there will come no applicants for admission on trial at our next session. As yet we have heard of only one applicant from any district: there may be more—probably there will be more; but by every token the number will be small. Of those on the effective list a few will by every token be superannuated, and a few transferred to other Conferences.

A note from Dr. Murrah informs us that Whitworth College had one of the best openings in its history. This college is gaining in favor so fast, that there is a need more urgent than ever for somebody to come forward and put up the proposed center building. There is no better institution in our church; there is none which has brighter prospects; there is none where the donation of a few thousand dollars would do more good. Where is the man now to "rise up and build?"

Tuesday's dispatches from Winona tell of an enthusiastic meeting at that place in behalf of our new college. We can not tell from the dispatch how much was raised; but our friends, O. L. Moore and D. L. Sweatman, gave, respectively, $5,000 and $1,500 each. Other persons also contributed. We suppose the amount must have reached nearly $10,000. Dr. Wheat managed the meeting, and we congratulate him on his success. Now, let other presiding elders try their hands.

Here is a sensible man:

A Baptist layman in Virginia recently expressed some sound views about denominational weeklies. He said he took the one in his neighborhood because he considered it to be his duty. He did not approve of all it contained, but he would not think much of it if it had no opinions of its own, and so he read it whether it agreed with him or not. Besides, he desired to be useful, and he could not be useful without being informed, and his paper gave him information which he could not get elsewhere. He liked it for its memories, for what it had done in the past and what it was now doing. It was our paper, working for our interests, and therefore deserved to be liberally and intelligently supported.

When Constantine was chosen Emperor he found several Christians in office, and he issued an edict, requiring them to renounce their faith or quit their places. Most of them gave up their offices to preserve their consciences, but some cringed and renounced Christianity. When the Emperor had thus made full proof of their dispositions of character, he removed all those who thus basely complied with his wishes and retained the others, saying that those who would desert or deny the Divine Master would desert him, and were not worthy of his confidence.

If Constantine thought thus of the man who would deny his Lord to retain office, what does the Lord himself think of such a man?

The New York Sun, in an editorial on the subject of growth in the Episcopal Church in New York City, accounts for it in this way:

The relaxing of the bonds of doctrinal belief and the weakening of sectarian spirit, which have been going on to so marked an extent in recent years, have inured to the great benefit of this church. As doctrinal conviction has lessened, the desire for more worship has sprung up in its place, and the forms and ceremonies of the Episcopalians best satisfy this craving of many people who were trained in denominations not liturgical. The congregations at the Episcopal Churches, therefore, are now made in great part, if not the greatest part, of men and women who were brought up in other Protestant communions.

It occurs to us that exchanging "doctrinal conviction" for "more worship" is hardly a growth in the right direction. "The form of godliness" is not good without the doctrine and the fact.

Entire Sanctification.

conclusion is, that I stand a justified man, with inherited depravity within me. In regeneration the soul is born again, made new, entered upon a spiritual life. But can this be said of original sin? Can depravity be regenerated, the "old man" in us be converted and made holy? Paul, in writing to Christians, did not say make the "old man" a new man, but, "Put off the old man which is corrupt," and put on the "new man." It is idle to say this was done in regeneration. Sound reasoning is against it, and a universal Christian experience. The fact to which we are driven is, that the regenerated soul is left in the presence of an inherited sin or depravity.

We must also remember that in the spiritual life we get what we ask for. We approach a throne of grace praying for pardon and deliverance from personal sins and a personal sinful nature. What Adam did for us and to us is no more in the mind or prayer than something occurring in a distant world millions of leagues away. In either case I can see how God can regenerate my soul, save me from the effects of a personal depravity, or that evil I have brought upon myself by actual sin, and yet original sin or transmitted depravity remain untouched within me. This latter sin remains for another work. To say otherwise is to confound two distinct works of the Holy Ghost, regeneration and sanctification; or it makes regeneration a partial or imperfect work, which thought can not be entertained for a moment. Sanctification does not go over the work again of regeneration, deepening the lines and making it more effectual. Sanctification is not a second touch upon the same blind eyes, but it is a second work of the Holy Ghost laid upon something else altogether. The first touch, regeneration, alters the personal sinful life and nature, for which I am accountable; the second touch, sanctification, removes the inherited sinful nature, for which I am not accountable, but which burdens and nullifies me not the less. We can not afford to throw the slightest imputation upon regeneration; it is a perfect work of God, and does all he intended it should do. The expression, "remains of sin," I am confident is misleading, and we should discard it unless we are careful to have it understood that by it we mean original sin.

Our hope for a perfect deliverance is in the sanctifying grace of God. Not that our depravity is sanctified any more than it was regenerated, but we are sanctified by the removal or destruction of depravity, and by the communication, at the same instant, of the fullness of the blessing of the Spirit of Christ."

When that sanctifying work occurs, it dies in the heart! Various propensities of the body, which regeneration subdued, but could not eradicate, are instantly corrected, arrested or expelled. The craving of habit is ended, the root of bitterness is extracted; pride is lifeless, self-will is crucified, and anger and irritability are dead. A word, inward sin is dead. A sweet, holy calm fills the breast, actually affects the body, steals into the face, and rules the life. The millennium has begun in the soul.

Notice.

A meeting of the Committee on the District Parsonage is called to meet in Kenner, Thursday, Oct. 24, at 8:15 P. M., in the Methodist Church.

The following persons compose the Committee: M. T. Boswell, W. H. Turner, H. T. Hoover, J. G. Hamilton, J. R. Farr, J. B. Streater, J. W. Wright, D. L. Sweatman, L. L. Turner, J. G. Irving, J. L. Harmon, R. Bingham, H. B. McGee, J. W. Applewhite, J. W. Morris, S. D. Winn, N. Illnes and J. N. Williams.

An attendance on the part of every member is much desired.

J. J. WHEAT, Chairman.

Announcement.

Inasmuch as the Arkansas Christian Advocate, published for the Methodist Episcopal Church, endorses a certain pamphlet by one of its editors which is promulgating like sentiments, I propose to review that pamphlet in our columns, and to show up by misstatement and concealment it perverts well authenticated history, shamefully misrepresents the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, disparages the work of other Protestant churches, and unduly magnifies the importance and labors of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South. In this review, containing much valuable matter of record relating to the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church and subsequent events, with which very many lay members of our Church and the public generally are unfamiliar, will be embraced in four consecutive issues of our paper beginning October 9. Our discussion of the issues raised will be, in both matter and spirit, consistent with the dignity of the Christian minister and editor. And we think many besides our own readers would like to peruse and preserve this review, we will mail the four issues of our paper containing it for twelve cents in stamps; ten copies to each issue to one address for $1. Send orders at once to the Arkansas Methodist, Little Rock, Ark.—Arkansas Methodist.

—Mrs. Lulu Slocum writes from East Feliciana, La: "Bro. N. J. Roberts has just closed a glorious meeting at Clear Creek—the best we have ever had—assisted by Bros. Anders, Jones and Whitehead. The church is in a happy condition; fourteen accessions, a great many conversions. Many of the Baptists enjoyed our meeting. A ladies' prayer meeting organized; also a young men's prayer meeting. Pray for us and give God the glory!"

—Rev. Robert Randle, presiding elder of the Homer district, writes from Arcadia, La: "We are having gracious revivals on most of the works in this district where the pastors have been able to attend to the work. The financial interests have not kept pace with the other departments of work; but I trust that the revivals, spiritually, will produce an abundant harvest, financially, as well as in other arms of the service. Health of the people tolerably good, though there is some sickness; corn crop good, cotton crop cut short about two-thirds of a crop. The Lord has blessed us, and we should return thanks in visible shape. This we expect."

—Dr. W. B. Murrah writes: "Whitworth has had a splendid opening—one of the best in its history. The need of the proposed center building was never more urgent. Can't you exhort some on this line? There is not a college, North or South, it seems to me, whose future is better assured than this. Twenty-five thousand dollars would enlarge its efficiency wonderfully. I know of no place where rich men who love the church could put money with better assurances of accomplishing good."

—Rev. B. S. Rayner reports from McComb City, Miss.: "Our meeting at Whitestown closed out finely. Several conversions; some of them men far advanced in life. Twelve accessions and much good to the church. We have a number of live members in that part of our McComb City community; sixty-two accessions to this church to date, and others in sight. Prayer meetings and Sunday-schools flourishing. The work becomes more encouraging. Finances will all be up at Conference."

—Rev. N. M. Clark writes from Shubuta, Miss.: "Our camp meeting at Andrew Chapel began, as published, September 6, and continued four days. There were fifty who professed conversion, a number of backsliders reclaimed, and twelve accessions. I was assisted by Rev. D. F. Guice, of Lauderdale circuit, and Rev. H. C. Brown, of Meridian. I distributed the papers you sent, and exhorted for the ADVOCATE, and hope to do something on that line afterwhile."

—Rev. W. W. Drake writes from Jackson, La: "I have closed a meeting at one of my appointments, Bros. Wood and McDonald assisting. Six accessions, with other good results not numerical."

—Rev. W. L. Linfield writes: "My work is progressing nicely; received seven new members Sunday."

No Grumbling Here.

"Well, sir," said Mr. J. G. Grant, in reply to the reportorial inquiry about the furniture trade during the past year, "all I can say is that if business had not been satisfactory with me, I should not have felt justified in leasing this new store and putting in the largest and best stock I have ever handled. But come with me and let me show you what I have to sell and where I am going to sell it."

Under Mr. Grant's guidance a tour was made of the entire establishment, revealing furniture of so many different styles and at such varied prices that anyone who could not make a suitable selection from Mr. Grant's stock must indeed be hard to please. The new building, at 44 and 46 Baronne street, is very centrally located being only one block from Canal street. It is 60 feet wide, running back a distance of 105 feet, and has a floor space of over 25,000 square feet. It has all the latest improvements, light and ventilation being perfect everywhere, and all the floors are made easily accessible by means of a hydraulic elevator. The second floor is one of the finest in the entire store, being devoted almost exclusively to the display of parlor furniture, and one can not help being struck by the handsome designs, the beauty and variety of the rich coverings, and the elegant appearance of these goods. The prices, too, will fit all purses, and the lady who only wishes to expend $10 or $40 on furnishing her parlor, and one who can afford to spend $700 or $800, or any price between these, can here alike be accommodated.

In the course of a pleasant conversation, Mr. Grant said business had been very satisfactory with him for the past twelve months, and there was every prospect that the coming season's trade would beat the record. He said that he had not only been selling more goods than formerly, but that the goods sold were of a better grade, which he was pleased to observe, as good furniture is really the cheaper in the end, and much more satisfactory to both buyer and seller. He, however, had a large stock of all grades, and, with the increased facilities which his new establishment afforded him, could and would place his furniture on the market at a lower price than had ever before been quoted in the South. Everyone should call and see the display at 44 and 46 Baronne street and get posted on prices, even if they do not intend to purchase just at present.

Country customers can have a fine illustrated catalogue mailed free to them on application, from which they can make their selections almost as well as if they were in the city.—Times-Democrat, Sept. Trade Edition.

THE CENTURY DICTIONARY.

THIS great work, which has been in active preparation for the past seven years, contains a number of novel features, and combines in one a dictionary and a condensed and usable encyclopedia. It does not stop at mere definitions of words, but goes into particulars about things. The spelling, while resting on an independent basis, is essentially the so-called American; the system of indicating pronunciation is simple and easily understood, and the etymologies are treated more fully than in any dictionary yet published. It is a reference book, not only for the casual reader, but for the specialist also—the biologist, the architect, the electrician, the musician, the mineralogist, etc.—and for the business man.

We would like to make every reader of this paper acquainted with the plan of The Century Dictionary, and for this purpose we will send descriptive circulars free of charge, upon request, or for ten cents in stamps (the cost of manufacture) we will mail to any address a large pamphlet containing a number of specimen pages of the Dictionary, showing sample definitions in various subjects, as anatomy, law, botany, theology, gems, games, mechanics, physics with specimen illustrations, etc., etc. Address

Our Young People.

SIXTY AND SIX; OR, A FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH.

BY THOMAS WENTWORTH HIGGINSON.

Fons, delicum domus.—Martial.

Light of the morning,
Darling of dawning,
Blithe little, lithe little daughter of mine,
While with the ranging
Sure I'm exchanging
Sixty of my years for six years like thine.
Wings can not vie with thee,
Lightly I fly with thee,
Gay as the thistledown over the lea;
Life is all magic,
Comic or tragic,
Played as thou playest it daily with me.
Floating and ringing,
Thy merry singing
Comes when the light comes, like that of the birds.
List to the play of it!
That is the way of it!
All's in the music and not in the words—
Glad or grief-laden,
Schubert or Haydn,
Ballad of Erin or merry Scotch-ley,
Like an evangel
Some baby angel
Brought from sky nursery stealing away.
Surely I know it,
Artist nor poet
Guesses my treasures of jubilant hours.
Sorrows, what are they?
Nearer or far, they
Vanish in sunshine, like dew from the flowers.
Years, I am glad of them!
Would that I had of them!
More and yet more, while thus mingled with thine.
Age I make light of it!
Fear not the sight of it!
Time's but our playmate, whose toys are divine.
—Century.

Great Men and Good Manners.

The Chief Justice of the United States lives on a beautiful knoll in the suburbs of Washington. His elegant home, called Belmont, with turrets and spires, built of rough, light-colored stone, is only a few rods from the Fourteenth-Street car line that leads to the White House and the Capitol. As I was hurriedly passing his home yesterday, in the pouring rain, I saw three little girls all in a flutter of haste and excitement—wrapped in gossamers, with school bags tucked away out of the wet—running to catch the car. Just behind them walked a scholarly-looking, gray-haired gentleman, with a most kindly, sunny face shining out from under the umbrella.

"O papa! papa! do hurry; you're getting so wet," I heard said; and the three little maids stopped and turned back to hold and pull and tug away at the quiet gentleman, hurrying him to take his place in the crowded car packed with a rainy morning crowd.

"Papa" took hold of the strap, and the rosy little daughters kept fast hold of him to steady themselves in the swaying throng. The dripping umbrella leaned against the door, and the gentleman chatted pleasantly with the conductor, helped an old colored woman with a huge basket of clothes to a place behind him; and when the "transfers" were given for Pennsylvania avenue and the little family "changed cars" a murmur of inquiry and pleasure swept over the faces of those left. "Who was that gentleman? Do you know him?"

The conductor walked through very straight, and looked very proud as he said: "That man was Chief Justice Fuller, and he rides on my car every day. We like him. We like him and all his family. They ain't a bit proud nor stuck up, and they know good manners from shoddy ones every time. Mr. Chief-Justice talks to us conductors just as kind and good as he does to the President. We hope he will stay on our line forever!"—Wide-Awake.

Manners for Boys.

In the street.—Hat lifted when saying "Good-by," or "How do you do?" Also, when offering a lady a seat, or acknowledging a favor.

Keep step with anyone you walk with. Always precede a lady up stairs, but ask if you shall precede her in going through a crowd or public place.

At the street door.—Hat off the moment you step into a private hall or office.

Rise if a lady enters the room after you are seated, and stand till she takes a seat.

Look people straight in the face when they are speaking to you.

Let ladies pass through a door first, standing aside for them.

In the dining-room.—Take your seat after ladies and elders.

Never play with your knife, ring or spoon. Do not take your napkin up in a bunch in your hand.

Eat fast or slow as others, and finish the course when they do.

Don't ask to be excused before the others unless the reason is imperative.

Rise when ladies leave the room and stand till they are out.

If all go together, the gentlemen stand by the door until the ladies pass.

Special rules for the mouth.—Smacking the lips and all noise should be avoided.

If obliged to take anything from the mouth, cover it with your hand or napkin.—Christian Intelligencer.

MR. EDITOR: I will soon be seven years old. My aunt, Adele Turner, of Winona, is now visiting us. Sister and I have had a good time playing with her little boy and girl. Aunt Adele and Uncle Walter were the first couple Bishop Galloway married the year he was on the Black Hawk circuit. I have a goat, a puppy and a canary. Carrollton has a new train, which is a great help and convenience to us. We took a trip on the new train, and I liked it ever so much. Our Sunday-school sent you $5 for the missionary to Japan. We take a collection for missions in our Sunday-school every Sunday, and expect to raise $50 or $60 this year. Cousin Inez Money and Mr. Prentiss Nelson were married last night. Bro. Gordon performed the ceremony. I like to go to weddings. Don't you, Doctor? Bro. Gordon, our pastor, preaches here and at Greenwood. Bro. Cogdell is the preacher in charge of Carrollton circuit. He is building a new church at Coila, where we have never had a church before.

Your friend,

DAVID L. BINGHAM.

MR. EDITOR: Here is a little girl who wishes to join your band of cousins. I can not tell how much I enjoy reading the children's letters. I always read them all. Why don't some of the little boys write to the dear ADVOCATE. Can any of them tell? I know they must enjoy reading it. I have one little sister younger than myself. We have two little pet squirrels; our brother caught them for us. I wish the little cousins could see them. I will answer Ida Davis' question: "Razor" is found in Judges xvi, 17; I will ask a question: Where is "greyhound" found in the Bible? I will close, as this is my first letter. Love to you and the little cousins, and much success to the dear old ADVOCATE.

Your little friend,

MAGGIE CHAPMAN.

TERRY, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As this is the first time I have written to your valuable paper, I will try to do the best I can. We go to Sunday-school every Sunday. We have a very good Sunday-school. Miss Lottie Hamer is my teacher. We like her very much. W. W. Moss is our pastor. My mother died when I was three years old, and my papa is living in Texas. I have two brothers and two sisters, and I am living with my Cousin Lizzie and Uncle Joe Brooks. One of my sisters lives in Arkansas. I came from Arkansas to Mississippi by myself. I came over Arkansas river, White river and Mississippi river. As I might get my letter too long, I must close.

Your friend,

Household.

Managing.

We housekeepers who have most, if not the entire care, of our household affairs should manage them in such a manner as to save ourselves all the hard work possible during the middle or after-part of the day, and thus give us time to enjoy ourselves in any way we like best. At our house the fire is laid ready for the match the night before. If this can not be done, kindlings and fuel should be ready at hand as a minute lost in the morning is not found all day. The table is set over night, and a light cheese cloth, to insure against dust, is carefully laid over it. In the morning the match is applied to the kindlings, and before I am fully dressed the tea kettle will begin to sing and no time is lost in the preparation of the meal. It is always a good plan to prepare desserts in the morning, and ours are many times prepared at breakfast time. If pies are to be made, it is little trouble to roll out crust and make them while waiting for breakfast to cook, and they will be cold and yet fresh and crisp for dinner. If company comes to spend the day or stay for a meal, do not let us think we must do so differently for them and make ourselves much unnecessary trouble, and also discomfort our friends by our unflagging efforts to entertain them properly. It is a good plan to remember that our usual home cookery may be the most agreeable change to a guest. So many people have the mistaken idea that the slavish attention and the entertainment of a friend by the hostess are one and the same thing. Therefore do not let us wander into paths that are full of vexatious trials in search of some new dish for our visitors, when our usual fare may be the newest of anything we could devise.—Pittsburg National Stockman.

The Secret of Physical Beauty.

The secret of physical beauty is not in external applications to the skin. It is in fresh air, exercise, cleanliness, stout shoes, good food, few drugs, plenty of sleep, a good conscience and a quiet mind. The two latter are factors quite as important as any of the former in developing the repose and sweetness of expression, which impart to faces a quality hard to analyze, harder still to define, but easily recognized under the name of charm. Many middle-aged and elderly women possess this attribute in so large a measure, that their very look is a benediction, and we come from their presence helped and cheered, when perhaps very little has been said. They have simply beamed upon us, and their sunshine has had its own mellowing effect. Worry is a great producer of wrinkles, the most masterly workman that time employs to deface and mar what ought to take on new dignity and loveliness as the years go by. Do you ever realize, my fretted sister, that worry is sin, a tempting of divine providence, a distrust of God's love? Do your best, pray your utmost, and leave the results of your life to God. What you can do for your home, yourself, your children, your friends—that and that only do, bewaring of needless overwork. And if work you must, beyond your strength, even then do not add worry to the sum of the day's burden. "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."—Exchange.

Be polite to your children. Do you expect them to be mindful of your welfare? To grow glad at your approach? To bound away to do your pleasure before your request is half spoken? Then with all your dignity and authority mingle politeness. Give it a niche in your household temples. Only then will you have the true secret of sending out into the world really finished gentlemen and ladies.

'Tis sad to see a woman growing old before her time,
All broken down and hopeless when life should hold its prime;
She feels herself a burden when a blessing she should be,
And longs for death to bring her release from misery.

If these poor, discouraged women who suffer from diseases peculiar to women could only know that health could be regained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, how eagerly they would hasten to avail themselves of it. They ought to know it, and try it. Every woman who is still healthy ought to be told about the wonderful virtue in this medicine, and understand that it is a safeguard against the terrible diseases common to her sex. It is guaranteed to give satisfaction, or money paid for it will be refunded.

Cleanse the liver, stomach, bowels and whole system by using Dr. Pierce's Pellets.

THE 53D ANNUAL SESSION
WILL BEGIN
SEPTEMBER 5, 1889.

The last session was one of the best in the long and useful history of the College. The order and general behavior of students was excellent; moral and religious influences strong, and admirable progress generally was made in studies.

GYMNASIUM and WM. MORROW SCIENCE HALL are finished and beautiful additions to the already lovely grounds.

Work of rebuilding the burnt "BYARS HOUSE" is in progress, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

The new SOCIETY HALLS will be commodious and elegant.

In addition to subjects heretofore embraced in the courses, thorough practical instruction will be given in Analytical Chemistry, Determination of Minerals, Assaying, etc.

NO HEALTHIER OR MORE BEAUTIFUL PLACE. NO MALARIA.

No saloons, no occurrences to distract the minds of students, no safer place for boys and young men. Charges very moderate. Every possible arrangement for the encouragement of young men of limited means.

Sufferers

FROM Stomach and Liver derangements—Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick-Headache, and Constipation—find a safe and certain relief in Ayer's Pills. In all cases where a cathartic is needed, these Pills are recommended by leading physicians.

Dr. T. E. Hastings, of Baltimore, says: "Ayer's Pills are the best cathartic and aperient within the reach of my profession."

Dr. John W. Brown, of Oceana, W. ., writes: "I have prescribed Ayer's ills in my practice, and find them excellent. I urge their general use in ilies."

"For a number of years I was afflicted ith biliousness which almost destroyed y health. I tried various remedies, nothing afforded me any relief until began to take Ayer's Pills."—G. S. nderlich, Scranton, Pa.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for the past y years, and am satisfied I should be alive to-day if it had not been them. They cured me of dyspepsia en all other remedies failed, and their asional use has kept me in a healthy dition ever since."—T. P. Brown, ester, Pa.

"Having been subject, for years, to stipation, without being able to find ch relief, I at last tried Ayer's Pills, d deem it both a duty and a pleasure testify that I have derived great benfrom their use. For over two years I have taken one of these Pills y night before retiring. I would not lingly be without them."—G. W. wman, 26 East Main st., Carlisle, Pa.

"Ayer's Pills have been used in my ily upwards of twenty years, and completely verified all that is med for them. In attacks of piles, m which I suffered many years, they ded me greater relief than any medi- I ever tried."—Thomas F. Adams, ly Springs, Texas.

McLEAN—Bro. T. WALTER McLEAN was born in East Feliciana parish, La., December 11, 1867, and was baptized in infancy by Rev. James A. Godfrey; joined the church at old Winan's Church when eleven years old, and died with a clear mind, triumphantly, at home, September 5, 1889.

The writer was his pastor for four years, and, having an opportunity of knowing him well, can say he was a model young man in piety, in morality, and in the home life. He was thoughtful of his father's wishes, and gave respectful obedience to him to the last, ever caring for step-mother and aunt with considerate attention, and upon sisters and brothers lavished his young manly love. All will miss Walter. He had acted as steward of the church for four years. He was just getting ready to go to Centenary, last January, when his sickness, which was consumption of the lungs, stopped his educational career, and ended all earthly hopes of further service to his Master here. He intimated to his step-mother that he felt a call to preach the gospel; hence determined to go to school. Walter was highly esteemed and greatly beloved by all who knew him. But the best of all was, he was ready to die, and while seemingly it is a strange providence, yet he patiently bore his sickness and gladly submitted to the summons that called him above the skies. May our Father in heaven comfort the surviving family, and at last gather them as an unbroken family where all tears will be wiped away and partings will be no more!

J. W. ELLISON.

LEHR—Dr. W. C. LEHR was born October 1, 1855. He was married to Miss Ellen S. Powers, November 1, 1883. He professed religion in 1883, under the ministry of Rev. Q. A. Oats, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference. Up to his sad death, which occurred September 8, 1889, he was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He was fond of reading good books, several of which he obtained from the writer. He was not of that number who had to be urged to subscribe for the ADVOCATE, but sought to have the paper renewed. He was one of the few generally at the Wednesday night prayer meeting. His attendance to the Sunday-school was good. We have lost a member at West Station Church that we regret to give up.

His death was the result of an accidental shot from his own gun while pushing his little boy in a handcarriage. The contents of one barrel passed under the right arm, inflicting fearful flesh wounds, both in the arm and side. He lived but a few days, suffering greatly, but with Christian patience and fortitude. He told his grief-stricken wife that he was ready and willing, feeling that all would be well after death had done its work. May God bless the bereaved wife and two little ones who are left to mourn; and may God prove to be to them, as the book saveth, "a husband to the widow and a father to the fatherless!"

R. A. ELLIS.

FUNCHISS—Died, on the night of May 12, GEORGE, son of Mr. E. W. and Mrs. Agnes Funchiss, aged nine months and four days. Little George was a lovely baby, and fondly did the parents cherish the beautiful little life. He gave promise of much to cheer and brighten their hearts and home; but he who said, "Suffer them to come unto me, and forbid them not," called him, and after long weeks of suffering, the tired little one fell asleep in the arms of Jesus. How he will be missed in the home circle! But cheer up, fond parents; though you may never look into his beautiful eyes, nor kiss his dear lips again in this life, yet in the sweet-by-and-by you can meet your angel-boy in that happy land, where all is joy and love, and where parting is no more.

AUNTIE.

McDIEL—FLORENCE A., wife of John McDiel, was born in Sunflower county, Miss., January 7, 1862; professed religion and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, July, 1889, in which church she lived a consistent member to the day of her death. She died at her home, near Jones Bayou, in Sunflower county, Miss., September 7, 1889. To John McDiel, her bereaved husband, she was married in 1882. They had four sons born unto them; all are left with their father to mourn their great loss. "Her toils are past, her work is done." May God bless the afflicted and bereaved father!

O. L. SAVAGE, P. C.

BELLEW—OSCAR BOONE BELLEW was born December 7, 1880, and died July 14, 1889, aged two years, seven months and seven days. He was sick forty-six days. Kind parents and friends did all in their power to relieve his suffering, and to keep the dear little one with them; but God wanted this pure white bud to bloom in the beautiful garden above. Sunday evening, as the sun was going down, he breathed his last in his mother's arms. Grieve not, dear friends, for dear little Oscar; he is now safe in the arms of Jesus.

A FRIEND.

CAMPBELL—TOMMIE EMMET, infant son of Mary and Robert Campbell, died August 20, 1889, aged eleven months.

L. L. C.

TERRY—JOSEPH S. TERRY, son of Rev. S. D. and E. R. Terry, was born in Leake county, Miss., November 30, 1865, and died August 10, 1889; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, about nine years ago, and remained a consistent member of the same to the day of his death. The last twelve days of his life he endured intense suffering, and all without a murmur, but was resigned to the Master's will, repeatedly giving evidence of his acceptance with the Father, and that the only one that could cheer him in a dying hour was with him. When the family was around him, after attending to some business, his father asked, "Now, do you feel that God and heaven are yours!" "Oh, yes!" he said, with a beautiful smile on his face. Again, when assured that the family and friends were with him, he said, "Yes, I know pa and ma and all are here; but there is one here that can do more than they all." "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord!" By and by we will go and see him.

J. H. SMITH, Pastor.

HAYNES—F. J. HAYNES was born in Amite county, Miss., August 20, 1865; died July 24, 1889, at Jackson, La. Frank united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the first Sunday in June, 1889. He was a true man, full of energy and ambition; a devoted son to his mother. His toils are done. We hope to meet him again where there is no more sorrow or tears. May God abundantly bless the bereaved mother and family!

Temperance.

A White Cross Society has been started in Nagata, Japan.

The British Women's Temperance Association recently entertained at ten three hundred traveling showmen and their families. A gospel address and songs followed the tea.

The expressive word "hooze" is derived from "houza," an intoxicant made from millet seeds with some powerful astringents added. Bouza is the favorite drink of the nomadic tribes of Tartary.

The Washington (D. C.) W. C. T. U has two "homes" under its patronage, "The National Temperance Home," for soldiers, sailors and civilians, and the "Hope and Help Mission," for poor, unfortunate women, inebriates and opium eaters.

"What goes when the saloon goes?" inquires the Seattle Leader. "The brothel, the gambling hell, the tramp, the criminal, the drunkard, political corruption, pauperism, ignorance, bad debts and hard times, while the saloon keeper goes—to work."

Whichever side of any question gains most women as its supporters will, ere long, gain most men; laws for the conservation of the home will always gain most women, ergo, they will in the long run gain most men.—Frances E. Willard.

An English guide, while showing the beauties of the little town Saltaire, where no liquor is allowed to be sold, explained that the "rate of morality" was remarkably high while that of mortality was very low, being about thirteen to the thousand.

A novel feature of the congress to be held by the National Temperance League at Birmingham, England, in October, will be three public evening meetings to be addressed respectively by teetotal medical men, teetotal mayors and teetotal members of Parliament.

We can not all do as we would like to do in this world. Our feline pets may give us hydrophobia as well as our canine. Now although it is impracticable to muzzle cats, we do not on that account hesitate to muzzle dogs. So, also, though we can not altogether suppress private drinking, we can prohibit the common sale of drink.

The constant use of beer every day gives the system no recuperation, but steadily lowers the vital forces. Our observation is that beer drinking in this country produces the very lowest kind of inebriety, closely allied to criminal insanity. The most dangerous class of ruffians in our large cities are beer drinkers.—Scientific American.

The International Royal Templar relates an incident concerning a London drayman that illustrates the real value of a beer drinker's health. This man was in the habit of showing his great strength by taking a full barrel of beer, raising it and depositing it gently on the dray. One day, while performing this feat he received a slight scratch on his hand. So thoroughly poisoned by beer was his system that in spite of every effort to save his life, he died in three days.

Altogether Tangible.

So long as one is not asked to concentrate faith upon illusion there ought to be no backwardness in getting into a receptive mood at least. Note the encouragement in the following:

Population and Food.

A writer in the Statesman, a magazine published in Chicago, seems to have no apprehension that the world will ever realize the truth of the Malthusian doctrine, which was to the effect that population will sometimes become so dense that the supply of food will be found inadequate. He says:

The difficulty with those who fear that population will, at some time and somewhere, press upon the means of subsistence, is that they assume that the food of a country must be grown in that country, which is not at all necessary. A large percentage of the food consumed in England is grown elsewhere and imported into the country; but the English people, none the less, produce all the food they consume. By producing things wanted in India, in Russia, in Australia, in Canada, and in the United States, they are, through a multitude of exchanges, just as truly raising wheat in Dakota, sheep in Australia, and food products in every country from which their supplies are drawn, as if they were actually present and taking part in these different processes. Does anyone suppose that England, so long as the world is open to her commerce, will ever feel the pressure of population upon her means of subsistence, even though her population should be doubled, or trebled? And if England is in no such danger while supporting a population already greater than can be supplied with foods now grown within her own area, why could not Ireland do the same? And when we take into account the vast area of unused land, absolutely unproductive throughout the world—say in densely populated Europe, added to the lands in North and South America, Australia, Asia, Africa, and the islands of the sea, all of which can be drawn upon through the system of exchanges, together with the vast possibilities open through improvement in methods of cultivation—it is not possible to conceive of a limit to the productiveness of any land. Improvement in the productiveness of land has the same effect on total production as an extension of the area of land, so that if its productiveness is unlimited, its area is practically so.

Nothing Like Aluminum.

"Aluminum may yet revolutionize the world," said Superintendent Powell, of the Geological Survey, as he handled a piece of the bright metal in his hand. "Isn't it a beauty?" he inquired, his eyes dancing with enthusiasm, as he thought of the possibilities in store for it. "Why," continued the professor, "there is aluminum in every clay bank, in every plain, in every mountainside. It is present in earth everywhere. There are to-day as many chemists devoting their days and nights with a view to discovering processes by which aluminum may be furnished to the public cheaply as there are scientists delving into the possibilities of electricity. I've known the time when the metal was more precious than gold. Then it fell to $8 per pound; now it is $2 per pound. This fall in cost has been reached by the discovery of new affinities which cheapen its production. When it reaches a cost of twenty-five cents per pound it will be generally used. It is about as light as oak wood, four times as light as iron, and has more resistance than the very best of steel. It will be used in the construction of houses, superseding wood and stone or brick. It will take the place of iron and wood in shipbuilding. Just think of a ship constructed of a metal that will but just sink in water. The ocean steamer of to-day, built of iron and wood, will be as a canal boat compared to a vessel constructed of aluminum. Such a one will fly as a bird over the waves," said the professor.—Philadelphia Press.

A life spent in brushing clothes, and washing crockery, and sweeping floors—a life which the proud of the earth would have treated as the dust under their feet; a life spent at the clerk's desk; a life spent in the narrow shop; a life spent in the laborer's hut, may yet be a life so ennobled by God's loving mercy that for the sake of it a king might gladly yield his crown.—Canon Farrar.

A NEW TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is that a simple remedy has been discovered which permanently cures the most aggravated cases of these distressing diseases by a few simple applications made (two weeks apart) by the patient at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free by A. H. DIXON & SON, 256 West King Street, Toronto, Canada.

Taking Time By The Forelock.

As a general rule diseases do not spring upon us at once in all their virulence. On the contrary, they usually creep upon us stealthily, to take us off our guard. They steal upon us first as small ailments, to which we are apt to pay little attention. Slowly these ailments increase in numbers and in severity until, before we are aware of it, they have developed into serious affections and dangerous complications. Now the wise man and woman will not wait until this serious stage of affairs, but will destroy disease in the bud by taking PE-RU-NA from time to time. For sale by all druggists. $1 a bottle; 6 for $5. Manufactured by —Times-Democrat, October 1.

No one but a woman knows how much a woman sometimes suffers with the derangements and diseases peculiar to her sex. No one, therefore, but a woman knows how valuable Pe-ru-na is in such troubles.

The most delicate, the most sensible of all pleasures, consists in promoting the pleasures of others.—La Bruyere.

The clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese of New York has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and The Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to insure all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

An Organ in Every Home.

The firm of Marchal & Smith commenced selling organs direct to the people (thus saving their customers the cost of middlemen's profits) in 1859. The excellence of their organs, and the liberal terms they offer, has made their trade to-day the largest direct dealing organ concern in existence. Our readers who need an organ, whether for home, school or church, can not do better than address these gentlemen, viz., Marchal & Smith, 235 E. 21st St., New York.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The Tradesman has compiled reports of the new industries established in the Southern States in the nine months of 1889 ending October 1 and it demonstrates that the remarkable development in industrial lines that have been in progress in the South for two years continues unabated, as conspicuous also for the diversity of plants.

An English syndicate is attempting to purchase St. Louis breweries. The brewers' trust, or combine, has refused $15,000,000 for their property.

A number of prominent ladies of Chicago have formed an association and have hired a lawyer to prosecute the gamblers of that city under the State law.

Several parties have been served with notices to return money to the State, which Attorney General Rogers charges was fraudulently obtained on invalid and null interest coupons.

Secretary Proctor will send a board of army officers, in company with a committee of the Indian Rights Association, to conclude the purchase of the tract of land in North Carolina, upon which Geronimo and his Indians, now in Alabama, will be placed.

The expenditure of $50,000,000 by two English syndicates for the control of an extraordinary aggregate of industrial enterprises in the United States was completed in Chicago, September 28. No business was acquired for them in the United States which has not paid at least 12½ per cent. a year for the past five years. Grain elevators, flouring mills and breweries have been the favorite investments. The management of each of the various enterprises will be placed in American boards of directors, subject to the control of a board.

Most of the foreign delegates to the International American Congress have reached Washington.

The New York Post publishes a strong editorial, in which it charges the civil service commissioners of violating the law, and asserts its ability to prove the charge before a congressional investigating committee.

The twenty-fourth triennial conclave of the Knights Templar of the jurisdiction of the United States will begin in Washington, October 7. Commanderies from every State and Territory are to be represented.

The fiftieth birthday of Miss Frances E. Willard, president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, was celebrated on September 28 by a huge gathering at the First Methodist Church, Evanston, Ill. Messages of congratulation were read from notables throughout the country, including the poet Whittier and Ex-President Hayes.

A Californian has a quartz mine that has paid him $30,000 in two years. He does his own work, and his only mill is a hand mortar.

FOREIGN.

Mr. W. W. Phelps, the new American minister, presented his credentials to Emperor William on September 26, and met with a flattering reception.

The municipal commission have decided that the votes cast for General Boulanger in Montmartre, in the recent elections, null and void, and has declared M. Joffin, the labor candidate, who received the next highest number of votes, elected.

The Temple of Heaven, at Pekin, containing the dragon throne, has been destroyed by fire.

The Sunday Observance Congress, held in Paris, passed a resolution to the effect that in cases where the observance of Sunday is impossible, weekly holiday should be given to employees.

An extensive strike of dock laborers has begun at Rotterdam, and is spreading to other occupations.

Ex-President Grevy thinks that the elections will result in giving France a more stable government than she has had since 1870, and that the new members of the Chamber of Deputies are just what he required when he was president.

The grand cross of a commander of the Legion of Honor has been bestowed upon Mr Thomas A. Edison.

News of the discovery of rich gold-bearing quartz in the province of Canton, China, about 100 miles from the city of Canton, has been received.

General Boulanger has issued an address to the electors of Montmartre, in which he says they have replied to the iniquitous charges of the Senate by electing him to the Chamber.

At a meeting of the Rotterdam strikers, it was resolved to exclude all socialists, and to conduct the strike in an orderly manner.

Archbishop Satolli, of Rome, who is to attend the centenary of the Roman Catholic hierarchy of America, will also represent the Pope at the opening of the new Catholic University in Washington.

Dr. Dausen, the Norwegian explorer, is organizing an expedition to the North Pole; £20,000 has already been subscribed toward the venture, and additional funds will be forthcoming.

An Austrian railway official has invented a portable telephone for speaking from a railway train at any point stopping to the nearest station.

Widespread suffering has been caused by the recent floods in Mexico.

Timothy Davis, postmaster at Pattersonville, La., says: "Some years ago, while living in Algiers, I contracted a cough that everyone thought would cause my death. I was unable to sleep, had night-sweats, and soon became too weak to work. I had several doctors and tried many remedies, but with no improvement. An old friend hearing of my condition recommended Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. It had cured him of a serious lung trouble, and he had great confidence in Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar. Before three bottles had been taken I was up and about, a well man. It saved my life. I always recommend it for consumption, asthma, bronchitis, any lung or throat trouble." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

Prevent Attacks of Fever.

We ask but a glance at this, and it will pay any sufferer from liver complaint, enlarged spleen or ague cake, billious affections of any kind, deranged secretions, prostration from dissipation, constipation, dropsy, or any affections where liver, bowels, blood and stomach are involved. A guaranteed cure for all this class of diseases is offered in J. & C. Maguire's Cundurango. Doctors are astonished and invalids delighted.

SILENT BATTLES.

O, earth has its fields of a nobler strife
Than are known to the outward ear:
There are wilder cries in the battle of life
Than mortals could bear to hear:

There are myriad spots that the angels know
Where, unseen by his brother's eye,
Man has wrestled alone with his secret foe,
And risen to conquer or die.

No trophies tell where the vanquished yield,
No mound in the trampled soil,
But sometimes a cross on the silent field
Is reared by the hand of God.

In the breathless hush of the forest gloom,
In the dark of the lonely shore,
In the still retreat of some silent room
The combat yet waxeth sore.

Oh, well that the battle is fought apart,
For its waves too fiercely roll—
For sometimes the stake is a human heart—
Sometimes an immortal soul.

No clarion notes, when the day is done,
No shouts of the earth-born strong,
But oftimes the heart of the weary one
Feels the breath of an angel's song.

Oh, the air is sick with the anguish and cry
That smite not our duller ears,
But the voices that silently pass us by
Resound in two boundless spheres.

Dr. Carradine's Residuism.

BY REV. H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

Dr. Carradine has had a beautiful experience, which he tells, through the ADVOCATE, of September 12, in a sweet, attractive way. One feels disinclined to hint a doubt or cast a shadow, which might dim the radiance of so beautiful a revelation; and I would not write if duty did not impel me—a duty made more imperious by the request of friends who are earnest seekers after truth. The position and reputation of Dr. Carradine give great force to his utterances; but when he pleads his beautiful experience as positive evidence of the truth of a theological dogma which is contrary to the teachings of God's Word, I must kindly, but emphatically, demur; and when that erroneous dogma tends to create a fanaticism which has blighted the church wherever it has touched it, I must sustain the demurrer by an earnest appeal—not to the much misread spiritual experiences of men, nor to special revelations here and there, however beautiful; but to the Word of God. I do not, in the least, discredit Dr. Carradine's experience; but I certainly must protest against the deductions which he would have us accept as inferable from that experience. Although he assures us that he knew that he was sanctified, just as he knew fifteen years before that he was justified, yet we know that the evidence of conversion is not of that nature to indicate delicate, dogmatic distinctions. It does not say: "This is justification, and that is adoption; this is regeneration, and that is sanctification;" but it is a revelation of peace instead of enmity, of light in place of darkness, of guiltlessness succeeding guilt, of joy after sadness. When it came first to me I had never heard of justification or of regeneration. I knew no theology except that there was a good God, whom I loved to approach, because the coming to him was so sweet. I was then about six years old.

I do not undertake to say just what Dr. Carradine's experience was; but I do not believe that it was a purifying subsequent to regeneration, and distinct from it; and I do not believe it was such, because if there be a purifying work distinct from regeneration, and subsequent in time to regeneration and its accompanying work, justification, then, as a matter of course, the first purifying, or regeneration, is an incomplete work. I do not believe that regeneration is an incomplete work. My reasons, as given below, were written in 1881, as part of a little tract which was published for me at our Publishing House, and entitled "Whiter Than Snow."

1. God nowhere proposes either to justify or regenerate a soul until it makes a perfect surrender of itself to him, and trusts the merits of the death of Christ completely. What more can God ask? What more can the sinner do? What reason could God have for withholding from such a soul a complete purification? None whatever. Man thus left would have no power whatever to live holy, "the inherent corruption of his nature being sufficient to bear him down again, as it did before. Man thus left would of necessity be still an heir of eternal death, for nothing unclean can enter heaven. (See Isa. xxxv, 8; Rev. xxi, 27.) The Bible tells us that regeneration fits the soul for heaven. (See John iii, 3-8.)

2. The terms used in the Bible to denote this change are all indicative of a complete and thorough change—"born again" (John iii, 3, 7; I. Peter i, 23), "born of God" (John i, 13; I. John iii, 9; iv, 7; v, 1, 4, 18), "a new creature" (II. Cor. v, 17; Gal. vi, 15). John Smith became an accountable being at ten years of age, and was regenerated at twenty. If regeneration only reaches his actual transgressions—i. e., the sins he committed between the ages of ten and twenty—and does not affect his inherent depravity, John Smith the regenerate is in no sense "a new creature," but rather the old creature again—the same John Smith he was before his tenth year. The term "new creature," then, would not only be inappropriate, but grossly misleading. If this theory be true, John is in no sense "born again," much less regenerated (generated), or "begotten again," as St. Peter says (I. Peter i. 3): he is only cleansed from the sins—and their stains—which he has committed; his moral nature remains unchanged. If regeneration—or born again—does not mean a complete change of man's moral nature, what can it mean? It is compared to, and set over against, the natural birth—"born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God" (John i, 13), claiming here to be as much a birth as was our first, or natural, birth. The very same thought is contained in John iii, 6, where Jesus shows to Nicodemus wherein the two differ, and also wherein they agree—viz., in each being a birth—one as much so as the other. Regeneration, or the new birth, must be, from these passages, as much a change—and as radical—of the moral nature as generation and birth—a change from nonentity to entity and life—are of the physical nature. The divine promise through the prophets (see Ezek. xxxvi, 26) is: "A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you." "A new heart"—"a new spirit"—i. e., a new moral nature, generated and born—made and given—the old having been taken away and destroyed.

Thus we see that residuism is inconsistent with reason and with revelation, and that regeneration makes a soul perfectly clean—pure—capable, however, of developing perpetually a holiness stronger and more positive.

The residuists speak of "roots of bitterness" (see Heb. xii, 15), and plead these as evidence, declaring that entire sanctification removes these. The Bible nowhere warrants us in saying that these are ever removed this side the grave. St. Paul had one which God, though thrice importuned, refused to remove, but gave grace to keep it under. (See II. Cor. xii, 7-9; also I. Cor. ix, 27.) These roots of bitterness are in the flesh—deeply planted—and will be removed only when the flesh is regenerated. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit." (John iii, 6.)

Dr. Carradine calls this—mentioned above as "roots of bitterness"—a "something;" and makes it identical with what St. Paul calls "the old man." He is at liberty to call it "something;" but to make his "something" identical with "the old man," as used by St. Paul, is a perversion of Scripture unworthy of the learning and honesty of Dr. Carradine. That exegesis of his needs revision.

This is a very important matter, and it should be studied very carefully, very honestly, very thoroughly, and our conclusions reached slowly. When Dr. Carradine removes the difficulties which the teachings of God's Word threw about his theory, as shown above, we may accept the inferences which he would draw from his beautiful experience; but until then we must kindly, but positively, demur.

Error is often very insidious, appearing at first as a matter of very small importance, or robed in the beautiful drapery of a half-truth. It gets firmly established before it unveils itself and works its wild havoc. Such has been the history of every heresy which has blighted the world. Such is the case with residuism, or the residue theory of entire sanctification, as it is sometimes called. It deals with a matter so sacred—holiness of heart—and it promises so much, that it is generally considered, by those who do not believe in the theory, as a sort of harmless error: and this notion is strengthened by the fact that we have known good men and women, here and there, who professed it, and whose profession of it never became in any way harmful. But those of us who have known it—not in isolated cases, but prevailing largely in towns and communities—know it to be almost invariably accompanied by an unchristian intolerance, and a senseless and often unbridled fanaticism.

During the years 1880, 1881 and 1882, I was in the pastorate in Southern California, where it prevailed very widely; and the experiences of these years are dark with the unchristian antagonisms of men and women who claimed to be free from sin and temptation, and yet (after the lapse of seven years I say it deliberately) I never knew a people calling themselves Christians, who were so ready to become offended; so wanting in that charity which "thinketh no evil;" so vigorous and reckless in their denunciation of those who did not hold with them; so regardless of the feelings of others, and so intolerantly unteachable as were these. There were a few illustrious exceptions; but they were very few, indeed. The damage to our church stands darkly written in the statistics of the Los Angeles Conference for those sad years; and on the hearts of a few of us who were left to stem the tide against fearful odds. I would fain leave the veil over these dark, stormful years; and with these facts I turn from them, most devoutly praying that a God of mercy will spare the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences such a deluge of cant and calumny, hypocrisy and fanaticism, darkness and desolation which marked these sad years in California.

I would not disguise the fact that I, with others of Dr. Carradine's admirers, am both surprised and saddened that he—so gifted, so learned, so sweet-spirited—should champion an error with such direful tendencies. Already the leaven is working within him; for in his long article in the ADVOCATE, of September 12, he gives us a paragraph or two of the same cant about "inbred sin in believers," "Christ being the altar," and "the altar sanctifying the gift," which constituted the stereotyped formula of testimony heard, ad nauseam, in California; and he lays it down as an axiom that sanctification—i. e., the residue theory, as he believes it—must be believed in to be possessed. He says, "I must believe there is such a work in order to realize the grace." If this be so, then the thousands, dead and living, who could not and can not believe in it as a separate and subsequent work, are not sanctified—are a lower class of Christians; and to be consistent, he should say, as others have done, that such have no chance for heaven. If holiness means entire sanctification of the residue theory kind, then the passage which teaches that without holiness "no man shall see the Lord," excludes all who do not become residuists from the glories of heaven. This is the logical result of the Doctor's assertion, above quoted; and it is the germ of the most intolerant bigotry. Surely the sweet-spirited Dr. Beverly Carradine does not mean to say that! Ah! no. But if he should never reach the point of saying it, others led by him into the ranks of residuism will declare it with a voice loud with fanaticism and hot with hate. Such is my fear—a fear founded on experiences dark with battle.

In the same article he says:

> In my early ministry I was never thrown with a sanctified preacher: * * * so, when I was being ordained at Conference, it was with considerable choking of voice, and with not a few inward misgivings and qualms of conscience, that I replied to the Bishop's questions, that I was "going on to perfection;" that I "expected to be made perfect in love in this life," and that I "was groaning after it." Perhaps the Bishop himself was disturbed at the questions he asked. Perhaps he thought it was strange for a minister of God and father in Israel, whose life was almost concluded, to be asking a young preacher if he expected to obtain what he himself had never succeeded in getting.

Is it possible that Bro. Carradine had never in his early ministry been associated with a sanctified preacher? I knew him then, and knew some of the holy men who were his associates, some of whom are now in heaven. Were none of them holy? none sanctified? Were all of them unholy? My brother, this is an awful charge for a Christian man to make. Read Matt. vii, 1, and I. Cor. xiii, and then ask yourself: "Am I, who profess Christianity—a religion whose genius is the charity that thinketh no evil—am I justified in that harsh judgment of my brethren?" Did you know, my brother, that your words involve the charge of hypocrisy? Were all those men hypocrites? Is that innuendo about the good old Bishop, who is, perhaps, dead, in keeping with the spirit of our Master? All this sounds so much unlike the gentle, sweet-spirited Beverly Carradine that I used to meet at the Annual Conference. What a change has come over him! Is this change the result of professing entire sanctification? If so, most devoutly must I pray to be delivered from such sanctification.

I do not wish to wound any heart; but I must utter the warning that calls so loudly for utterance. There is danger ahead. When such men as Dr. Carradine become infatuated with residuism to such an extent, what may be expected of others who do not aspire to lead, but are willing to be led, and many of whom will be led by such a leader?

Dr. Carradine's Experience.

BY REV. J. W. HONNOLL.

In the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, of September 12, Dr. Carradine gives us a four-column article on what he calls his experience of the blessing of entire sanctification. If he had confined himself to his religious experience, no review would have been necessary; but when he turns aside to dogmatize, draw conclusions, and support theories which are in conflict with the faith and practice of our church, and goes so far as to charge our chief pastors with insincerity and practicing hypocrisy in the solemn service of setting apart our young preachers to the work of the ministry, we think that the time has fully come for us to defend ourselves, or step down and out, and turn the Methodist Church over to these "would-be reformers." For if Dr. Carradine's insinuations are true, we are unworthy the name of a Christian Church. Hear what he says of those men of God whom we have chosen because of their consistent piety, faith in and loyalty to the doctrines and discipline of our church: "Perhaps the Bishop himself was disturbed at the questions he asked. Perhaps he thought it was strange for a minister of God and a father in Israel, whose life was almost concluded, to be asking a young preacher if he expected to obtain that which he himself had never succeeded in getting. Stranger still if he asked the young prophet if he expected to attain what he really felt was unattainable."

Poor old man! It would be bad enough if he were honestly deceived; but not so. He is teaching and practicing what he really feels is not true. Here he stands in the church of God in view of the judgment, his life almost concluded, practicing a falsehood. For such a hypocrite the world could not have common respect. Have we come to this? Is this the language of a Methodist preacher with the vows of the church upon him? Are we to hold our peace while such charges are made against the leaders of our church? To say nothing of seven of our living Bishops, who belong to the class to which he refers, are we to have no respect for the sainted dead? Are we prepared to say that such men as McTyeire, Kavanaugh, Wightman, Pierce and Marvin played the hypocrite all their lives, and died with a lie in their mouths? These all believed in the theory at which Dr. Carradine is making this thrust.

We have suffered our church and Bishops to be slandered from our own pulpits by some of our own preachers; and, for the sake of peace, we have said nothing. But forbearance has ceased to be a virtue, and we must defend ourselves. When Dr. Carradine was making this grave charge against our Bishops, it would have been in order for him to have sung with great emphasis:

> "Prone to wander, Lord, I feel it;"
> Prone to—[illegible] whom I should love.

For this "something which causes Methodist preachers to use gall for ink, and a sword for a pen," certainly still remained; for I have never seen from the pen of a Methodist preacher language more severe and unveiled for than this thrust at our Bishops. Is it possible that sanctification destroys a man's sense of modesty and all respect for those in authority? I have not so read the Word of God. Dr. Carradine informs us that "in his early ministry he was never thrown with a sanctified preacher, nor heard a sermon on entire sanctification until this year." Where has Bro. Carradine been laboring all these fourteen years? This is a fearful comment on the Methodist Church where he has lived. I would like to have the names of the preachers with whom he has been associated. If I am correctly informed, those preachers—at least, some of them—have been as fully sanctified for years as Bro. Carradine is now, or was when he was on the mountain-top taking in those wonderful visions. I suppose that he means that he never heard the doctrine before preached according to the second cleansing theory, nor professed in those extravagant terms in which it is now professed by Dr. Carradine and others. This is probable, for in this strong language it was never professed by John Wesley, nor by the inspired writers. But Bro. Carradine reaches his grand climax in the conclusion that the truth of the second cleansing theory was fully demonstrated by the fact that the Holy Ghost descended in power on the services held in the Carondelet Street Church about three months ago, while they were preaching and emphasizing the "second blessing theory." So the long controversy which has been going on in our church for more than one hundred years, on the theory of entire sanctification, is now forever closed.

It was settled in the Carondelet Street Church, in New Orleans, when the Holy Ghost descended on Bro. Hopper while he was preaching the second cleansing theory. So we have nothing to do to get the truth, and the whole truth, but apply to Bro. Carradine and learn the exact revelations made at that time, for he can not be mistaken; for he says the Holy Ghost can not approve a lie. Many thanks to Bro. Carradine for settling forever this perplexing question! But how will Dr. Carradine explain the fact that the Holy Ghost descends in great power on the Moravians while they are preaching Zinzendorfianism, that we are wholly sanctified in conversion? How does he account for the wonderful manifestations of divine power under the preaching of such men as Sam Jones and Mr. Moody, who do not believe nor preach the second cleansing theory, but ridicule the idea and emphasize the theory of a regular growth in grace?

Will the Holy Ghost approve a lie? He certainly does if Dr. Carradine's reasoning is true; for the best revivals we are having all over this country are under the labors of those preachers who believe that Christian perfection is a degree in the divine life, not another cleansing. Does Dr. Carradine believe that God's people must be correct in their theories before they can be blessed? Strong conclusion this! It is well for the reader that Dr. Carradine informs us that he does not write in the interest of a theory; for it seems to us that he has done everything in his power to establish a very contracted theory—one which can not be reconciled with the experiences of a large majority of the best Christians in the church. Whatever may have been Wesley's theory of perfect love, the church is no more committed to his theory of holiness than it is to his theory of the resurrection. It is the doctrine of holiness we are to accept. And one thing is certain: the Methodist Church, as a church, does not believe in the second cleansing theory. More than nine-tenths of the preachers, editors, and leading men of our church believe that when God forgives a man's sins, that he forgives them all—"cleanses him from all unrighteousness," makes him every whit whole; that "Christian perfection," "perfect love," or "entire sanctification," as these terms are used in our church, refer, to a degree, in the divine life called manhood, in which we live by faith, and have the continued evidence of our acceptance with God. "Rest in Jesus." Not another cleansing from sins which God failed to wash away when we were converted, but more love, more of the same grace—a higher degree in Christian knowledge and experience; fixed, established in the faith, which is ordinarily attained by regular growth. "Going on unto perfection," "growing up into Christ," adding all the Christian graces.

But while this is the Bible rule, we allow that some do attain it instantaneously, or by sudden leaps, as it were. This theory of holiness can be reconciled to the experiences of all God's people, Dr. Carradine not excepted. Then why should we labor to establish a theory which can not be reconciled to all?—which gives the lie to all those who say that they put all on the altar when they were converted, and have kept it there, and have continually grown in grace, and realize that the blood of Christ cleanses them from all sin? Is their testimony not worth as much as Bro. Carradine's? Why not? They say that they are on the altar, and Bro. Carradine says that "whatsoever is laid on the altar becomes sanctified or holy. It is the altar that does the work." And yet he says that men can be perfectly consecrated all their lives, and never know the blessing of sanctification! How strange that God would withhold from one of his children, who is fully consecrated, this great blessing, because he can not believe in the second cleansing theory, which Wesley admits is not expressly taught in the Word of God! It is strange that a work of so much importance was not expressed. It does not follow that because Dr. Carradine was fourteen years in the wilderness, and has suddenly entered the Canaan of perfect love, that many of his brethren have not been there for years! They grew up into Christ to the fullness of the stature of a man in Christ Jesus. So they testify, and so we believe; for we have every evidence that their work is to be taken for as much as Bro. Carradine's. He should not think it strange that they are not excited, as he is, for their change has not been so sudden, and they think it best to be "exceedingly careful how they speak of their high attainments in the divine life." It is perfectly natural for those who live for years far beneath their privilege, and suddenly attain to the rest of faith, to be more excited than those who come to it more gradually. Hence it is from this class that we have those wild extremists who bring the doctrine of holiness into disrepute, and cause trouble and divisions in our church.

Does not our past history demonstrate the truth of this? So we have the two theories: one, that Christian perfection is a second cleansing from inbred sin; the other, that it is a degree in the divine life. To support the one, we must ignore the testimony of thousands of God's people; to accept the other, we admit the testimony of all. Which shall we do? Can we ever agree on a theory which gives the lie to such witnesses as the sainted Bishops, to which we have referred, and charges seven out of eight of our living Bishops with the continual practice of hypocrisy in the discharge of their official duty? To ask such a question is to answer it. It can never be done; and the sooner these accusers of our church and chief pastors give up such an idea, the better it will be for all concerned. We resent it as a slander upon our church, that she has lost her power, and that our leaders have departed from the faith. "By their fruits ye shall know them." We never had more power with God and men than we have to-day, the opinion of croaking pessimists to the contrary, notwithstanding.

HOLLY SPRINGS, Mississippi.

WOMEN PREACHERS.—It is not always remembered that our Lord had female disciples who accompanied him upon his journeys. Some of them, like Joanna, the wife of Herod's steward, were likely to have been women of culture; as Luke surely implies that many of them had some wealth, from whose avails they ministered to his wants, and those of his company. Under these circumstances, it becomes the more significant that he did neither commission any one of them to be an apostle, nor say so much as a word to intimate his pleasure that they should assume the office of public teachers of religion. It looks very much as if, in his mind, the ideal relation of woman, however gifted and cultured, to his cause and kingdom, is that rather of illustrating the gracious working of Christianity by ministering to those who minister, than of undertaking independent service as preachers of his Word.—Congregationalist.

THE ADVOCATE.

Father, I bring this worthless child to thee
To claim thy pardon once; yet once again
Receive him at my hands, for he is mine.
He is a worthless child; he owns his guilt.
Look not on him; he can not bear thy glance.
Look thou on me; his vileness I will hide,
He pleads not for himself; he dares not plead.
His cause is mine; I am his Advocate
By each pure drop of blood I lost for him,
By all the sorrows graven on my soul,
By every wound I bear, I claim it due:
Father! divine, I can not have him lost.
He is a worthless soul, but he is mine.
Sin hath destroyed him; sin hath died in me.
Death has pursued him, but I have conquered death.
Satan hath bound him; Satan is my slave.
My Father, hear him now, not him, but me.
I would not have him lost for all the worlds
Thou, for thy glory, hast or-dained and made.
Because he is a poor and contrite child,
And all his every hope on me reclines.
I know my children, and I know him mine
By all the tears he weeps upon my bosom,
By his half heart that beateth against mine;
I know him by his sighing and his prayers,
By his deep, trusting love that clings to me.
I could not bear to see him cast away,
Weak as he is, the weakest of my flock,
The one that grieves me most, that loves me least
I measure all my love by his returns;
And though I rest, yet I speed to succor him home
Drive him upon the instant from my breast.
Still he is mine; I drew him from the world;
He has no right, no claim but to my love.
Though earth and hell against his soul conspire,
I shield him, keep him, save him; we are one.

Oh, sinner, what an Advocate hast thou!
Methinks I see him lead the culprit in,
Poor, sorrowing, shamed, all tremulous with fear.
Prostrate behind his Lord, weary, self-condemned,
Clad with his Savior's spotless righteousness,
Himself to hide and hear the Father's words,
My Son, his cause is thine and thine is mine,
Take up thy poor lost one; he is forgiven.

A Georgia Jeremiah.

BY "BARNABAS."

The last letter of this series is dated—

RANDY. GEORGIA'S, May 7, 1811.

Dear Brother: After much uneasiness and anxiety, with many windings and with hardy steps, I have at length set out on my journey. I expect on the day after to-morrow to make a bold push, probably ten or twelve miles a day, which will be equal to my strength. I have waited three weeks for Bro. Brown (who seems to have been induced by W. W. to accompany the sick man on his long ride, and to have been the bearer of contributions in money for his assistance by friends, good Mr. Paulding among them, no doubt, but has been detained on the way). I have seen nothing of him or the money. * * * This does not grieve me; but that I have waited till the weather is hot, and I am so weak, I know not that I shall be able to get through. I expect to travel the solitary wilderness alone, left to the mercy of the Indians, for I can not expect any person who is not interested to go as slow as I must. My complaint still progresses. * * * I shrink from death myself after telling man how to die, for five years; yet I look forward with pleasant anticipations to the time when I shall be a real Christian, and meet my friends in glory, for I expect to see those of this country no more. Even you whom I love I shall not see again. Suffer me, with humility, to submit one letter more, and then consign me to oblivion. If you write to me direct the letter to Augusta, (Ga). Write me a generous letter to get there about the middle of October, at which time I expect to be at home. Write me about everybody that I love and that loves me—who serves the Lord and who hates the devil.

Probably you wish to know more about Bro. Brown, but I can't tell you. I heard from him last in Batou Rouge, on the fifteenth of last month. * * *

I believe everybody here loves you except the devil, and I expect he is not so much displeased as he would be if you had more holiness and had done his kingdom more harm. Give my love to Bro. and Sister K. Tell them I often think of them and pray for them. Yours affectionately,

LEWIS HOBBS.

And with this greeting the Weeping Prophet passes into the wilderness, but not into oblivion." In the General Minutes of 1815, in answer to the question, "Who have died this year," we find this record:

1. Lewis Hobbs, who was born in Burke county, Ga., in the month of February, 1783, was converted in 1804, and received on trial in the traveling connection at the Conference held at Liberty Chapel, Ga., in December, 1808. In 1809 he traveled Brunswick circuit; 1810, Broad River, and in 1811 went a missionary to Mississippi, where he traveled the Wilkinson circuit and continued there till 1812. In 1813 he was stationed in New Orleans, and in 1814 returned to Georgia where he finished his course.

Our beloved brother, Hobbs, was a young man of deep and uniform piety while a private member of society; and, as a minister of the gospel, his simplicity, zeal and diligence has been equaled by few among us. Truly it may be said of him, he counted not his life dear to him so he might be instrumental in advancing his Redeemer's kingdom: for, although he was of slender habit, he readily submitted to the inconveniences of a missionary, and the almost incredible difficulties he had to surmount in New Orleans, where he became deeply consumptive. In this lingering and dying condition he traveled nearly one thousand miles (great part of which lay through an almost uninhabited wilderness) to his native country, where he arrived in June, and departed this life on the fourth of the following September. He was for some time a witness of that love which casteth out all slavish fear and reconciled him to the dispensations of Providence, as was eminently verified in his last illness by that patience and Christian forbearance and fortitude with which he bore it all.

The Sabbath previous to his dissolution, while several friends were about his bed, he supposed himself to be dying, and, with every mark of triumphant joy, said, "I am going, but not a missionary; I am going to Jesus!" On Monday morning, being visited by a friend, he observed: "I am much disappointed, for I expected before this time to have been with the shining songsters;" then added, "When I entered the Conference I gave myself to the Lord and the connection; I now feel no sorrow for having filled the stations to which I was appointed, but a peculiar consolation in this: that I have preached the gospel to a people who till then had been strangers to it."

He continued to decline until the next Sabbath, when a few minutes previous to his departure he became a little delirious and appeared to be in much pain; * * * but even in the midst of his momentary deliverance * * * his mind was employed in the great work of his calling. He asked for help to get into the pulpit, by which we discover that even the agonies of death were too feeble to wrest from his mind the all-important business of preaching the gospel of peace. In a very few minutes, being about six o'clock Sabbath evening, he fell asleep in the arms of Jesus.

We may never know the story of that toilsome journey through the wild Indian country that then lay between the white settlements of Mississippi and those in Georgia. It must have been a touching picture, a brave and truly heroic example of trial and patience and faith. There is something infinitely pathetic in his statement that he could find no one willing to make the journey slowly enough to bear him company. But it is pleasant to reflect that he could not go too slow for the angels, and that every step of that weary way was taken under the eyes of the Keeper of Israel, who neither slumbers nor sleeps. It may be that there are those yet living here or in his native State who could add to the facts thus given concerning this devoted, humble servant of God. What we know warrants the supposition that a fuller history would well repay the reading.

An Interesting Document.

Baltimore, Daniel Ruff, Freeborn Garrettson, Joshua Dudley.
Frederick, William Waters, Thomas Foster.
Fairfax, Philip Cox.
Berkley, Micaijah Debruler, John Hagerty, John Tunnell.
All preachers to change after six months.

Ques. 7. Ought not all the assistants to see to the settling of all the preaching-houses by trustees, and order the said trustees to meet once in half a year, and keep a register of their proceedings; if there are any vacancies, choose new trustees, for the better security of the houses, and let all the deeds be drawn in substance after that in the printed Minutes?

Ans.: Yes.

Ques. 8. Shall all the traveling preachers take a license from every Conference, importing that they are assistants or helpers with us?

Ans.: Yes.

Ques. 9. Shall Bro. Asbury sign them in behalf of the Conference?

Ans.: Yes.

Ques. 10. Ought it to be strictly enjoined on all our local preachers and exhorters, that no one presume to speak in public without taking a note every quarter (if required), and be examined by the assistant with respect to his life, his qualification and reception?

Ans.: Yes.

Ques. 11. Ought not all our preachers to make conscience of rising at four, and if not, yet at five (is it not a shame for a preacher to be in bed till six in the morning?)?

Ans.: Undoubtedly they ought.

Ques. 12. Shall we continue in close connexion with the church, and press our people to a closer communion with her?

Ans.: Yes.

Ques. 13. Will this Conference grant the privilege to all the friendly clergy of the Church of England, in the request or desire of the people, to preach or administer the ordinances in our preaching-houses or chapels?

Ans.: Yes.

Ques. 14. What provision shall we make for the wives of married preachers?

Ans.: They shall receive an equivalent with their husbands in quarterage, if they stand in need.

Ques. 15. Ought not our preachers, if possible, to speak to every person one by one, in the families where they lodge, before prayer, if time will permit; or give a family exhortation after reading a chapter?

Ans.: They ought.

Ques. 16. Ought not this Conference to require those traveling preachers who hold slaves to give promises to set them free?

Ans.: Yes.

Ques. 17. Does this Conference acknowledge that slavery is contrary to the laws of God, man, and nature, and hurtful to society, contrary to the dictates of conscience and pure religion, and doing that which we would not others should do to us and ours? Do we pass our disapprobation on all our friends who keep slaves, and advise their freedom?

Ans.: Yes.

Ques. 18. Shall we recommend our quarterly meetings to be held on Saturdays and Sundays when convenient?

Ans.: Agreed.

Ques. 19. Shall not the Friday following every quarter day be appointed as a day of fasting?

Ans.: Yes.

Ques. 20. Does this whole Conference disapprove the step our brethren have taken in Virginia?

Ans.: Yes.

Ques. 21. Do we look upon them no longer as Methodists in connexion with Mr. Wesley and us till they come back?*

Ans.: Agreed.

Ques. 22. Shall Bro. Asbury, Garrettson and Waters attend the Virginia Conference, and inform them of our proceedings in this, and receive their answer?

Ans.: Yes.

Ques. 23. Do we disapprove of the practice of distilling grain into liquor? Shall we disown our friends who will not renounce the practice?

Ans.: Yes.

Ques. 24. What shall the Conference do in case of Bro. Asbury's death or absence?

Ans.: Meet once a year, and act according to the Minutes.

Ques. 25. Ought not the assistant to meet the colored people himself, and appoint as helpers in his absence proper white persons, and not suffer them to stay late and meet by themselves?

Ans.: Yes.

Ques. 26. What must be the conditions of our union with our Virginia brethren?

Ans.: To suspend all their administrations for one year, and all meet together in Baltimore.

Ques. 27. How are the preachers stationed in Virginia?

Ans.:
Fluvanna, William Moore, Greenberry Green.
Hanover, Isham Tatum, Charles Hopkins.
Amelia, Philip Adams, Nelson Reed.
Sussex, Lee Roy Cole, Edward Pride, Samuel Watson.
Mecklenburg, Henry Willis, Moses Park.
Pittsylvania, Richard Ivy, Carter Cole, William Partridge.
Yodkin, Andrew Yeargan.
New Hope, Francis Poythress, John Major.
Tar River, James O'Kelley.
Roan Oak, John Dickins, Henry Ogburn.

Ques. 28. What numbers are there in society?

Ans.: New Jersey, 196; Philadelphia, 90; Chester, 100; Delaware, 150; Sussex, 260; Kent, 725; Baltimore, 880; Frederick, 524; Fairfax, 361; Berkley, 205; Hanover, 351; Fluvanna, 342; Amelia, 506; Sussex, 620; Brunswick, 454; Mecklenburg, 455; Pittsylvania, 634; Yodkin, 21; New Hope, 455; Tar River, 455; Roan Oak, 480. Total, 8,264. Preachers, 42.

* This refers to a partial separation which took place in Virginia, on account of the ordinances.

From the Work.

PROVIDENCE CAMP MEETING.

MR. EDITOR: The annual camp meeting commenced on Thursday, August 22, and continued until the following Wednesday morning, with a large attendance of people from the surrounding country, as well as quite a number of visitors from a distance. The ministerial supply, although few in numbers, was efficient in service. Our pastor, Bro. Henry Lewis, a young man on his first work, conducted the meeting like a veteran. He was assisted by Bros. Singleton, Burton, Brown, Ferguson, Thompson, Mellard, Stephens and Woodward—all young preachers with the exception of the first-named, all of whom preached with the power of the Holy Spirit. I have been a visitor at these camp meetings at Providence for the last ten years, and I never saw a better meeting than they had this year. As a result, as near as can be ascertained, about sixty were converted, twenty united themselves with the church, and many backsliders were reclaimed, and the church greatly revived and strengthened. A class meeting and a prayer meeting were organized the following Sunday at Providence—another result of this meeting. The singing was excellent, and seemed to give life and vigor to the services. In a word, the meeting was a grand success, for which we give God all the praise.

FAITCHE.

NEWTON CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: Newton is an important and highly prosperous town on the V. and M. R. R.; doing a larger business and shipping more cotton than any point on the road between Vicksburg and Meridian, except Jackson. Our church here is in good condition, and well organized for work, especially for the growth and development of its young members. We have a general prayer meeting, young men's prayer meeting, and one for ladies, lately organized, which we verily believe is going to be a power for good, especially among our young members. Two or three young ladies have already consented to lead whenever called upon, and nearly all our young men will lead in the gentlemen's prayer meeting. Oh, what a beautiful thing is youthful piety! We have both a Sunday-school and woman's missionary society and a ladies' aid society. As to our Sunday-school, I don't know of a better one. The superintendent, Bro. T. H. Selby, is a wide-awake, aggressive man, who keeps pace with all the latest and best methods of conducting a school, and he is assisted by a corps of competent Christian teachers. We have considerably over one hundred on the roll, with a good average attendance. Our church and parsonage are in good condition, the latter having been refurnished this year, so that it is now one of the most comfortable preacher's homes in the Conference. Then we live among a people than whom there are no better to be found anywhere. All over the work, wherever I have visited, I have found the same kind, attentive, appreciative people. Happy the preacher whose lot is cast among them! That venerable man of God, Rev. D. W. Dilliehay, resides here. He and his saintly wife are tenderly beloved, and their godly lives are a constant benediction. They have won many a hard-fought battle and are calmly waiting for the Master's plaudit, "Servants of God, well done!" Decatur, Hickory and Garlandsville are in good condition, spiritually. At Decatur a meeting was recently held by the pastor, assisted by Rev. J. M. Tucker, of Fannin, resulting in eighteen accessions to the church and a number of conversions. At Garlandsville they have a young men's prayer meeting, which is a great power for good. Up to date there have been fifty accessions to the church (on the work), with two more meetings to be held.

MRS. J. S. PARKER.

DOTS FROM OKOLONA, MISSISSIPPI.

MR. EDITOR: Our third quarterly meeting was a week-day call from our ever-faithful presiding elder, Bro. Amos Kendall. He was accompanied by his excellent helpmeet, Sister Kendall. Preaching on Thursday night, July 4, and Quarterly Conference on Friday morning. Bro. Kendall is held in great esteem among the churches and by the preachers of his district. Beginning on Saturday night, July 6, we had protracted services, conducted by "Major Blanton," of Nashville, Tenn. He is an evangelist of earnest, consecrated spirit and a local preacher of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. His preaching in close, practical, and largely addressed to the church. Believers were quickened; three added to the church on profession, and three children baptized. Bishop Galloway gave us a call in the midst of the meeting, preached, and received subscriptions to the Methodist college in Mississippi, amounting to over $600. We observed the week of prayer, as requested by the Board of Missions, beginning the first Sunday in August. Dr. Edwards, writing for the Richmond Advocate, says August is not the best time for holding the week of prayer. This pastor agrees with him. Our collections for the week amounted to $38 30. The fourth quarterly meeting for Okolona embraces September 28 and 29, next Saturday and Sunday. We hope for a time of spiritual refreshing. You may put down Mrs. T. C. Wier and the writer for an additional ten dollars to your list of subscribers for the Japan missionary. I like your plan of an ADVOCATE missionary. What is to hinder each member of the Advocate family from sending out one missionary every year?

T. C. WIER.

CENTERVILLE CIRCUIT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: The Lord is still blessing our people here. I commenced a meeting at Gray's Schoolhouse, which lasted six days and several nights, resulting in the conversion of about twenty-five persons and forty-four accessions to the church, and eleven children baptized. I was assisted in the meeting by Revs. Wilson Moore, W. R. Whatley, J. J. Masters and J. J. Arnold. It is generally conceded to be the banner meeting of the year on the work. I suppose there were, perhaps, a dozen who were the heads of families came and gave me their hands, signifying thereby their intention to erect family altars; also some sisters expressed their intention to carry this resolution into execution in the absence of their husbands. A number of the leading citizens of the country, together with their families, help compose this number. I received, before leaving, an order for one dozen Disciplines and one dozen new hymn books. After closing this meeting, I left for French Fork and Little River in company with Revs. Moore and Whatley. Held a most interesting meeting on Little River at Young's, resulting in seven accessions and three children baptized, and meeting a host of kind, hospitable people. Returned to the hills to begin a meeting to-night at White Rock. I have been greatly encouraged at reading the reports of the brethren of their noble meetings. Truly it can be said that "salvation's rolling on." I have received one hundred and thirty-nine into the church this year, and rejoice to sing, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

J. J. KELLY.

EAST FELICIANA CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: I will write briefly of Clear Creek and Gilead. At both of these churches we have had grand and glorious revivals. At Clear Creek I had with me Bro. J. M. Whitehead, of Alabama, and Bros. J. A. B. Jones and G. D. Anders. The preaching was with the Spirit and in power from first to last. The waters were stirred mightily and sinners came flocking home to God. There were thirteen accessions, many conversions, and some of them as bright as I have ever seen. One old gentleman, seventy-five years old, was converted, joined the church and prayed in public before the meeting closed. He had been a life-long soldier in the service of Satan. At Gilead I had to assist me Bros. J. M. Whitehead, N. B. Young and J. R. Whittington. By these brethren the gospel was earnestly, fearlessly and faithfully preached. The church was greatly blessed, saints revived and sinners regenerated. The accessions were twenty-four; conversions not perfectly known, but considerable, and two infants baptized. One remarkable feature of this series of meetings is the number of middle-aged and old people who have surrendered to King Immanuel and become soldiers of the cross. We have established young men's prayer meetings at some of the churches, and two ladies' prayer meetings. The churches are alive and all ablaze with heavenly zeal.

N. J. ROBERTS.

SALINE MISSION, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: Our first protracted meeting began at Mill Creek Church, August 2, and ended August 10. There were thirty-nine added to the church. Some of the hardest sinners in this country were converted to Christ. The church was made alive to God. Bro. Burkett is our pastor, and Bro. Martin, of Ringold, assisted him. We had a glorious meeting at Antioch. There never was known such a revival on this mission. We live in the dark corner of this district; but, thank God! he finds his way to us here: his Spirit is falling here and there. There was thirty-one added to Christ at Antioch. God is blessing us here; there is a good work going on all over this mission. There has been seventy-two added to this work this year. Mr. Editor, if we can get our pastor next year, I think there will be a good work for him, for God is blessing his work and the people like him. The people are working for the Master.

J. R. WATTS.

FANNIN CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: Our protracted meeting at Union Church commenced September 6, and closed September 11. We spent much of the time in earnest prayer to God for his convicting, regenerating and refreshing power and peace, which came in due time. At the eleven-o'clock service, on Sunday, the Lord came in power and baptized his children with the Holy Ghost. As for myself, I was happier than for years past; which happy state continued during the entire series of meetings. There were eighteen accessions to our church—four by certificate, two from the Baptist Church, and twelve from the world; several regenerations, and the membership very much revived. Thanks to Bro. D. G. W. Ellis, of Madison, for his efficient service, and to God be all the praise.

Yours in Christ,

J. W. TUCKER, P. C.

A Century Ago.

One hundred years ago educated men could not be induced to become missionaries, the work was too forbidding; now we have 7,000 missionaries, nearly one-third of whom are women; also 35,000 native agents, 3,000 of whom are ordained.

One hundred years ago the world was rated at 731,000,000 population, of whom 174,000,000 were Christians; now the population has doubled and the Christians trebled.

One hundred years ago the church was asleep on mission work, and the governments and nations opposed missions; now, with little exception, all welcome them.

One hundred years ago English-speaking people had not one mission society; now they have 150.

Books and Periodicals.

BOOKS.

THE HANSA TOWNS. By Helen Zimmern. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. Eyrich, New Orleans. Price, $1 50.

This is a very readable history of the rise and extension of the Hanseatic League, which for several centuries during the middle ages governed nearly all the commerce of Northern Europe. And as that League sowed the seeds of principles upon which our modern civilization is largely founded, and with which we are so familiar, it is an interesting study to retrace the line of growth back to its beginning and see how the development was made. The real cause for the origin of the League seems to have been the dangers incident to travel and transportation, and the necessity for a union among those engaged in commerce, especially when they had to winter in a foreign land. But the book will tell you all about it.

CHRISTIAN THEISM: ITS CLAIMS AND SANCTIONS. By D. D. Pormton LL. D., Vice-president and Professor of Metaphysics in West Virginia University. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. Eyrich, New Orleans. Price, $1 75.

The author has taken this complicated subject to pieces, as a mechanic would take to pieces a machine, and shown the character of each part and its relation to the whole. The arguments have been correlated, and each stands in its proper place, with the elements of each carefully distinguished and seperately set out and considered. He constructs a progressive argument, which seems to be logical in its methods and correct in its conclusions. He endeavors to clear the subject from obscurities and difficulties and to present it in so simple a manner as to commend it to the general reader. He is devout and reverential throughout, and evidently believes the Scriptures as well as the conclusions of his own arguments.

MONOPOLIES AND THE PEOPLE. By Charles Whiting Baker, C. E., Associate Editor of The Engineering News. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. Eyrich, New Orleans. Price, $1 25.

The author has given a very interesting discussion of a subject that is in everybody's mind and on everybody's tongue. Monopolies of all sorts are treated of, such as mineral wealth, transportation, municipal, trade, governmental, labor, etc. This forms the first part of the book. The second part discusses all questions in regard to monopolies, such as their cause, growth, prospects, evils and remedies. Wherever possible the author has presented statistics bearing on the question at issue. The last chapter discusses plans for the control of monopolies. The whole subject seems to be pretty thoroughly investigated and set forth by one who has apparently good qualifications for such a work.

THE GOSPEL OF COMMON SENSE, as Contained in the Canonical Epistle of James. By Charles F. Deems, D. D., LL.D., Wilbur H. Ketcham, 13 Cooper Union, New York. Price, $1 50.

In his preface Dr. Deems says: "All the discussions in this volume were loosened out and inflamed for the pulpit and delivered in a series of discourses in the Church of the Strangers, in the spring of 1888." Dr. Deems has endeavored to expound the Epistle in such a way that it may be adapted to men's surroundings at the present time. What men want is a practical exposition of gospel principles, suited to the times, and this book comes in good time for the supply of that want. If the church would study James more, she would be better off. We regard this as a "timely book."

PERIODICALS.

—ST. NICHOLAS, for the current month, holds its high place in being one of the chief purveyors to the intellectual enjoyment of the young people. To substantiate this statement we need only mention as contributors to this number the names of Noah Brooks, Joel Chandler Harris, Celia Thaxter, Margaret Johnson, Harriet Spofford, Eleanor Putnam, besides quite a number of lesser lights. The magazine is chock full of good things which will, we fear, keep many a youngster too much from his school studies. Century Company, New York. Price, $3.

—POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY has a full table of contents. Pensions, phrenology, evolution, Anthropology, Bronze Age, Digestion, The Chemist, Family Names, are all discussed by various competent writers. D. Appleton & Company, New York. Price, $5.

—HARPER'S MAGAZINE, for this month, holds its high place among the great monthlies. Prof. Blaikie contributes a delightful paper on A Corner of Scotland Worth Knowing; Edward Bellamy writes a sketch entitled, With Both Eyes Shut; Fred Somers describes the Forests of the California Coast Range; Butternegs, A Story of Heredity, is by Annie Slosson. There are other papers of value. Harper & Brothers, New York. Price, $4.

—THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST, for October, is good to "the use of edifying" all farmers and stock raisers and gardeners and fruit growers. It is published at 751 Broadway, New York, for $1 50 a year.

—THE GOSPEL IN ALL LANDS, for October, devotes the principal part of its contents to Korea. There are several other articles on interesting topics. Missionary Society of Methodist Episcopal Church, 805 Broadway, New York. Price, $1 50.

—THE TREASURY FOR PASTOR AND PEOPLE. The October number is good; John Stuart, John Henry Barrows, John A. Broadus, D. L. Moody, Sir William Dawson being among the contributors. E. B. Trent, 5 Cooper Union, New York. Price, $2 50; clergymen, $2.

Vespasian, the Roman emperor, throughout his life, used to call himself to account every night for his actions of the past day, and as often as he found he had passed any one day without doing some good, he entered in his diary this memorandum: "Diem perdidi"—"I have lost a day."

Fourth Quarter—Studies in Jewish History.

LESSON III.—October 20.

David's Thanksgiving Prayer.

It. Samuel vii, 18 29.

GOLDEN TEXT.—In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you.—1. Thess. v, 18.

TIME.—Probably B. C. 1042.

PLACE.—Jerusalem.

PARALLEL PASSAGE.—I. Chron. xvii.

18. Then went King David in ... before the Lord—Indicate the powerful impression that Nathan's communication made on David's soul; the divine revelation received compels him to betake himself to the sanctuary. Sat—In the sanctuary erected on Zion, and remained before Jehovah. Not "sat," for the custom of sitting before the Lord in the sanctuary, as the posture assumed in prayer can not be deduced from Exodus xvii, 12, where Moses is compelled to sit from simple exhaustion. It does not necessarily follow that the prayer was uttered sitting. David may have sat down to meditate, and then rose up to pray. Who am I, O Lord God—David acknowledged himself to be unworthy of the great mercy which the Lord had displayed toward him, that he might give the glory to God alone.

19. For a great while to come—Reference to the forever of verses 13 and 16. This the manner of man—The meaning of these words, which have been differently interpreted, can not, with the context immediately preceding it, be any other than the following: This—namely, the love and condescension manifested in thy treatment of thy servant—is the law which applies to man, or is conformed to the law which men are to observe toward men—that is, to the law, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Taking the English version of I. Chronicles xvii, 17, as substantially correct, our passage may thus be understood: But this is the law (or prerogative) of a great man, to found dynasties which are to last into the far future. David expresses his astonishment that he, of such humble birth, and one so little in his own eyes, should not only be raised to the throne, but be assured of the perpetuity of the succession in his descendants, as if he were a man of high degree.

20. What can David say more—Instead of expressing his gratitude still further in many words, David appeals to the omniscience of God.

21. For thy word's sake—That is, because thou hast chosen and called me to be king of Israel. According to this point of view the word is, perhaps, that word of choice and destination given in I. Samuel xvi, 12 ("The Lord said, Arise, anoint him, for this is he"). An allusion to the earlier promises of God, or the Messianic prophecies generally, particularly the one concerning Judah in Jacob's blessing (Genesis xlix, 10), and the one relating to the ruler out of Jacob in Balaam's sayings (Numbers xxiv, 17), which contains the germs of the promise of the everlasting continuance of David's government.

23. To do for you—For you refers to Israel. In the rapt earnestness and enthusiasm of his prayer David seems in heart to have all Israel before him, and addresses them unconsciously, as with an orator's directness. Thy land—The connection of "terrible things" with "to thy land" shows that David had in mind, when speaking of the acts of divine omnipotence which had inspired fear and dread of the majesty of God, not only the miracles of God in Egypt, but also the marvelous extermination of the Canaanites, whereby Israel had been established in the possession of the promised land, and the people of God placed in a condition to found a kingdom.

25. His house—First, Solomon, who recognizes the fulfillment of this promise in his elevation to the throne; the line of David's descendants, who succeeded him on the throne of Judah; and, finally, Christ, in whom the prophecy reaches its highest fulfillment. For ever—Of all the words of promise that fell on David's ears these were the most charming. They find repeated utterance in his prayer, often in the Psalms, and even echo in the angel's word of salutation to the mother of our Lord. By them we see that this message of Nathan to David was largely a Messianic prophecy. The words for ever show very distinctly that this prophecy looks beyond the succession of the kings of Judah of the house of David, and embraces the throne of the Christ, according to the angel's interpretation as given in Luke i, 31-33, where the reference to this passage can not be mistaken.

26. The house of thy servant ... established—This expression of definite expectation, by reason of its boldness, needs basing on a sure foundation, as is done in verse 27.

27. Hast revealed—Hebrew, uncovered the ear. Therefore hath ... found in his heart—That is, hath found joy in doing so. The promises of God are the true guide to the prayers of his people. We may dare to ask anything, how great soever it may be, which God has promised to give.

29. Let it please thee—Let the reader here observe that though the divine promise to David and his seed was unconditional, and sure as the pledge of God could make it (verses 15, 16), the pious monarch still prays for its fulfillment.

Every reader of this paper will have noticed what has been said weekly about Shallenberger's Antidote for Malaria. No statement has ever been made which is not strictly true and more than substantiated by experience. No testimonial has ever been published which is not genuine, and the original of which is not in our possession. If you are the victim of Malaria, don't trifle with Quinine, but get the Antidote and enjoy health. If your druggist don't keep it, send one dollar to Dr. A. T. Shallenberger, Rochester, Penna., and get it by mail.

Missionary.

The Indians of Mississippi.

Very little has been said concerning the Indians within our Conference—in fact, nothing except what Bro. J. A. Vance said during its last session at Jackson, and what Bro. A. D. Miller has said and written since its last session at Vicksburg. As for myself, I must confess that until recently I have not thought much about them, one way or another. We are recognized as a missionary people and as a missionary church, and as such, indeed, we are in duty bound to take cognizance of the poor Indians among us. It is quite sad to know that we have for years been allowing them to perish right at our doors, without giving them an iota of spiritual help! Surely the blood of the dead cries out against us; and what are we to do? Why, the only alternative for us is to confess heartily our neglect to God and begin at once to do our utmost, by his grace, to save those who are alive. They are few in numbers, comparatively speaking; but when we cast in mind the worth of an immortal soul, we are constrained to confess that they are worth all the efforts essential in their salvation.

In order to do our whole duty toward them immediately, we must collect the necessary amount of money for the support of a missionary, that Bishop Galloway, or some one of the Bishops, may procure the services of one without delay. Everyone who wishes to help in this matter, let him send his name and amount to Bro. A. D. Miller, at Cato, Miss.

ISAAC L. PEEBLES.

NOTES.

MISSIONS.—Says the Journal of Commerce: "Setting all religious questions aside, the civilizing power of the missions; the revolutions which have been subsequent on their work; the colonization, of which they were the pioneers; the growing empires, founded on European and American civilization, of which they laid the foundations; the enlightening influences which have spread among barbarous nations from their points of labor—all these command the profound respect of all men of sense. The one great fact, that the spread of the power of the English as the language of commerce and advancing civilization receives an assured impetus from missions of English-speaking people, makes these missions of paramount importance to the spread of British and American commerce.

"Bombay," writes a missionary, "is a perpetual wonderland. Whence came the 800,000 inhabitants? Last week a Greenlander called, seeking work. Two days after a man from Australia wrote me, asking a favor. A few weeks ago a West Indian came to attend to repairs on my house. Last Sunday night I preached to a congregation in which sat, side by side, a Russian from the Baltic and an Armenian from the foot of Mount Ararat. Among my parishioners is an Abyssinian, Turks from the Dardanelles, Greeks from the Adriatic and Sedhee boys from Zanzibar. Norwegians and South Africans live, do business, and die in this human hive. Is it not a wonderland? God is working in this city. I found the Greenlander trusted him; the Abyssinian wept as he talked of him; and the Sedhee boy from Zanzibar needed him."

Dr. A. T. Pierson makes the following suggestive and helpful remarks as to the missionary's work:

"The work of the missions has, as its central encouragement and inspiration, the promise of a supernatural presence and power. 'Lo, I am with thee alway, even unto the end of the age,' means nothing if it does not mean that in a special sense, an exceptional manner, the omnipresent One will accompany the march of the missionary band."

The demand for the Arabic Bible is reported so great that, although the printing presses at Beirut are working day and night, pace can not be kept with the orders.

The Power of Christianity.

It is remarkable, memorable that the gospel of Christ has larger and wider hold in this country now, proportionately to the population, than it had a hundred years ago; in spite of the fact that we began with a distinctly skeptical tone in our most distinguished public men; that we have been engaged in wide and eager political discussion, from the first hour to the present; that we have had an enormous material work to do; that there has been this immense accumulation of wealth and of all means of pleasure in the country; that we have had the civil war to carry through to its conclusion; that we have been receiving multitudinous populations from all the earth, heathen and Christian, piling themselves upon us until they have seemed to overshadow and practically overwhelm the original germ of the English, Dutch, German and Swedish population here. It is, indeed, a remarkable result. It shows that the gospel of Christ is the mightiest moral force on the face of the earth. Men may not accept it. They may say: "Oh, it is the religion of the man in the pulpit. He believes it, perhaps; at any rate, he teaches it; but it is nothing to us." Fugitive paragraphs may rage or rattle with sceptical sneers at it. Men of the world may say, "I don't believe it all, and, therefore, I don't go to church or care anything about it." But no man can read the philosophy of the history of this country in the last hundred years without admitting that here, in the gospel, as here pronounced, is the mightiest moral force which exists on the earth. You may call it a fancy, or a fiction, or a fable, if you choose; no matter. It is the grandest force that has ever yet appealed to an aspiring, intelligent, energetic and courageous people; and the demonstration of it is in the history of this 100 years.—Rev. Dr. R. S. Storrs.

Temperance.

Six "joint keepers," of Dodge City, Kansas, were lately sentenced to thirty days in the county jail and a fine of $100 each for violating the prohibitory law.

Mrs. J. C. Batchum says that the rope which threatens to strangle our nation has three strands—the saloon, impurity and Sabbath desecration.

Alcohol is not only a poison with special local affinity for the brain, but it is a poison with a fishhook barb. It can only go in, it can not be pulled out without tearing the flesh.—Joseph Cook.

If prohibition, as law, never closed a saloon, prohibition as a moral principle must yet challenge the loyalty of the individual and the State. I am not called upon to work the Ten Commandments. They are prohibitory laws and they do not prohibit, but I am not called upon to replace them by some softer scheme that will work.—Rev. J. H. Ecob, D. D.
